with no specific membership.

Morrissey said Monday night he has several suggestions for amendments, including having three members of a seven-member board be appointed by tenants at Squantum Gardens.

Sheets said he spoke with Morrissey about the matter last week and has not yet decided what to do about the petition. He noted that he wants to discuss the senator's concerns with City Solicitor Stephen McGrath before making a decision.

The mayor said the current petition could be amended or a new petition could be drafted. He stressed however, the project can go forward without a home-rule petition.

The city has been designated the local redevelopment authority for Squantum Gardens. As such, it will choose the plan that is implemented at the site, the mayor noted.

Sheets said following public hearings in each of the city's wards, the city will make its choice. Other than the Council on Aging's plan, the only major proposal is a similar one by Winn Management of Boston.

Scheduled hearings, all to be held at 7 p.m., include: Nov. 19, Fore River Club House, 16 Nevada Rd.; Nov. 20, Ward 4 Community Center, 100 Brooks Ave.; Nov. 25, Work Inc., 3 Arlington St.; Dec. 3, Adams Shore Library, 519 Sea St.; Dec. 4, Beechwood Knoll School, 225 Fenno St.; Dec. 11, Beechwood on the Bay, 440 East Squantum St.

Other Historic Items May Have Been Taken In Presidential Library Break

FBI Heads Probe Into Theft Of Three Adams Bibles, Book

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The theft of three Bibles and a rare book, all considered priceless and belonging to President John Quincy Adams, is under investigation by the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the National Park Service and the Quincy Police Department.

Meanwhile, Marianne Peak, Adams Site superintendent is asking anyone who saw anything suspicious at the time of the theft to report it immediately and Mayor James Sheets is urging the thief or thieves to return the books and turn themselves in to authorities.

The police department is working with the FBI and the Park Service to investigate the break-in at the Adams Library, also known as the Stone Library, at 135 Adams St. At press time, there were no suspects.

The FBI and Park Service are involved because the site is a national historic property.

Peak said among the items stolen were a Bible given to John Quincy Adams by the Mendi Indian tribe in 1842, a 1772 Bible, a 1521 Bible and a rare 1785 book containing hand-painted illustrations of fish.

Peak said she could not estimate the market value of the four books.

"They're irreplaceable," she said. "And I've spoken with rare book experts who have said the thieves will have a hard time trying to sell them."

Peak also noted that because of federal regulations, the books are not insured.

She added that a complete inventory of the library will continue in order to determine if anything else was stolen.

Sheets said he was deeply troubled by the crime and sent a message to those responsible.

"I want the persons responsible to fully understand that they're robbing history," he said. "I hope they find a way to return them. These are items that simply cannot be replaced.

"I would hope that whoever committed this theft would, out of a sense of obligation to the country

Veterans Day Speaker:

U.S. Must Keep Strong Role In World Affairs

The United States must work to maintain a strong military and keep an active role in world affairs, Capt. Robert Duetsch, commanding officer of the South Weymouth Naval Air Station said during the city's Veterans Day ceremonies Monday.

Duetsch, a native of Brooklyn, N.Y., served as guest speaker during the ceremonies at the Adams Academy on Adams Street. A native of Brooklyn, N.Y., he received a commission as an Ensign in the U.S. Naval Reserve in November 1971. Designated a Naval Flight Officer in May 1972, he has been commander of the air station since January 1995.

Duetsch said although any war is a tragedy, the threat of war makes it necessary to keep the country's armed forces strong.

"Though we would prefer not to fight, someone or some country again and again tries to threaten our national interests or our freedom," he said. "It was once written that no word has ever been spoken that has held out greater hopes, demanded greater sacrifice, or needed more to be nurtured, than freedom. This nation has paid dearly for our freedom, but our payments are not finished.

CAPT. ROBERT DUETSCH
'We must remain vigilant'

"We must remain vigilant, keep a strong, responsive military and continue to be engaged in our world. A world that is unsettled and volcanic."

Duetsch added that the freedom which is commonplace in the United States would not have been possible without the courageous actions of its veterans, both living and dead.

"Today we commemorate these veterans and say 'thank you' for a job well done. Every veteran helped, whether in war or peace, to secure our freedom and preserve this nation's unique form of government and ideals. To each and every veteran I say, thank you."

Mayor James Sheets spoke briefly at the event, bringing greetings from the city. He said democracy has

City To Receive $11,500 Fire Education Grant

The city will receive an $11,500 Student Awareness Fire Education (SAFE) grant for Fiscal Year 1997.

The announcement was made recently by State Sen. Michael Morrissey and Reps. Michael Bellotti, Ronald Mariano and Stephen Tobin.

SAFE grants are awarded directly to the city.

"The awards process this year has been very competitive with 176 communities participating, a 36 percent increase from last year," said Mariano. The Executive Office of Public Safety is responsible for administering these grants, he added.

The SAFE Advisory Board judged the award amounts on two factors.

"The first is a competitive component, with the highest score," said Bellotti. "The second is a base component which seeds the program on a broader scale," added Tobin.

The process guarantees all participants will receive funding, while those with successful programs are rewarded with more money.

"The Legislature allocated $1,078,666 and in the Fiscal Year 1997 budget for SAFE grants," noted Morrissey.

The delegation members said the program effectively teaches young children fire safety and awareness techniques, and thanked the Quincy Fire Department for working hard to promote public safety and earn the grant.

Number Of City Council Committees Reduced By 10

City Council President Peter Kolson announces the list of council committees effective Jan. 1, 1997.

There are now 14 committees instead of 24.

The list includes three committees "of the whole," or those including all nine councillors as well as seven committees with five members and four committees with three members.

Committees of the whole include:

Finance Committee, headed up by Councillor Michael Cheney, chairman and Councillor Timothy Cahill, vice chairman; Ordinance Committee, Ward 5 Councillor Stephen Durkin, chairman and Councillor Paul Harold, vice chairman; Oversight Committee, Harold, chairman and Cahill, vice chairman.

Five-member committees include:

Public Works Committee, Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers, chairman and Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi, vice chairman with Ward 4 Councillor Michael D'Amico, Ward 3 Councillor Patrick McDermott and Harold; Hospital Committee, Harold, chairman and McDermott, vice chairman with Cheney, D'Amico and Durkin; Park and Recreation Committee, McDermott, chairman and D'Amico, vice chairman with Ayers, Durkin and Harold; Public Safety Committee, Raymondi, chairman and Durkin, vice chairman with Ayers, Cheney and Harold; Rules Committee, D'Amico, chairman and McDermott, vice chairman with Cheney, Durkin and Harold; Senior Citizens Committee, Raymondi, chairman and Ayers, vice chairman with Cheney, McDermott, and Durkin; Education Committee, D'Amico, chairman and Durkin, vice chairman with Harold, McDermott and Raymondi.

Three-member committees include the Downtown Committee, McDermott, chairman and Cahill, vice chairman with Durkin; Handicapped Committee, Ayers, chairman and Cheney, vice chairman with D'Amico; Veterans Services Committee, Harold, chairman and Cheney, vice chairman with Durkin; Library Committee, Harold, Chairman and Cahill, vice chairman with Cheney.

The council agreed earlier this year to reduce the number of committees to 14 at the suggestion of Raymondi, who said he wants to streamline the committee lineup in order to make it work more efficiently. Raymondi noted that the duties of some of the eliminated committees will be included in those that still exist, while other former committees were eliminated altogether.

Patriot, Crackerjack, And Champion

Names Selected For Three Mounted Unit Horses

Patriot, Crackerjack and Champion will be the names of the three horses in the Quincy Police Department's new Mounted Patrol Unit that will be assigned to the streets of Quincy next week.

Elementary students in the city's public and parochial schools submitted names in a recent "Name That Horse" contest sponsored by the city and Quirk Auto Companies. Five thousand contest applications were distributed to the schools.

Winners of the contest were: Mary Dunner, a second grader at Sacred Heart School who suggested "Patriot" as the name for Officer Gerard Nichol's horse; Colleen Munkley, a third grader at the Bernazzani School who came up with the name of "Crackerjack" for Officer John Sullivan's horse and Ian Champion, who submitted the name "Champion" for Officer Bruce Tait's horse.

Winners have been invited to a press conference to be held Friday, Nov. 15 at 3:30 p.m. in front of City Hall and to participate in the city's annual Christmas Parade Sunday, Dec. 1.

The three winners were selected by a committee consisting of Kerry Driscoll, representing Mayor James Sheets; Lt. Normand Goyette, representing Police Chief Francis Mullen; Dr. Carol Lee Griffin, representing School Supt. Eugene Creedon; City Council President Peter Kolson, representing the council and Dan Quirk, representing his firm, Quirk Auto Companies.

For their efforts, the three students will receive bicycles from Quirk Auto.

A graduation ceremony for the Mounted Patrol Unit was held yesterday (Wednesday) in Boston and the unit is scheduled to begin its work Monday, Nov. 18. Sheets said it will work as part of the police department's Special Operations Unit which also includes 10 motorcycles, two mountain bicycles and three K-9 Unit dogs.

The mayor added that the horses, which recently were purchased from the Boston Police Department and will be kept at the Blue Hills Riding Academy in West Quincy, also will be on display at halftime of the North Quincy-Quincy football game on Thanksgiving Day at Veterans Memorial Stadium and during the Christmas Parade.

THAT (GULP!) BURNING FEELING

Heartburn may not be a serious health threat most of the time, but it can make a person feel seriously miserable. Also known as acid indigestion or, in technical terms, gastroesophageal reflux, heartburn occurs when stomach acids push their way back up through the esophagus. Symptoms may include a burning sensation behind the breastbone, nausea or bloated feelings, belching and a sore throat from the backflow. Heartburn is typically caused by fatty or spicy foods, overeating, drinking alcohol, smoking and exercising or lying down after a meal. Certain physical disorders may also allow it to occur. While heartburn is not usually a serious condition, severe cases may erode the esophagus, leading to bleeding and other difficulties. It can also be a signal of various other medical problems. Consult your doctor if heartburn is severe or seems to recur frequently.

P.S. As many as one-fourth of people who go to the emergency room thinking they are having a heart attack may actually have heartburn.

Sometimes this condition results from too much stress, and over the long term, dealing with the conditions that lead to the upset can be a fruitful strategy for healing. At COMPREHENSIVE MEDICAL CARE, located at 700 Congress St., in Quincy, we specialize in treating heart problems, hypertension and cholesterol. Call 472-2550; office hours by appointment. Cahill To Finish Council Term

Tim Cahill has decided to finish his city council term which should be good news for anyone interested in running for the seat in the 1997 city election.

CAHILL

Good news because it means it will be a wide open seat with no interim appointee sitting in it to claim a possible "candidate for re-election" status.

Cahill, who becomes Norfolk County treasurer in January after a big election win last week, says:

"I feel I owe it to the voters of Quincy who re-elected me to finish out the term. And, I still have a few things I would like to accomplish before I leave the council."

Cahill is in his fifth term in the council and will begin a six-year term as county treasurer in January.

Had Cahill decided not to complete his council term,

CHRETIEN

Larry Chretien, as runner-up in the 1995 election would have been the most eligible for appointment by council members to fill out the term. That has been the practice in recent years when a council vacancy has occurred.

But Chretien may--or may not--have taken it.

As Quincy coordinator for William Delahunt's successful run for the 10th Congressional District seat, Chretien may be in line for an appointment from Delahunt. Either in Washington or as head of a Delahunt Quincy or Brockton office.

Meanwhile there are eyes on the Cahill council seat for the 1997 campaign. Giving it a look are former Mayor Frank McCauley and former Ward 4 Councillor Tom Fabrizio. Chretien is also a potential candidate depending on his situation with Delahunt.

McCAULEY

FABRIZIO

Ordinarily ward councillors are always interested when an at-large seat opens up. But discretion is the better part of flavor even in politics and they may not want to gamble a sure ward seat against a maybe at-large seat with McCauley in the picture.

Last year McCauley jumped in as a candidate for the two-year School Committee term. And scared off other contenders, taking the seat unopposed.

He may have the same strategy in mind for Cahill's council seat by letting everyone know early that he is interested in running.

McCauley, incidentally, will be retiring as director of the Massachusetts Retirement Board at the end of this year. It will give him plenty of time to campaign for the Cahill seat and to serve if elected.

If he does run for the council, that would open up a seat on the school committee.

City Council President Peter Kolson was interested in a possible run a few months ago but says he will seek re-election to his Ward 1 seat.

KOLSON

"I like being Ward 1 councillor, and I can do as much as a ward councillor as I could do as an at-large councillor."

And, he adds:

"If I decide to make a move it is more apt to be for mayor. I would be more interested in that."

But not, he hastens to add, against Jim Sheets.

SPEAKING OF KOLSON, he has raised the funds for a "Welcome To Houghs Neck" sign.

The sign, which will cost about $1,500, will be a stand-alone to be erected on Sea St. near Babcock St. in the Willows section.

And a nice part about it is that the kids in the area will have a say in what it will look like.

The Houghs Neck Community Council is sponsoring a drawing contest from which the sign will be designed.

Students kindergarten through grade 12 and living in Houghs Neck are eligible to take part.

The drawings must be based on Houghs Neck's history and drawn on 8 1/2 by 11 sheet of paper. Deadline for submitting entries is 5 p.m., Nov. 29 at the Houghs Neck Community Center.

Prizes will be a $100, $75 and $50 savings bonds for first, second and third place winners. Winners will be announced at the Christmas Tree Lighting Dec. 8 at the Houghs Neck Fire Station.

Adams Shore has a sign which Kolson was involved in. And he wants to get one for Merrymount and Snug Harbor.

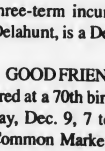
YOU MIGHT SAY Quincy is sending two Congressmen to Washington in January. William Delahunt, of course, who was elected to succeed Gerry Studds in the 10th Congressional seat.



DELAHUNT

And James Maloney, a Quincy native, who was elected in Connecticut's 6th District, unseating three-term incumbent Gary Franks. Maloney, like Delahunt, is a Democrat.

GOOD FRIEND Fr. William McCarthy will be honored at a 70th birthday party Monday, Dec. 9, 7 to 10 p.m., at the Common Market, 97 Willard St., which in a nice gesture is hosting the event.

McCARTHY

Donation is $20 with all proceeds going to Fr. Bill's Place, the homeless shelter named for him. Hors d'eouvres and wine will be served.

Those planning to attend are asked to call 376-2255 ahead which will help in making the arrangements.

Fr. McCarthy has served 20 years at St. John's Church, most of it as pastor. He is now senior priest in residence there and will mark the 45th anniversary of his ordination Jan. 10.

And he's as active as ever in the community helping those in need.

Sheets To Attend Navy Conference

Mayor James Sheets has been invited to travel to San Diego, Calif. next week to participate in a Navy Community Conference.

Sheets said he was invited to participate in the conference because of the city's plan to move senior citizens into the Squantum Gardens facility in Squantum which is currently owned by the Navy.

The city has planned the project since the closing of the South Weymouth Naval Air Station. All Naval personnel who lived at the Squantum site have been relocated since the station's closing was announced.

Sheets said he intends to discuss the matter with officials while in San Diego.

In addition, the mayor said he will participate in a series of workshops at the conference, although he could not provide further details.

The conference kicks off Monday, Nov. 18 and ends Thursday, Nov. 21.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1912 postcard view of a very serene Merrymount Park. Given to the City in 1888 by the second Charles Francis Adams, the 85-acre park was to be 'for the enjoyment of the inhabitants and for no other purpose.' However, some land has been use for special purposes, including roads. The scenic drive shown here is probably now the Southern Artery looking south with Vietnam Veterans Drive leading up to Pageant Field on the left. Despite the intrusions though, enough of the park remains in its natural state to give a good idea of what Quincy was like when it was first settled in 1625.

Naval Terrace Site Is Not Appropriate For Senior Housing

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

According to news stories published recently, there seems to be an apparent debate taking place over the future use of the military housing at Squantum Gardens and Naval Terrace now that the Pentagon is shutting down the South Weymouth Naval Air Station.

The City of Quincy's plan is to apparently rent all 117 units to Quincy elders. Mayor Jim Sheets believes there has been sufficient community input, but Sen. Mike Morrissey thinks there hasn't been enough. Also, there seems to be a disagreement over several options for running the city's proposed elderly housing plan. Right now, it appears there is a lack of unity between city and state officials which is hardly desirable at this time.

Personally, I do support elderly housing at Squantum Gardens and have voiced such support to individual members of the re-use committee. However, even the townhouses at Squantum Gardens reportedly will need to be rehabbed for the elderly since bathrooms, I've been told, are on the upper levels. I have also voiced my concern that the Naval Terrace units are ill-suited for the elderly and could be better be utilized as housing for young families seeking first-time homeownership.

I wonder if all those folks pushing the Naval Terrace housing units for the elderly even know where they are or what they look like? How many Quincy residents even know it is up there behind Squantum Gardens which can be easily viewed from Quincy Shore Drive? I've seen them. They are cracker-jack boxes winding their way around narrow trails. It is beautiful up there, but Naval Terrace is not appropriate for elderly housing.

I understand that politicians want to provide elders with housing. After all, the elderly vote in great numbers. But we do this segment of the population no favors by placing them in an inappropriate setting.

Mike Morrissey thinks the city is rushing too fast. The mayor thinks not. I agree with my state senator.

However, I still wish all of them would take another look at Naval Terrace and see how silly it would be to put elderly up there. At the same time, I also think Quincy should be doing more to both attract and keep families in this city and Naval Terrace might do the job. What is wrong with making the future of this military housing intergenerational?

The bottom line should be to make the best use of this 27-acre site. More time is needed. More study should be done. Morrissey is right: Slow down!

CAC Vote On Concourse East Link Wasn't Unanimous

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

This letter is in response to your front page article about the Quincy Center Concourse in the Oct. 31 issue of The Quincy Sun.

Since your article states that the east link was recently approved by the CAC, I wish to publicly state my vote as one member of the CAC, representing the Revere Rd. neighborhood, who did not vote in favor of either version of the east link.

The following statement was in a letter dated Oct. 9 to Chairman David Ezickson casting my vote since I was unable to attend that meeting due to illness (this was only the second meeting that I had missed in almost three years):

"I wish to express my vote in this letter regarding the two routes of the east link. I vote no, not in favor of the two-way Hession Plan for the following reasons. It takes the three two-family homes from six families, some of whom have lived there for over 30 years; it takes the eye doctor and the karate place and Bernie's parking area; it makes Mechanic St. on two levels; it has a dangerous sharp left turn on Mechanic St. and it puts traffic onto Elm St. near a church, a funeral home and children's playground as well as impacting small residential streets, and water and increased pollution to air and the Town Brook.

"I also vote no, not in favor, of the westbound preferential route for most of the same reasons including the taking of the three homes. In my opinion, it makes no sense to spend $5.6 million for a one-way street. I am also not in favor of eliminating the upper portion of Revere Rd. because it would impact the businesses there and would create a lack of police and fire access to the neighborhood.

"Neither route of the east link meets the original goals for a connection to the various shopping areas and to enhancing the character of the neighborhood."

It is also worth mentioning that the two-way option was passed by a vote of 4-2 with one abstaining. There was no consensus of the 10-member committee.

I would like the residents of the Revere Rd. and Mechanic St. area to know that this member of the CAC never voted for a plan that takes the three two-family houses on Mechanic St.

North Quincy Supermarket Opposed

Nov. 14 - 20

By PAUL HAROLD

City Councillor Frank MacDonald lead the fight against a proposed supermarket on the site of the so-called Pope property at Quincy Shore Drive and E. Squantum St.

"If that market is built, it is just a question of time until a liquor license will be sought for the store," he said. He supported a rezoning of the property from business to residence A.

The supermarket plan had widespread opposition in the section of Atlantic adjacent to the property. Among those expected to speak at the planning board hearing in support of the rezoning were Dennis Harrington, Atty. Joseph McDonough, former chairman of the rent control board, Mrs. Zeima Rogers and Walter Slater.

Attorney for the developer, Francis Ryan of Winchester, was newly elected Governor's Councillor Endicott "Chub" Peabody.

FIFTH CRUISER ON DAY SERVICE

Police Chief William Ferrazzi announced that a fifth cruiser would be put on service full time during the day, replacing the foot patrolman in Wollaston and Montclair.

As a result, he said that the efficiency of the other cruisers would be increased because their area of patrol would be decreased.

Joseph Belanger was assigned to the new cruiser, with the reassignment of Walter Buckley from the Montclair foot patrol.

RECOUNTS SCHEDULED

City Clerk Donald Crane said that recounts for the office of state representative would be scheduled this week.

Thomas Burke and Rep. Chester Nelson of Braintree (who represented parts of Quincy) both requested recounts following their unsuccessful bid for the state representative's post.

Burke lost by 220 votes to Rep. Carter Lee, while incumbent Rep. Nelson lost to George Thompson of Weymouth by 226 votes.

Burke was considering court action to force a recount in Wards 4, 5 and 6 because Crane ruled that recount petitions provided for a recount in Ward 3.

Fat Free Golden Apple Cake

At the request of our daughter Suzie, my recipe for plain golden cake got just a little bit plainer.

Instead of using the usual butter or margarine, she convinced me to use apple sauce instead. Since I was making an apple cake out of the original golden cake recipe, I saw no harm.

Instead of eggs, I used egg beaters and skim milk so the cake is completely fat free and pretty tasty too.

GOLDEN APPLE CAKE

2 1/4 cups flour
3 1/4 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
1 1/2 cups sugar
equivalent of two eggs
1/2 cup apple sauce
2/3 cup skim milk
1 teaspoon vanilla
3 apples (peeled and sliced)
1/2 teaspoon cinnamon

First, peel and slice the apples, add a smidgen of sugar and the cinnamon. Set aside.

Combine all of the dry ingredients with half the milk and the apple sauce. Beat until blended. Add the eggs equivalent, the rest of the milk and the vanilla. Beat for 2 minutes.

In a slightly greased 9 or 10 inch baking pan, place a layer of the cake mixture. Then place the apples and then top it with the rest of the mix.

Bake in a 350 degree oven for about 40 minutes or until done when toothpick is inserted and comes out clean. Cut when cooled.

For those who wish to make a regular cake, use real eggs, regular milk, butter or margarine and follow same directions.

Author Of Quincy History Book At Library Nov. 21

Writer Patricia Harrigan Browne of Milton will present a talk and book signing Thursday, Nov. 21 at 7:30 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy Center.

Browne is the author of a new book on the history of Quincy entitled "Quincy: A Past Carved in Stone." For every book sold, she will donate $5 to the library's building fund.

The book contains 200 photographs that show highlights of the city's past such as its heyday as a shipbuilding and quarrying community as well as the many businesses that had their start in Quincy, including Howard Johnson's, Grossman's and Zildjian.

"Quincy: A Past Carved in Stone" also includes lesser-known historical facts, including the city's aviation history in Squantum and that "Kilroy was here" was a real worker at the Fore River shipyard.

The Welch Healthcare & Retirement Group will celebrate the grand opening of Hancock Park, its $9 million assisted living, rehabilitation and nursing center today (Thursday) beginning at 4 p.m. at 164 Parkingway, Quincy Center.

Among those on hand will be Mayor James Sheets, state Sen. Michael Morrissey, Rep. Stephen Tobin and Ward 3 City Councillor Patrick McDermott.

The event will begin with a ribbon cutting ceremony and an opening program featuring comments by Welch Healthcare President Richard Welch and Vice President/Treasurer Paul Casale. Buffet, tours and entertainment will be provided from 5 to 8 p.m.

Hancock Park houses a 142-bed rehabilitation and nursing center, 40 assisted living apartments and an adult day health center offering a host of services to the area's seniors. There is also an indoor "Main Street" which features a cafe, convenience store and beauty salon as well as outdoor patios and a landscaped courtyard.

FORT SQUARE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH in Quincy will celebrate its 100th anniversary this Saturday and Sunday.

Fort Square Presbyterian To Celebrate Centennial

Fort Square United Presbyterian Church, 16 Pleasant St., Quincy, will celebrate its 100th anniversary this weekend.

On Saturday at 6:30 p.m., a centennial banquet will be held. Rev. Steve Brown of Keylife Ministries in Maitland, Fla., former minister of First Presbyterian Church in Quincy, will be the speaker. Mayor James Sheets and his wife Joann also will attend.

On Sunday at 11 a.m., an anniversary service will be held with Rev. Brown preaching. A coffee hour will follow.

The evening service at 6:30 p.m., featuring choir music directed by Martha Hayes, also will be followed by a coffee hour.

The church began as a 40-member congregation, mostly emigrants from Prince Edward Island, in Wilson's Hall on Hancock St. on July 28, 1896. In December 1897, Rev. W.W. Dornan, pastor and the growing church moved to the corner of Pleasant and School Sts., and much of the work of digging the cellar and foundation was done by the pastor and congregation members.

The church's membership reached 350 under the ministry of Rev. William Nicholl (1922-49), the longest pastorate in the church's history. He was succeeded by Rev. Walter J. Ralston, pastor emeritus, who served for 21 years.

From 1972-83, the church was led by Rev. Robert Duncan before he was succeeded by the current pastor, Rev. Richard Brondyke.

ASK YOUR LAWYER

by Kevin F. O'Donnell
ATTORNEY AT LAW

PAIN AND SUFFERING

After a determination of liability has been made in a personal injury case, the focus turns to whether damages have been caused as a result of the wrongful conduct. In personal injury law, damages are usually measured in terms of monetary compensation. However, the very nature of pain and suffering makes it very difficult to measure in a dollar amount. This broad concept includes both the physical pain associated with the injury, as well as the recovery for mental suffering associated with bodily disfigurement. On top of these elements is the loss of enjoyment in relation to life. For example, if the injured party were an avid jogger, any injury to the legs which hampered the ability to enjoy this outdoor recreation would be considered a loss of enjoyment for which he or she would be entitled to recover damages.

HINT: Compensatory damages represent an attempt to compensate the injured party for the actual harm he or she suffered, including medical expenses and lost earnings and impairment of earning capacity.

If your life-style has been altered as a result of an injury incurred, in addition to restoring physical health, there are intangible elements that are permanently affected that also need to be addressed. A good lawyer can let you know where you stand, and assist you in getting the compensation you deserve. Call 773-2880 for the guidance you need. My office is conveniently located at Gridley Bryant Office Condominiums, 111 Willard Street.

The proposal on the nursing home will go before the Zoning Board of Appeals Tuesday, Nov. 19 at 7:15 p.m. in the City Council Chambers at City Hall.

"I am holding the meeting to give area residents the opportunity to review the plans by the applicant before it goes to the Zoning Board of Appeals," said Ayers.

Library Trustees To Meet Nov. 18

The Board of Trustees of the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy Center, will meet Monday, Nov. 18 at 10 a.m. in the library's Art Gallery.

Joseph Finn Chairman AIDS Consortium

Joe Finn, executive director of Quincy Interfaith Sheltering Coalition, was elected chairman of the Quincy/South Shore AIDS Consortium at its recent first annual meeting at Quincy City Hall.

Julie Spadea, administrative assistant of Quincy Visiting Nurse Association, who became secretary/treasurer.

Attending the meeting were local providers, people who are HIV positive or have AIDS, and other citizens. Panelists discussed several issues surrounding HIV and AIDS, including primary care, treatment, case management, housing, and substance use.

Panelists included Dr. Jonathan Han, primary care physician at Manet Community Health Center; Dr. Calvin Cohen, research director at Community Research Initiative of New England; Kathy Kurtz, LISCW, HIV Service Coordinator for the South Shore; John Yazwinski, housing coordinator at Quincy Interfaith Sheltering Coalition; and Kathleen Burns, Habit Management coordinator at Bay State Community Services.

Sheriff's Office Wins National Awards

The Norfolk County Correctional Center in Dedham has won two nationally-acclaimed awards from the National Commission on Correctional Health Care (NCCHC) and the American Correctional Association (ACA).

The center has been named "Facility of the Year" for its exceptional work in inmate health care delivery by the NCCHC.

Acting Norfolk County Sheriff Josephine Shea of Quincy traveled to Nashville, Tenn. recently to accept the award at the NCCHC's annual Correctional Health Care Conference. Officials from the Dedham facility who accompanied her were Patrick Bradley of Braintree, assistant deputy for administration; Susan Clark, R.N., of Quincy, the center's health services director; Denise Burke, R.N., of Quincy; and Peter Peranchello of Cohasset, head of the human services division.

The Dedham facility was selected from over 4,000 correctional facilities nationwide.

The NCCHC has developed 68 "Standards for Health Services in Jails" in order to enable an increased efficiency of health services delivery, a greater organizational effectiveness, a better overall health protection for inmates, and a basis for NCCHC health care accreditation. The standards look at training, health care services support, inmate care and treatment, health promotion and disease prevention, special needs and services and health records and medical-legal issues.

After a rigorous, two-day assessment of the medical operations at the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office, the NCCHC determined that the Norfolk County medical operation was exceptional in terms of its health care system for inmate residents.

NCCHC President Edward Harrison said, "The team approach, cooperation and staff dedication evident at the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office serve as an excellent model for the country's correctional facilities."

NORFOLK COUNTY SHERIFF'S OFFICE recently received two nationally-acclaimed awards. The National Commission on Correctional Health Care (NCCHC) has named the Norfolk County Correctional Center in Dedham "Facility of the Year" and the American Correctional Association (ACA) has awarded the center with a recommendation for accreditation. Attending the recent NCCHC awards ceremony in Tennessee were, from left Susan Clark, R.N., of Quincy, the center's health services director; NCCHC President Edward Harrison and Acting Norfolk County Sheriff Josephine Shea of Quincy.

The NCCHC is a non-profit organization committed to improving the quality of care in the nation's jails, prisons, and juvenile detention and confinement facilities. The commission is supported by 36 national organizations representing the fields of health, law, and corrections, including the American Medical Association, American Bar Association, American Public Health Association, National Sheriffs Association and the American Association of Public Health Physicians.

Shea said, "Proper inmate health care is essential to the efficient and cost-effective operation of any correctional facility. Our staff is dedicated to providing basic medical services to inmates at a tremendous cost savings to taxpayers. We are proud to be recognized by the NCCHC in setting a standard for excellence in this area."

The second award is the recommendation for accreditation by the ACA. The ACA's Accreditation and Audit Team spent a week inspecting the correctional center's and the Braintree Alternative Center's policies, procedures and methods of operation.

The ACA is a private, non-profit organization that administers the only national accreditation program for all components of adult and juvenile corrections. The purpose is to promote improvement in the management of correctional agencies through the administration of a voluntary accreditation program and the ongoing development and revision of relevant, useful standards.

The accreditation process offers the opportunity for the sheriff's office to evaluate its operations against national standards. Both the correctional center and the Braintree Alternative Center scored a 100 percent compliance for the mandatory standards. For the non-mandatory standards, the Dedham and Braintree facilities received 96.8 and 93.7 percent respectively.

The Norfolk County Sheriff's Office is the fourth correctional facility in Massachusetts to be recommended for the achievement.

Shea credited the sheriff's office staff's commitment to excellence for the ACA recommendation for accreditation.

"The accreditation is testimony to the high standard of operation that the late Norfolk County Sheriff Clifford Marshall installed in his employees. We are very honored to be recognized on a national level. The Norfolk County Sheriff's Office is proud to have achieved this distinction for the Commonwealth."

The Norfolk County Correctional Center, sited in the median of Rte. 128 in Dedham, is the only jail of its kind located in the center of an interstate highway. Housing over 600 inmates, the facility has been in operation at its current site since 1992.

A Breakthrough in Hearing Aid Technology.

If you've been waiting for the very latest hearing technology, we have important news for you.

Starkey's new Sequel Series hearing instruments offer performance advantages unlike any hearing aid we've offered before.

To achieve this preferred level of performance, an ideal hearing aid should not contribute undesirable perceptual elements – like distortion – that can result in poor sound reproduction, especially at high levels.

Thanks to Starkey's breakthrough SMArT Systems Technology, Sequel's sophisticated anti-distortion and efficient circuitry achieves an entirely new plateau in sound quality and performance.

3 Businesses Warned On Keno Violations

Mullen said the training seminar is a preventative class that also involves an ID training segment.

Building Inspector Matt Mulvey said he is "not in favor of Keno being available in the corner store" and cited the fact that to purchase a food item, persons have to wait until Keno numbers are flashed on the board with players waiting in line.

Mulvey said other violations will cause the board to ask the lottery to suspend their license and put them "on notice".

Business owners were told to see Sgt. Richard Laracy regarding registration and time of the classes.

FLAG BEARING STARS representing Wollaston-area residents who served in World War I is unfurled by Rev. John Swanson (center), pastor of Union Congregational Church in Wollaston and area Boy Scouts following Monday's Veterans Day ceremonies at Adams Academy. Rev. Swanson displayed the flag, and another like it representing World War II veterans, during the event. The two flags were found in a closet at the church.

U.S. Must Keep Strong Role In World Affairs

proven to be a more effective form of government than Communism and those who have fought for it should be honored into the 21st century and beyond.

"It's democracy that continues to be the way of life and the wave of the future," said the mayor.

Sheets singled out Frank Anselmo, Quincy's 98-year-old World War I and World War II veteran who is known well throughout the city, for special recognition while praising veterans present at the ceremonies.

City Council President Peter Kolson, who brought greetings from the council, told veterans in attendance they are always on the minds of the councillors.

"Every time we take a vote, every time we argue, every time we debate, we think of you, the men and women who have served our country," he said. "God bless you all, and God bless America."

Rev. John Swanson, pastor of Union Congregational Church in Wollaston, displayed specially-made flags in honor of Wollaston-area residents who served in World War II. The World War I flag contains 62 stars, including three gold stars for those who were killed, and the World War II flag has 200 stars, 12 of which are gold in honor of those who died in the war.

Swanson, a Navy chaplain, said after the ceremonies he found the flags in a closet at his church and he learned about their history from his father, the late Carl Swanson, a World War II veteran who died two years ago.

The ceremonies were preceded by the annual Veterans Day Parade which started at School Street and traveled down Hancock Street before ending at the academy.

Thomas Stansbury of the Quincy Veterans Services Department was parade chairman and John Raeke Sr., commander of the Quincy Veterans Council, was parade marshal.

Hank Bradley, Quincy Veterans Services Director and past state commander of the American Legion, was co-chairman and master of ceremonies.

Also in attendance were city and state officials, representatives of several military and veterans' organizations and a number of local residents.

FBI Heads Probe Into Theft Of Three Adams Bibles, Book

they live in, return the items and then turn themselves in."

If not, the mayor said, he has no doubt the thieves will be caught in a relatively short amount of time.

"Certainly, with the FBI involved, it provides us with a much broader scope of investigatory tools," said Sheets. "I'm confident the FBI, along with the Park Service and local police, will solve this crime.

"It's a crime against America---those items belong to every American who ever lived, every American alive and every American who will live--and I hope it's prosecuted by the FBI as such."

Peak said anyone with information about the crime can call the Quincy Police Department at 479-1212 or the FBI in Boston, 742-5533.

Police Chief Francis Mullen said the alarm at the library went off Monday at around 7:40 p.m. When police arrived at the scene, the thieves had left, he added, and officers discovered a hole sawed through a six-inch-thick wooden panel at the bottom of a door on the west side of the building.

Mullen said the suspect or suspects must have entered through the hole in order to bypass the library's alarm system.

The library is administered by the National Park Service and contains more than 14,000 books and several antique desks, tables, and chairs that belonged to John Quincy Adams and his family.

Charles Francis Adams, son of John Quincy Adams, built the library in 1870 to house the family's most prized possessions: books and papers documenting their personal and public lives.

In 1946, the library was donated by the Adams family to the federal government. It is located to the left of the mansion, known as the "Old House."

The building closed for the season on Sunday, but the grounds are always open to the public.

REAL ESTATE MARKET

BROKER OPEN HOUSE and Luncheon held recently at Stoneridge at Eagle Summit, a development of 31 luxury homes under construction off Turning Mill Lane in West Quincy, recently was attended by more than 50 area Realtors. Leading the tour and speaking with guest Realtors are, left from center, Cheryl Carmichael, Bank of Canton; Dave Wluka, principal of Wluka Real Estate Corp. in Sharon; and Realtor Nancy Wluka. The subdivision is the first single-family community to be built in Quincy in the last 30 years.

Massachusetts Home Sales Increase By 13.4%

Sales of single-family homes rose steadily in Massachusetts during the third quarter of 1996 as rising mortgage rates, a modest increase in available housing stock, and improved job growth across the Bay State created strong demand from first-time and trade-up buyers alike, according to a recent Massachusetts Association of Realtors report.

Detached single-family home sales increased 13.4 percent in the third quarter of this year versus the same period in 1995 and condominium sales climbed 25.4 percent over the same period last year, making the three-month period from July to September 1996 the most active quarter for residential property sales since the second quarter of 1988, the MAR data shows.

Specifically, the year-to-year sales gains reflect an increase from 11,373 detached single-family homes sold in the third quarter of 1995 to 12,902 during the same period this year, while condo sales totaled 2,703 in the third quarter of 1996 versus 2,156 closings in the same quarter one year ago. The current volume of residential sales activity is the highest since the spring of 1988 when over 18,000 single-family homes were sold from April to June that year.

Additionally, the strong third quarter sales pace extends Massachusetts' claim as the state with the largest increase in seasonally-adjusted home sales in the country, a distinction the Bay State also held in the second quarter. data issued by the National Association of Realtors shows.

"The local housing market is outpacing the rest of the country largely because the Massachusetts economy is doing so well," said MAR President Laura Shifrin. "New jobs are being created, wages are rising again, and relocation activity from workers returning to the state is also picking up. Buyers today just seem more confident about their personal finances and more comfortable making large purchases. As a result, we're seeing more and more trade-up buyers entering the market each week."

Other factors which have sparked the growth in sales over the last several months include fluctuating mortgage rates, a tight rental market throughout the state, and a modest increase in residential market listings for the first time in two years.

"Interest rates only increased one quarter point between the second and third quarters, but the constant speculation that they might rise was a risk many buyers didn't want to take. Consequently, they purchased homes rather than waiting for a rate change," said Shifrin.

According to HSH Associates of New Jersey, the average 30-year fixed rate mortgage rate in Massachusetts during the third of 1996 was 8.25 percent, up from 8.19 percent during the second quarter of this year.

Regionally, sales of single-family homes rose in all areas of Massachusetts during the third quarter of this year over the same period in 1995. Detached single-family home sales activity increased at a rate greater than the statewide average in four regions--the South Shore (+44.7 percent), Central (+23.1), Cape Cod & Islands (+19.2) and Southeast (+13.5)--with more modest sales growth of between 3 and 13 percent occurring elsewhere.

Similarly, in the condo market, four regions posted sales gains above the statewide increase--South Shore (+67.8), Central (+48), Northeast (+29.4) and West (+29.2)--with the greater Boston, Cape Cod & Islands, and Southeast regions also observing healthy sales growth of 13 to 17 percent.

QUINCY'S KEVIN MOORE braces himself after recovering a fumble in the second quarter of the Presidents' victory over Silver Lake Friday night. Quincy's defense forced another fumble that led to the game-winning touchdown and two-point conversion late in the fourth quarter.

QUARTERBACK MARK GLYNN takes advantage of good protection from the Presidents' offensive line to look downfield for an open receiver. Glynn and the Quincy offense capitalized on a late turnover, with halfback Kevin Connolly scoring on a two-yard run, then rushing for the game-winning two-point conversion.

Presidents Come Back Against Lakers

Quincy Shoots For Second Straight Friday

By LIAM FITZGERALD

Trailing Silver Lake, 7-0, in the fourth quarter of Friday night's game, it appeared Quincy would again come out on the losing end of a close, hard-fought Old Colony League matchup.

Following a defensive stand at their own 13, the Lakers' offense took over, prepared to march downfield and run out the clock. On the third play, however, Quincy's Dan Nichol made the play of the game, stripping the ball from the Lakers' Andre Mendes and recovering the fumble at Silver Lake's 17.

Four plays later, Presidents halfback Kevin Connolly (23 carries, 86 yards) scored his seventh touchdown on a two-yard run to bring host Quincy to within one, 7-6 with 4:43 left.

Rather then go for the tie with an extra point, Quincy head coach Peter Chella opted to go for two and the lead. Quarterback Mark Glynn rolled out, tossed the option to Connolly, who put his head down and barrelled his way into the end zone for the game-winning points in a 8-7 Quincy triumph.

"It was nice to have this victory," said Chella. "This was a big win for us. We've overcome a lot of adversity this year, and the kids really stepped it up. I'm so proud of them. The defense played very well, we got some turnovers, and we got enough offense when we needed it. Hopefully, this is a momentum builder for our final two games against Barnstable and North Quincy."

Following Connolly's offensive heroics, though, Silver Lake's Dale Horsman returned the kickoff 40 yards to the 50 with over four minutes to play. Once again, Quincy's defense tightened up, stopping Silver Lake (3-6 overall, 2-5 OCL) on fourth down before running out the clock to seal the victory.

"That drive at the end was gratifying," said Chella. "It was a nice drive to end the game."

The Presidents (3-5, 2-4) host the Barnstable Red Raiders (4-2, 4-5) Friday night at 7 at Veterans Memorial Stadium. After losing their first four games, the Red Raiders are on a roll, having won four of their last five games. Barnstable's offense manages just under 13 points a contest, while its defense holds opponents to 14 points a game. Meanwhile, Quincy's offense only puts 10 points on the board each game, while its defense allows over 17 a contest.

The defenses dominated the first half of last Friday night's game, as neither Quincy nor Silver Lake could muster a scoring drive. Early in the second quarter, Silver Lake's Mendes fumbled, recovered by Quincy's Kevin Moore at the Lakers' 29. But on third and fourth down, Glynn was sacked by Matt Murzyn and Corey Pento and the Lakers took over on downs.

The Presidents' defense made a solid stand of their own on the Lakers' next drive. On a fourth and nine from Quincy's 26, Mendes (17 carries, 76 yards) was stopped for a loss of three by Chuck Feeley and Bryan Dunn. With less than a minute to play in the half,

North Girls Advance To State Semifinals

After dropping the first set, the North Quincy High School volleyball team rebounded to defeat crosstown rival Quincy, 3-1, Saturday night to capture the South Sectional Central Division I championship.

North Quincy (21-3) won the match, 7-15, 15-4, 15-9, 15-11 to advance to the Division 1 state semifinals against Barnstable. That match was scheduled for last night (Wednesday) at 7 at Old Rochester.

The winner of the NQ-Barnstable match will take on the winner of Dracut-Amherst in the Division I state final set for Sunday at 1 p.m. at Assumption College.

Saturday night, Quincy took the first set, 15-7, led by the strong play of junior Erin Barry, who finished with three kills and an ace.

Red Raiders freshman Katie Jellison (10 kills, nine service points, 5 aces, 2 digs) started the second set with five straight service points as NQ took the set, 15-4. North middle blocker and senior captain Erica Crawford (9 kills, 3 aces) was also a key performer in that second set.

In the third set, North jumped out to a 10-2 lead only to see the Presidents rally to within one, 10-9. The Red Raiders then reeled off five straight points to win the set and take a 2-1 set lead.

FOUR JUBILANT NORTH QUINCY Red Raiders celebrate their South Sectional Central Division I Championship victory over Quincy Saturday night (from left): senior Courtney Mitchell and senior captains Kerry Ginty, Kerry Jellison and Erica Crawford. With the win, North advanced to the state semifinals and were scheduled to take on Barnstable last night (Wednesday) at 7 at Old Rochester.

Tied 10-10 in the fourth set, North senior captain Kerry Ginty (3 aces, 1 kill, 32 assists) collected three consecutive service points to give her team the lead for good. Leading 11-10, Jellison blasted a kill on the right side to give the Red Raiders some breathing room en route to the victory.

"That was a pretty gutsy performance," said NQ coach Jim Rendle about Jellison. "I wanted her to be aggressive and she certainly stepped up."

Jellison's sister, senior captain Kerry Jellison, had 12 kills, 1 block and 9 digs, while senior Sarah Downey added 5 kills, 3 digs and 1 ace. Senior Courtney Mitchell tallied 2 kills, 1 dig, and 1 ace and junior Kerry Skehan collected 8 digs for the Red Raiders.

FOUR QUINCY RESIDENTS are members of the Eastern Nazarene College women's volleyball team which advanced to this weekend's Women's Volleyball Division III North ECAC Tournament. Front row, from left, Amy Sue Eash, Katie Gallagher of Quincy, Amy Detwiler of Quincy and Jenn Brown. The tournament semifinals are scheduled for Saturday at 11 a.m. and 1 p.m., with the championship set for Sunday at 5 p.m.

The Lady Crusaders, seeded seventh in the tournament, closed out their regular season with a 25-9 record and won the Commonwealth Coast Conference championship for a second straight season.

Cross Country

North Quincy Girls Ninth In Cross Country Championships

Despite sloppy conditions at Franklin Park, the North Quincy girls cross country team placed ninth out of 30 teams at the Eastern Mass. Division I Championships.

Freshman Lynda Wilson was a pleasant surprise, finishing 12th and qualifying for next week's Allstate Championships at Mt. Northfield in western Massachusetts.

North Quincy finished ahead of all the Old Colony teams competing except for Barnstable, who edged the Red Raiders, 268-286. Weymouth's Caitlin Connelly and Barnstable's Jessica Johnston were the only other OCL athletes to make Allstates.

Other North finishers included Heather Meighan (48), Genevieve O'Brien (56), Lauren Molloy (85), Sarah Houghton (89), Carrie Jarvie (113), and Shirley Wu (118).

"Stormy conditions can have very negative effects on most people; others are oblivious," said NQ head coach Geoff Hennessy, who will be making his sixth appearance in the Allstates in nine years. "Wilson obviously had a big day, but I'm proud of all our kids.

"We knew we would have to run over our heads to make the team qualify, and they gave it all they had. We earned people's respect out there, and with four freshmen in our top five, we'll be back next year to finish business."

Hockey

Squirts Bow To South Boston

Despite an outstanding effort by goaltender Ryan Barter, the Quincy Youth Hockey Squirts, aka Barter's Bullies, fell to the speedy South Boston Squirts in recent action at Waltham.

Paul Graham provided the only score of the day for Quincy, netting an unassisted goal after winning the faceoff in the Southie zone.

Alex Shaffer and Justin Thorley provided some great stick handling and Paul McLean worked center ice, pushing the puck up ice past Southie's hard-hitting forwards. Mike Faherty and Brian Martin also played well, grabbing the puck off the sticks of the quick Southie wingers.

Jonathan O'Connor and Keith Flaherty defended the Bullies' turf, sending the Southie forwards back to regroup.

Tony (Benji) Benigni kept thinsg moving as he broke up the play at center ice on numerous occasions. Danny Donovan and Joseph McManus bounced the puck off the boards, feeding the hungry forwards.

North Puts B-R Loss Behind Them

Resilient Raiders Focus On Taunton

When Bridgewater-Raynham's Doug Bessette galloped 71 yards for a touchdown on the Trojans' second play from scrimmage, it was just the beginning of a rough Sunday afternoon for North Quincy.

In B-R's 35-8 victory over the visiting Red Raiders, Bessette rushed for 251 yards on eight carries and scored four touchdowns. The win clinched a Super Bowl berth for the Trojans, who improved to 8-1 overall, 6-0 in the Old Colony League.

"That was an old-fashioned spanking," said North Quincy head coach Ken McPhee. "That touchdown on the second play deflated our balloon right off the bat.

"We missed a lot of tackles and were outplayed on the line. Our guys hung in there, but we got beat by a very good football team."

When the Red Raiders (6-2, 4-2) visit OCL foe Taunton (2-7, 1-5) Friday night at 7, McPhee knows his team will be focused at the task at hand, not brooding over the B-R loss.

"The kids have already put it behind them," he said. "When you get blown out, its easy to regroup, because it's over and done with.

"We'll roar back: I guarantee it. They're a resilient bunch of kids who understand what happened and are ready to concentrate on the rest of the season. I know we'll be O.K."

The Tigers "are a lot better than they seem," according to McPhee. "They throw the ball a lot and have some good backs. They're not big up front, so they should match up well with us.

"Defensively, they're aggressive and quick, and put a lot on the line to stunt you, so we need to take care of that."

Senior quarterback Tom Coughlin, who separated his right shoulder against Silver Lake and missed the B-R game, had been cleared to return to practice Tuesday, said McPhee. Tim Semchenko, in his first start, was 8 of 11 for 86 yards against the Trojans.

"I don't know how quick he (Coughlin) will bounce back, so we'll just wait and see how he does this week," said McPhee. "If he's not ready, we still have Timmy (Semchenko), who played a great game at quarterback in his first start. With Tom and Timmy, we have two good quarterbacks, which is nice."

Sunday, Bessette added to B-R's lead with a 76-yard scoring romp late in the opening quarter. The 5-11, 185-pound sophomore broke five tackles en route to the end zone. Bessette, whom McPhee called "a whale of a back," scored again early in the second quarter, reaching the end zone untouched on a two-yard run. Brian Ronayne's third extra point gave B-R a 21-0 lead.

After Red Raider tailback Brian Walsh (33 carries, 146 yards) fumbled at B-R's 21, the Trojans scored their fourth touchdown to put the game out of reach. Tim Pauline took it in for a one-yard scoring run, followed by Ronayne's fourth point after for a 28-0 advantage with 3:04 left in the half.

North Quincy nearly got on the board on its next possession, but Walsh was stopped on four consecutive rushes inside the five-yard line just before halftime. Included in the defensive stand for B-R was a fourth-down stop at the one-yard line by 6-7, 260-pound defensive lineman Marc Columbo (eight tackles).

"We didn't run the blocking schemes like they were drawn on the board," said McPhee. "We didn't get it done on the line."

BACKUP QUARTERBACK Tim Semchenko (left), starting his first game in place of injured senior Tom Coughlin (center), performed well against Bridgewater-Raynham, completing 8 of 11 for 86 yards. Sophomore QB Chris Bregoli (right) also saw action in Sunday's 35-8 loss to the Trojans.

In the third quarter, North drove to the Trojan 28, only to have Bessette intercept a halfback option pass from Walsh near the end zone.

The Trojans again capitalized on a turnover as Bessette scampered 39 yards for his fourth score of the game. Key plays on that drive included two personal foul penalties on North Quincy and a 16-yard catch by Darrin Kuykendall, which set the stage for Bessette's touchdown romp.

Running back Jason Turner bolted 26 yards midway through the fourth quarter for North's only touchdown. Walsh rushed for the two point conversion for the game's final points.

Quincy's defense stuffed Mendes on another fourth and long play.

With 2:03 remaining in the half, Quincy's Mike Russo tipped a Jon Bond pass, which fell into the hands of Jon Ryan for an interception at the Lakers' 33. Again, the Presidents were unable to take advantage of a turnover as the drive stalled at Silver Lake's 45.

Quincy had one last shot to score in the first half, but Glynn's toss to the end zone was picked off by Bond to close out the scoreless half.

The Lakers forged ahead on their first series of the third quarter, with Bond connecting with Matt Jeffery on a 21-yard touchdown pass with 4:20 left in the period. Pento's extra point gave Silver Lake a temporary 7-0 lead. A 25-yard romp by Josh McPhail and a 26-yard run by Mendes sparked the 72-yard scoring drive.

Youth Football

Manets, Elks Square Off For Championship Sunday

For the second straight year, the Houghs Neck Manets will battle the West Quincy Elks for the Quincy Youth Football League title.

The championship game is set for Sunday at 2 p.m. at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

Last year, the Manets defeated the Elks, 30-0, to claim the QYFL title.

This season, the Manets handed the Elks their only loss, claiming a 14-6 victory in October.

Both teams won their final regular season games. With a 20-0 win over the North Quincy Apaches, the Manets once again claimed the East Division crown with a perfect 7-0 record.

The three Manets' running backs, Justin Anolowski, Dan Dorsey and Dan Galligan were once again unstoppable, gaining a lot of yards and scoring touchdowns.

Manet quarterback Jordan Virtue connected with wide receiver Pete Turowski for an 80-yard gain to set up the winning score. Greg Walsh and Jim Cashins played well at offensive end. The Manets' offensive line has been spectacular this season with center Tom Brown, guards Steve Scatto, and John Elves, tackles Dustin Schepici and Paul Flynn playing strong games.

Defensively, the Manets played tough, led by Shawn Morin, Shawn Richardson, Brian Chennette, Brian Lynch, Nitti Liu, John Santos, Mike McGrath, Victor Cora and Richard Stande.

Coaching the Manets are head coach Dan Morrell, line coach Bill Dunn, offensive back coach Jim Virtue and defensive back coach Dana Pringle.

The Elks advanced to the QYFL championship with a 38-0 romp over the Squantum Storm to claim the West Division crown. The Elks won six games this season, all shutouts.

The Elks' defense allowed the fewest points in the QYFL, as opponents managed just 14 points against the Big Red Machine defense.

Coaches Chris Chevalier, Dean Zoia and Bob Hanias attribute the defensive success to the young players' work ethic and team pride.

The players and coaches would like to thank their cheerleaders for their support and the parents and owner John Rodenhiser for their help in turning the Elks football program around.

The Quincy Point Panthers closed out their season with a 32-6 win over the Milton Mustangs.

The Panthers' Mike Lorenzano scored on a 70-yard kickoff return and a 70-yard run from scrimmage, then hooked up with receiver Mark Robertson for an 87-yard touchdown pass. Jonathan Page raced 90 yards for a score and Lorenzano fired to James LaFleur for the two-point conversion. Joe Thorley also scored a touchdown for the Panthers (4-3).

Leading the defense were Georgie Bush, Sean Connolly, Alfred Trihn and Chris Rubava. Marc Ciafardoni, Steve Malone and David Imrie sparked a solid offensive outing.

Preceeding Sunday's championship game will be a JV Jamboree at 11 a.m. and a cheerleading competition at 1 p.m. Winners of the cheerleading competition will be announced at halftime of the Manets-Elks game.

ELIMINATING THE BLIND SPOT

According to the visibility and controls division of the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, there are some simple steps you can take to eliminate the blind spots in your rearview mirrors. For correct mirror adjustment, sit in the driver's seat and tilt your head to the left until you graze the glass. Then, turn the driver-side mirror until you can just see the edge of the left rear fender. Next, lean your head to the right about the same degree as you did to the left, and adjust the right-side mirror the same way (until the right rear fender is just visible). By aligning the side mirrors in this manner, you should be able to eliminate all the blind spots at once, as well as be able to see the fender when backing up and parallel parking by leaning a bit to either side.

Drivers should also be careful not to place their own vehicles in the blind spots of truck drivers that proceed them down the highway.

SCOTT DEWARE

A Thought For The Week

At one time or another we all must face a moment of truth. At times, the uncloaked truth is hard to take, especially When It reveals bad luck or disaster. At that moment, we can open the door and try courageously to face reality - or - we can close the door and try to hide from the despairing truth. When we face reality, we must face the truth that self-pity does not and cannot create pride - and who among us can deny a desire to be proud?

George Washington, even with his muscular power, was in ill health throughout his lifetime. Beethoven was deaf, yet he wrote beautiful music. Helen Keller, one of the world's greatest personalities, was deaf, mute and blind. F.D.R., a crippled polio victim, was elected President four times. P.T. Barnum of circus fame had to start over again at the age of 60 and gained greater fame and fortune than in earlier years. . .

Such people from all over the world, show us how to face reality. Yes, reality may be harsh and hard to understand. Yet it can be overcome.

New Restaurant Planned At Former Eatery

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

A landmark restaurant in Quincy Point is about to change its name again.

The restaurant that was once the Knotty Pine, Dimitri's and of late the Fore River Eatery may become O'Connell's if approved by the Quincy Licence Board Dec. 3.

Appearing before the board Tuesday were Gerard S. D'Arcy, Joseph D. Mulvey and Joseph D'Angelo. All three men have purchased the building that houses the restaurant.

Atty. Kevin Burke outlined the changes for the board including a downsizing of the bar the omission of pool tables and the addition of booths.

The restaurant will have 35 parking spaces and will seat 150 persons. Burke told the board that the owners would like to open for the holiday season.

One abutter Tom McCarthy who resides on Shaw Street, said he "wishes them luck", but cited noisy patrons leaving the restaurant at closing time of 1 a.m. and the slamming of car doors in previous years.

Ward 2 Councillor Dan Raymondi spoke of problems in the last decade. He said he fears that after 10 p.m . when the kitchen is closed, the business will depend on sorely selling of liquor and become another "sports bar" saying "we've been there, done that".

Chairman Joseph Shea expressed concern when he said "if the selling of food doesn't make it, owners usually try a new concept" which can lead to problems.

Fire Chief Thomas Gorman told the owners he would not "vote for pool tables or Keno down the road".

Police Chief Francis Mullen said educational classes including T.I.P.S. are available and called the restaurant undertaking a "major responsibility".

Speaking in favor of the restaurant was Don Uvanite, a member of the board of Quincy 2000. He said all three of the owners have been Quincy residents all of their lives and have come highly recommended.

Although no vote was taken at Tuesday's meeting pending another hearing on Dec. 3, board member Matt Mulvey excused himself because he is a cousin to one of the owners.

City, State Officials Will Examine FB Project

Meeting Set To Expedite Flood Relief

Acting Mayor Peter Kolson has scheduled a meeting between city and state officials regarding a long-delayed flood relief project in West Quincy for Tuesday, Nov. 26 at 3 p.m. in the office of Mayor James Sheets.

Kolson, the City Council president, is acting mayor this week while Sheets is out of the city. He said he arranged the meeting with Marilyn Murray-Brown, chief of staff in the state Office of Environmental Affairs (EOEA).

Kolson said he will attend the meeting along with Sheets, Ward 4 Councillor Michael D'Amico, Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi, Quincy Department of Public Works Commissioner David Colton, and representatives from the EOEA and the Massachusetts Highway Department. Other city councillors might also attend, he said.

The meeting has been scheduled to see if there is any way to expedite the Furnace Brook flood control project, the delay of which has been blamed for repeated floodings of basements in the Ward 4 area following rain and snow storms.

Kolson said delays in the Town Brook flood control plan, which has caused similar problems in Ward 2, also might be discussed. Gov. William Weld recently wrote to city officials to notify them he wants the projects fast-tracked by the Highway Department and the Metropolitan District Commission.

Kolson noted that although Sheets is out of the city, "he is fully cognizant of what we're doing and he supports it 100 percent."

Councillors and residents in Wards 2 and 4 have been angry since October, when officials from the MDC and Army Corps of Engineers said the projects are not scheduled to begin until 1998.

Most recently, heavy rains during storms on Sept. 18 and Oct. 20 caused severe flooding in those areas. The October storm caused as much as six feet of water and sewage to accumulate in some basements, in addition to flooding a number of yards.

Councillors asked Colton on Monday night to appoint someone in his department to monitor state, federal and local actions on the projects. In addition, the council is planning to ask the MDC for greater local control along Furnace Brook near Merrymount Park in order to have them opened more quickly in the event of heavy flooding.

City Council Gives Unanimous Approval

Downtown Plan Gets Go-Ahead

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The Quincy Center Action Plan that will be implemented by the city's downtown development coordinator has received the unanimous support of the City Council.

The council voted 8-0 to back the plan Monday night. Councillor Timothy Cahill was not in attendance.

The plan, designed to help revitalize Quincy's downtown business district, will be carried out by Bruce Arons, the downtown coordinator, who works for Quincy 2000 and the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association (QCBPA). It was prepared for Quincy 2000 by Sasaki Associates of Watertown.

Although the council's support technically was not needed for the implementation of the plan, officials said its approval was a crucial part of getting private investors to also lend their support.

Following a slide presentation outlining the plan, Council President Peter Kolson noted that past proposals to revitalize the downtown have failed but said he is "very impressed" with the Quincy Center Action Plan. He asked his fellow councillors to support it enthusiastically.

"We have a plan here that I think is important," said Kolson. "I think that it is in our own best interests."

Main Goals

The main goals for the downtown, as outlined in the Quincy Center Action Plan, include:

•Create a superior physical environment through enhanced signage, improvements to buildings, streets and sidewalks and other aesthetic changes.

•Create an imageable and clearly defined downtown center.

•Establish a focused managerial structure and implementation agenda for Quincy Center.

•Establish a comprehensive marketing plan for the district.

Other councillors voiced similar sentiments.

"I completely, unequivocally am excited about supporting this plan," said Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi. "It's a plan of action."

Ward 5 Councillor Stephen Durkin agreed, calling it "a very comprehensive

Winter And Snow Parking Rules

The city announces its winter parking rules for 1996-97:

•Overnight parking is prohibited without a resident parking permit, available from the Quincy Police Department (479-1212). Resident parking permits are void during snow emergencies.

•Parking on an emergency artery during a snow emergency is prohibited. All main streets in the city are posted with signs identifying them as emergency arteries.

•Parking is allowed during a snow emergency on the even-numbered side of non-emergency streets this winter.

•A car will be towed if it is in violation of any of the above winter parking rules or if it is interfering in any way with plowing operations. The average tow and storage is $75, although fees may vary.

Residents are encouraged to call 770-SNOW or listen to monitior television or radio news to learn if there is a snow emergency. For snow emergency updates, stay tuned to WJDA Radio (1300 AM).

For problems or questions related to snow removal, call the city's snow hotline at 376-1943.

License Board Briefs

The Quincy License Board took the following action at Tuesday's meeting.

•Rescheduled a hearing regarding Yannis Plaza, 216-224 W. Squantum St. Board members will conduct an on-site meeting with Roger Lyons, an abutter and the owner John K. Blathras.

•Granted a request from United First Parish Church, 1306 Hancock St. for a one-day winter fundraising event to be held Sunday, Dec. 1 from 12 noon to 3 p.m.

•Owners of The Garden Cafe, 653 So. Artery which recently closed, asked the board to allow them to hold their liquor license until the end of the year. Atty. Robert Fleming told the board that because of a change in situation concerning the ownership of the building, owners could not come to terms. Owners are exploring another site and may sell the liquor license. Board members were in favor of the request. Persons with gift certificates are asked to contact Atty. Robert Fleming for reimbursement.

•Continued a hearing regarding Cake Eaters, 273 Willard St., who are selling menu sandwiches instead of adhering to the original license of selling ice cream and pastries. Owner Nikitas Bekiaris was told to appear at next week's public hearing concerning the complaint by Zaki Ibiahi, owner of Railroad Cafe, next door.

Health Commissioner Jane Gallahue said the owners will need a refrigerator table as well as different equipment.

Building Inspector Matt Mulvey said he would not have voted for the license "if the menu was the same as sold next door."

The License Board took the following action at last week's meeting:

•Granted a secondhand license to Play It Again Sports, 550 Adams St. (Walgreen's Plaza). Owner Michael K. Leivi said he will sell new and used sports equipment. Hours are Monday through Friday, 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. and Sundays from noon to 6 p.m.

•Allowed The Irish Pub, 57 Billings Rd., permission to open at 10 a.m. Sunday mornings to serve an Irish breakfast with Bloody Mary's and Mimosa's at 11 a.m. Approval was given by Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers.

•Issued an all-alcoholic license to the South Quincy Social Club, 480 Quincy Ave. The club will provide its members with alcoholic beverages while on the premises. It was formerly located on Granite Street in the Brewer's Corner area. Hours will be Monday through Saturday from 9 a.m . to 1 a.m.; and on Sundays from 12 noon to 1 a.m. Ward 2 Councillor Dan Raymondi told the board he was in favor of the move.

•Continued until Dec. 3 a hearing regarding O'Connell's, 520 Washington St. for a common victualer-all-alcoholic license. Owners Gerard S. D'Arcy, Joseph D. Mulvey and Joseph D'Angelo propose to open a family restaurant at the former Knotty Pine, Dimitri's and lately the Fore River Eatery.

•Allowed Francisco Rojas to change the name of Cafe Et Bon Appetit) on 1524-1528 Hancock St., to Quincy Deli. Hours of operation will be from 6 a.m. to 9 p.m. each day and Sundays from 7 a.m. to 1 p.m.

•Allowed Bob's Automotive Service, 52 Hilda St., (behind Atlas Liquors) permission to extend their present hours from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m instead of 5 p.m..

Cheney, Teacher Honored By Human Rights Commission

City Councillor Michael Cheney and Snug Harbor School teacher Deanna White-Hebert were honored by the Quincy Human Rights Commission during Monday night's council meeting.

Cheney received an award for writing the ordinance that created the commission in 1993, as well as his activity with the commission and other groups such as the Germantown Human Rights Committee, which he helped found in 1984 when he was Ward 1 councillor and that neighborhood was experiencing growing racial tension.

Cheney noted that Quincy, which was once called "the most racist city in America," is now a model of values that are the antithesis of racism. He said he is proud to have played a part in the battle for human rights.

"This is probably the most significant award I have ever received or ever will receive," he said. "I will hang this on my wall very proudly."

White-Hebert, a teacher for 30 years, was honored for years of human rights-related work in the Quincy Public Schools as well as on a number of local groups, including Impact Quincy.

White-Hebert said she accepted the award "humbly" because many people have aided her efforts over the years. She noted that it has been a special honor for her to work in Quincy and at Snug Harbor.

"I particularly love working in this fine city," she said. "Being at Snug Harbor is more fun than it's ever been, and I'm learning more every day."

Monday night's meeting marked the third consecutive year the commission has presented the awards.

$10,000 Reward For Adams Bibles, Book

The National Park Service is offering a $10,000 reward to any individual who provides information leading to the recovery of three Bibles and a rare book stolen Nov. 11 from the presidential library at the Adams National Historic Site.

The items stolen from the Adams Library at 135 Adams St., also known as the Stone Library, all belonged to President John Quincy Adams. Because the building is a national historic site, the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the Park Service have joined the Quincy Police Department in the investigation.

The books taken, which have been described as priceless, include an 1838 Bible that the Mendi Indian tribe gave to Adams as a gift, a 1772 Bible, a 1521 Bible and a rare 1785 book that features hand-painted illustrations of fish.

Authorities have said they believe more than one person was involved in the crime.

Those with any information should call the FBI in Boston at 742-5533 or the Quincy Police Department at 745-5769.

10 With Total 290 Years Fire Dept. Service Honored

Nine Quincy firefighters and one of the department mechanics were recently honored for their combined 290 years of service at the 39th annual retirement banquet at the Bryan VFW Post.

The 10 men who retired throughout the year since the last banquet are: Capt. Paul Johnson, 31 years; Lt. Arthur Johnson, 32 years; Lt. John C. Murphy, 34 years; Lt. Richard Coffey, 26 years; Firefighters Theodore Rouillard, 41 years; Edwin Curtin, 33 years; Maurice Halter, 30 years; Edward Rando, 33 years; Harry Shedd, 26 years; mechanic Sonny Lewis, 11 years with the department and 33 years total with the city.

Lt. Robert McCarthy and firefighter George Menz were awarded 25 year pins.

ASK YOUR LAWYER

by Kevin F. O'Donnell
ATTORNEY AT LAW

WHO PAYS?

Anyone who is involved in a trial or litigation will want to know who is responsible for attorney fees. In this country, the courts are likely to follow what is known as the American Rule. This rule stipulates that each party is responsible to his or her attorney for his or her own legal fees, regardless of who wins the lawsuit. Interestingly enough, the rule is different in England, where the English Rule provides that the loser of the lawsuit is responsible for paying the other party's attorney fees. On this side of the pond, there are several federal acts and many local statutes that provide exception to the American Rule. In these cases, the court determines the amount of attorney fees awarded.

HINT: In general, attorney fees are not tax deductible; business legal fees are deductible if they are ordinary and necessary business expenses.

Generally, there are three types of fee arrangements depending on what type of legal case is being handled. There are fixed fees, hourly fees and contingent fees. I specialize in personal injury law. If I decide a viable case exists, I will handle your case on a percentage fee basis. I only receive payment if a recovery is made on your behalf. Call 773-2880 for a free consultation now. My office is located at Gridley Bryant Office Condominiums 111 Willard Street.

Republicans Eye Vacancies

The feeling is that Gov. William Weld is going to name two Republicans "for the good of the party" to fill the Norfolk County sheriff and district attorney vacancies.

WELD

If he does, just how good it will be for the GOP, will remain to be seen.

Republican hierarchy like Lt. Gov. Paul Cellucci and state Chairman James Rappaport are urging Weld to stick with the party line on these two appointments which they feel are political opportunity knocking at their door.

The GOP in Massachusetts is badly in need of resuscitation after being hit with that Democratic tidal wave on election day.

And a transfusion–known as reorganization–to go along with it. A good place to start, they are telling Weld, is with two big opportunities at the Norfolk County level.

The sheriff's vacancy was created by the death of Democratic incumbent Clifford Marshall of Quincy Aug. 28. William Delahunt, another Quincy Democrat who has been district attorney 21 years, will be off to Washington in January as the new congressman in the 10th Congressional District.

Both terms have two years left.

The appointed Republicans would have two years to build an organization in Norfolk County strong enough to hold on to these two major posts in the 1998 election, Republicans believe.

Like, they say, down in Plymouth County where two Weld Republican appointees, Sheriff Peter Forman and Dist. Atty. Michael Sullivan, held off the Democrats this year.

But, that was in Plymouth County where Republicans are still plentiful. Norfolk County is a different political landscape, with Democrats holding the elective offices.

Where, for example, City Councillor Tim Cahill, a Democrat, breezed by Republican incumbent Robert Hall this year to win the county treasurer's office.

Party appointments are no guarantee that the office will be held in the next election.

Norfolk County has a long ago example of that.

There was a similar political situation back in 1959 but with the Republicans and Democrats in reverse roles.

Longtime Republican sheriff Sam Wragg died and Democrat Gov. Foster Furcolo named Senator Peter McCormack, a Brookline Democrat to fill the vacancy.

Back then, Norfolk County was still a GOP bastion and in the very next election, Senator Charles Hedges of Quincy took back the sheriff's badge for the Republicans.

If Weld does appoint Republicans to the current two vacancies, they will have their work cut out for them to keep the Democrats at bay in 1998.

A number of Republican and Democrat names have been mentioned as potential appointees the last few weeks. But they are being narrowed down.

Insiders think Rep. John Locke of Wellesley may have a lock on the district attorney appointment. Other names still being mentioned are Dan O'Malley, Quincy attorney and owner of a Hancock St. gymnasium, and Edward McCormick, III of Norfolk who ran for Congress in 1992.

The Republican name popping up most often right now for the sheriff's job seems to be that of Chris Lane, former state senator for Medfield.

Still in contention on the Democrat side is Acting Sheriff Josephine Shea of Quincy.

It's Weld's call.

DON MACDONALD, retired Quincy High School teacher and an ardent Ruth Gordon fan, has a favorite story illustrating how close her QHS Class of 1914 remained to one another and to their principal, Ernest Collins. It goes like this:

GORDON

Ruth was traveling to Europe on a ship captained by her classmate Giles Chester Stedman and asked him, "Do you ever see Ernest Collins these days?"

Stedman told her Collins had contacted him a few years before and said he would love to travel to Europe during the next school vacation and asked:

"Could you get me a job on board so that I could work my passage?"

"In those days this was often done," says MacDonald "and Stedman arranged for Mr. Collins to work in the pursar's office, I believe."

After the first day out to see, Stedman asked Collins how he liked the trip so far and Collins replied: "It's fine but couldn't you get me work topside in the fresh air?"

Stedman said the only topside job available was for a brass polisher. "I'll take it, I'll take it," Collins exclaimed.

The following day, Stedman was escorting a foreign princess on a tour of the ship, and approaching Collins asked him, "How are you doing, Mr. Collins?"

The brass polisher replied to the captain: "I'm doing just fine, Chester, just fine!"

The princess was unaware of the principal-student relationship between Stedman and Collins and obviously was quite puzzled that the captain addressed the lowly brass polisher as Mr. Collins and he called the captain by his first name.

"I'm sure," says MacDonald, "that the princess spent the next few minutes saying to herself: "What strange people these Americans are!"

SPEAKING OF THAT Quincy High School 1914 Class, the so-called "worst class" because no one made the honor roll, there is still another member who went on to success and fame.

Willard Crocker became a tennis star, winning the Davis Cup at Wimbledon in the 1920's. He was later inducted into the Canadian Hall of Fame.

Crocker's daughter, Amy, is married to Carmine D'Olimpio, retired Quincy union leader.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS 1910 POSTCARD is a view of the old wooden Wollaston School on the corner of Winthrop Avenue and Beale Street. This is how the school looked from a trolley coming up Farrington Street turning left onto Beale Street toward Wollaston Center. The small section of the building with the cupola was built in 1873. The two larger wings were added in 1890 to accommodate the expanding residential development of Wollaston Heights. Demolished in 1912 the old school site is now known as Safford Park.

Alcohol Opponents Will Continue To 'Shovel Against The Tide'

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

I wish to express sincere thanks to all those who extended their support, emotional, financial, and otherwise, to the community's effort to address the issue of proliferation of alcohol sales through their opposition to the Stop & Shop beer and wine license.

This support was visible both at the local hearings and subsequently at the ABCC appeal. Contributions from hardworking average citizens of all ages and small business people alike enabled us to secure the legal representation of Atty. Lou Cassis, who vigorously prosecuted our appeal because he believed in his clients. He gave us no illusions about the likelihood of our success and so the ABCC decision was not a surprise, though no less disappointing.

Ultimately, the responsibility returns to the Quincy License Board's initial decision to grant the license. Keep in mind that two of the three members who affirmed the license granting are not city residents. Translation: one resident of this city contravened the will of thousands of other residents.

These residents understood the true issues in Quincy, a city that even Jane Gallahue, the Health Commissioner reported on Nov. 30, 1995, is above the statewide average in several categories relative to alcohol abuse. These residents understood the insidious, seductive intent of one-stop shopping where we are again erasing the line between childhood and adulthood. Perhaps they also understood that alcohol is the number one killer of people under the age of 24; 105,000 Americans each year die in alcohol-related deaths; 18 million Americans, 4 million of them kids, are alcohol addicted; that 95 percent of all violent crimes, 90 percent of rapes and two-thirds of suicides involved alcohol and that according to the Center for Alcohol Advertising, 73 percent of 9- to 11-year-olds recognized the Budweiser frogs, which exceeded the recognition of Tony the Tiger, Smokey the Bear and the Mighty Morphin Power Rangers.

If the statistics are all too vague, too large or difficult to comprehend, then talk to someone like George L. of Westwood, one of the many people both in and out of Quincy who called or wrote to me in support of our effort. His young son was killed by an 18-year-old drunken driver. George understands the issue intimately. George understands we are going in the wrong direction and that little-noticed proposed federal legislation to lower the legal drinking age to 18 is just another indication of that. But just as in our local issue, big money talks; the beer, wine and alcohol industries poured $4.4 million into the 1994 Congressional campaigns.

The efforts that each one of us must make in the area of prevention are not assisted by these misguided governmental decisions but neither will our efforts rise or fall on those decisions. Those who truly understand what's at stake here will continue one day at a time to shovel against the tide. Beyond that I would suggest we all hug our kids a little tighter, something George can no longer do, and pray that they never become the victims or perpetrators of an alcohol-related crime.

Commends Officer Robert Kelley

[The following letter addressed to Police Chief Francis Mullen was submitted for publication.]

Chief Mullen:

I would like to thank and commend Officer Robert Kelley for his assistance to my mother, Evelyn Burke on Monday, Oct. 28, 1996.

Mother was in attendance at a funeral service at the Deware Funeral Home in Wollaston when the closeness of the crowd and the heat caused her to faint.

She was carried out by our minister, Rev. John Swanson.

When she came to, she found herself seated on a chair on the sidewalk with Officer Kelley in attendance. After being assured that she was indeed okay, Officer Kelley drove her home while her car was driven home by another. The officers made sure that she was safely in the house and then returned to their other duties.

Other than being slightly embarrassed by all the commotion, mother is fine.

Many thanks for the kindness shown to her by Officer Kelley and his associate.

Johnson Fund Tapped For Seniors' Thanksgiving Dinner

Nov. 21 - 27

By PAUL HAROLD

Acting city historian Joseph Sandblom announced that part of the $3,600 income from the Cotton Center Johnson Fund would be used to pay for a senior citizen Thanksgiving dinner.

In the past, monies were used for a Christmas party for children, but Mayor Walter Hannon wanted those seniors who seldom get out to be the beneficiaries of the fund.

It was scheduled for the Fore River Club House, prepared by Daniel Barry, owner of Barry's in Wollaston.

HANNON SEEKS BOND FOR WATER METERS

Mayor Hannon announced that he would seek city council approval for a $300,000 bond to purchase 5,000 new water meters.

It was estimated that the city was losing $100,000 a year because of faulty meters. Owen Eaton, water superintendent, said that there were 3,200 meters that needed to be replaced immediately. Seventy-five percent of the city's meters, he said, were 15 to 20 years old, becoming less efficient each year.

He noted that the new meters would be outside reading machines designed to eventually make meter reading workers obsolete.

HIGH SCHOOL BANDS TRIP FUNDRAISERS

To assist the two city's high school bands raise funds for their trip to Ireland (QHS) and the Cotton Bowl (NQHS), a number of fund-raisers were held throughout the city.

The latest included an auction in the QHS gymnasium coordinated by Mrs. George Gardner of Manet Ave. and Mrs. Kenneth Bergstrom of Bell St.

The NQHS Music Parents' Association scheduled a "Crazy Carnival Cartoon" at the Wollaston Theater. Mrs. Harry Sterrin and Mrs. Albert Jonaitis, both of Atlantic St. and Mrs. James Wiswell of Quincy Shore Drive were in charge of the program.

QISC, Christ Church Thanksgiving Dinner At Woodward Nov. 28

The Quincy Interfaith Sheltering Coalition (QISC) and Christ Church Episcopal will hold their annual Community Thanksgiving Dinner this year in a different place.

Through the efforts of the Woodward School for Girls, the dinner will be prepared and held Thursday, Nov. 28 from 1 to 3 p.m. at the school, 1102 Hancock St., Quincy. All are welcome.

The meal will be organized and prepared by Woodward Director of Food Service Mike Chin, who is new to the school but has helped feed the homeless in the past.

"I ran a catering business and a restaurant and always enjoyed giving back to the community," said Chin.

The school already has sought food donations. Eric Freeman of Alliant Food Service has solicited donations of turkeys and other Thanksgiving items from the following vendors: Food Dynamics in Natick, E.L. Cooney in Braintree, Food Service Sales in Canton, Benchmark Sales in Wellesley and Alliant Food Service in Peabody.

Fr. William McCarthy, for whom the QISC-operated homeless shelter Father Bill's Place in Quincy is named, said he appreciates the school's efforts.

"They are really providing a great community service in feeding those in need on Thanksgiving," he said.

Headmaster Robert Johnston said the effort is no accident.

"It has been a goal of the school and its board to be an integral part of the community," said Johnston. "Community service is being stressed among students and staff, so this dinner is the natural thing to do."

Students will volunteer in the preparation and serving of food. Other volunteers include those of Fr. Bill's Place who have participated in the meal for many years.

The QISC will also prepare and deliver meals to shut-ins. To have a meal delivered, call Laurie at 770-3314.

Council Wants To Honor Marine Killed In Vietnam

The City Council hopes to honor a Wollaston resident killed in action during the Vietnam War more than 20 years after the city originally said it would do so.

The council unanimously passed a resolution introduced by Ward 5 Councillor Stephen Durkin and Councillor Paul Harold that the city honor Lance Cpl. Brian Paul Ahern of the U.S. Marine Corps with a plaque and stone on the front lawn of the Beechwood Knoll Elementary School. Durkin was the son of Taylor Ahern, longtime Quincy assistant building inspector.

The resolution calls for the council to send a formal request for the memorial to the School Committee, which must approve the project, as well as notification about the plan to the Quincy Veterans Council.

Durkin said Ahern was killed in January 1968 but although the city discussed dedicating the intersection of Fenno Street and Rice Road in his memory in the early 1970s, it never happened.

Durkin added that if the project is approved, he would like a dedication ceremony to be held before next Memorial Day.

Sheriff Marshall Honored By Beechwood Center

The late Sheriff Clifford Marshall was honored last night (Wednesday) during a Thanksgiving Celebration at Beechwood on the Bay in Squantum.

A gymnasium was dedicated in the late sheriff's name. Others who have contributed to the community center during its 15-year history also were recognized.

"Kippy Marshall was a special friend to Beechwood and to the community," said Beechwood Executive Director Sharron Beals. "We are pleased to recognize his efforts by dedicating the Sheriff Clifford Marshall Gymnasium in his memory."

CLIFFORD MARSHALL

The celebration included music by Beechwood music instructor Kerstin Westerburg. Emcee was Donald Uvanitte of Mahoney & Wright Insurance. Corporate sponsors recognized included Bank of Braintree, American Medical Response of Massachusetts, and Coastal Development.

ENC, Public Schools Sign Partnership Agreement

President Kent Hill of Eastern Nazarene College and Supt. Eugene Creedon of the Quincy Public Schools recently signed their first agreement for partnership in professional development in a ceremony at ENC.

The professional improvement programs offered by the Professional Development Institute of the college are for teachers, counselors, and administrators in schools. The partnership agreement was also signed by Dr. Janet DiTullio, director of curriculum and professional development for the school system, and Arthur Woodward, director of the Professional Development Institute at the college.

The signing culminated the joint work of ENC faculty and administrators and Quincy Public Schools administrators, beginning before Woodward retired from the Quincy public system in 1995. The agreement pact facilitates customized professional development programs in the school system, prepared in cooperation with the college.

In the fall of 1995, ENC established PDI as part of the Division of Graduate Studies. Woodward, a retired school administrator and adjunct professor in the Graduate Division and LEAD Program, was hired by the college to develop and direct the new PDI.

The ENC PDI programs are available programs are available to all interested teachers, counselors, and administrators in school districts in the Greater Boston-Southeast Massachusetts area. Other school district have been invited to prepare professional development agreements with the ENC PDI.

ENC is a Professional Development Provider, appointed by the Massachusetts Department of Education and holds membership in the Greater Boston Middle School Alliance and the South Shore High School Alliance.

Officials said the signing of the professional development partnership agreement by the Quincy Public Schools and ENC marks a significant step in the availability of offerings for continued professional improvement required of certified educational personnel by the Massachusetts Education Reform Act of 1993.

Reunion Of Jewish Groups Planned

The Quincy Jewish Committee is planning a reunion of two groups associated with the more than 1,000 families who participated in the programs of the Quincy Jewish Community Center from 1945 to its closing in 1982.

Reunion Coordinator Arthur Gabel said a performance will be given in September 1997 with Ruth Coran Sholes directing rehearsals next summer. Music director will be Frances Mesher, long-time pianist for all of the shows.

Committee members Alma Hoffman, Gloria Levine, Emily Prigot, Marylyn Schultz and Dorothy Weiner are calling former players regarding the event. A planning meeting is schedued for Thursday, Dec. 19.

For more information, call Arthur Gabel at 472-5316.

Accent On Quincy Center

By BRUCE ARONS
Quincy Center Development Coordinator

Positive Happenings

If you are a proud parent or grand parent of a new born, you should stop into ENCHANTMENTS. This is Quincy Center's newest specialty store located at 1241 Hancock St. The store offers infant and layette clothing, sizes 1-24 months and caters to special occasion attire. (Christening, First Communion, wedding parties, etc.) Owner/operator Susan Holland has created a very special niche for herself and provides a very unique service to Quincy consumers. The inventory is creative and affordable. It is difficult to leave the store without making a purchase! Ms. Holland is a participant in Quincy 2000's Commercial Signage Improvement Program. Look for an official grand opening very soon.

I have great news for all "genuine deli sandwich" purists. The first of next year, or sooner, a "New York Style" delicatessen will be opening up at 1524 Hancock St. (former site of Cafe' Et Bon Appetite.) Frank Rojas, the owner and operator, promises patrons fresh meats prepared daily. Everything will be cooked in-house, brisket, ham, chicken, etc. Rojas is also participating in The Quincy 2000 Signage Improvement Program. He told me that doing business in Quincy has been a very friendly experience to date and is looking forward to the opening of his store.

Speaking of doing business in Quincy, Quincy 2000 is putting the finishing touches on its soon to be printed business related publication titled, "Doing Business in Quincy." This publication is designed to make it easier for owners of new and existing businesses to work their way through the permitting process and to provide essential information about city departments. "Doing Business in Quincy" includes a description of the various city departments, their locations, telephone numbers, general hours of operation and persons in charge of the departments. Developed with the input of city officials and business persons, this guide is the first of its kind for the City of Quincy. It also highlights business development programs available through Quincy 2000, the economic development agency of the city. This is another great example of the user-friendly approach being encouraged and practiced in the city of Quincy by both the public and private sector.

Hobbytown Stores at 1515 Hancock St. is bursting with a new and expanded inventory. In addition to their hobby and model supplies, they now carry a wide range of the most popular toys and games available for this coming holiday season. Check out the bright, new signage on their display windows and toys inside.

Rogers Jewelry Store located in the BankBoston Building, 1402 Hancock St., has just signed anew long-term lease, assuring their presence in Quincy Center for some time to come. The store is family-owned and operated by Mark, Isobel and Jeff Bertman. I spoke to Jeff and he is very confident in Quincy Center's future as a strong specialty retail district. Currently, the family is making a major investment in interior improvements to their store along with installing new exterior signage on their storefront. Jeff is a graduate gemologist and current president of the Massachusetts and Rhode Island Jewelry Association. Rogers Jewelry boasts a wide-range of gold products and watches at honest values.

Quinwell Travel Service, 1424 Hancock St., is another Quincy Center business that has recently signed a new long-term lease to remain downtown.

Both Rogers Jewelry and Quinwell Travel Service leases were negotiated for by Joe Harnon from Key Realty. Great team effort by all involved in retaining healthy business in Quincy Center!

I attended the grand opening celebration of the Welch Family's Hancock Park last week. This is the newest assisted living, rehabilitation and nursing center on the South Shore. It is located in Quincy Center at 164 Parkingway.

Until next time, be sure to check out what's "happening" in downtown Quincy Center--and feel free to write me with your comments and suggestions. (Mailing Address: The Quincy 2000 Corp., 1250 Hancock St., Suite 802N, Quincy, MA 02169.)

Durkin Seeks Traffic Signal Problems Solution

Ward 5 City Councillor Stephen Durkin has asked City Traffic Engineer Jack Gillon to make improvements in traffic signalization along Hancock Street in Wollaston.

Durkin recently sent a letter to Gillon that stated:

"Over the past few months, I have received numerous and repeated complaints about the new traffic signalization at intersections along Hancock Street in Wollaston.

"Recurrent complaints are that vehicles are getting backed up coming out of streets such as Elm Avenue, Beale Street, Beach Street, Willet Street and Woodbine Street. Once the light turns green, frequently as few as two or three cars get through the intersection. Motorists complain that they often sit for more than five minutes at a traffic light and that, but of frustration, they simply run the light.

"This is obviously a dangerous situation and I ask that you take the necessary steps to improve the system.

"Finally, there should be 'No Turns On Red' signs installed at intersection of Beach and Hancock. The absence of such signs poses a danger to pedestrians."

Nostalgic Radio Program At Adams Academy Tonight

The Quincy Historical Society will present a nostalgic program on the early days of radio in Quincy, with presentations by WJDA President Jay Asher and media historian Donna Halper.

The event will be held tonight (Thursday) at 7:30 p.m. at the Adams Academy, 8 Adams St., Quincy.

Halper will talk about early Quincy performers and Quincy programs on Boston radio, local technical pioneers and a Quincy radio station, WRES, that existed in the late 1920s. Asher will present his account of the earliest days of radio, then take up the story of the founding of WJDA, as the ongoing voice of Quincy and the South Shore, in 1947.

A question and answer period will follow. Admission is free and all are welcome.

Downtown Action Plan Gets Council Go-Ahead

Ward 4 Councillor Michael D'Amico said he recently heard from a member of the Cranston, R.I. City Council who was seeking information about the plan.

Ward 3 Councillor Patrick McDermott also noted that the plan can always be revised if necessary.

"This is a working document," he said. "It's not etched in stone."

Also speaking in favor of the action plan were QCBPA President Daniel Flynn, Anthony Agnitti of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce and Quincy Business Council, and Dr. Jeremiah Ryan, president of Quincy College.

Arons, for his part, said he appreciates the council's support and looks forward to implementing the plan.

"We're very, very anxious to get started," he said.

The main goals for Quincy Center, as outlined in the plan, include:

•Create a superior physical environment.

•Create an imageable and clearly defined downtown center.

•Establish a focused managerial structure and implementation agenda for Quincy Center.

•Establish a comprehensive marketing plan for the district.

Arons has said in the past funding for some components of the plan will come from federal and state grants, city monies and private donations.

Maurice Freedman, senior consultant of Sasaki Associates, said Monday night it is hoped $4.50 or more in private investment will be put into the plan for every public dollar. The plans calls for a private sector development program that would cost between $98 million and $127 million as well as $22 million-$30 million in public sector improvements.

The private spending called for includes $22 million for a 150-room hotel at Presidents Place, $48 million to $68 million in office and retail construction and improvements, and $16 million for another 1,575 parking spaces.

The public spending called for, which includes city and state monies, includes projects such as the Quincy Center Concourse, expansion of the Ross and MBTA parking garages, commercial building improvements and new lighting, streets signs and open space.

The plan, which has short-term, mid-term (1-3 years) and long-term (3-5 years) goals, focuses mainly on three distinct downtown areas: the civic/institutional/office area, which includes City Hall, Quincy College, the Thomas Crane Public Library and other key buildings; the traditional retail subdistrict (lower Hancock Street), and the suburban retail subdistrict between Granite Street, School Street and Burgin Parkway.

The action plan also calls for the three areas to be united by a "100 percent corner" which would make the intersection of Chestnut, Granite and Hancock Streets a "people place" for shoppers and pedestrians.

Freedman has said that in order for Quincy Center to be revitalized, three key components must be in place: a diverse retail market mix, an attractive physical environmental and solid governmental structure and interest. The plan outlines ways to attract new businesses and also improve the look of the downtown through improved signage and other improvements.

The Quincy Center Action Plan has been presented to local property owners, merchants and others prior to the council and has generally received a favorable reaction, according to Arons.

City To Participate In Wheelchair Program

The city is planning to participate in a California-based program that provides wheelchairs to physically challenged individuals around the globe.

The City Council, prompted by Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers, voted unanimously Monday night to participate in the Wheels for the World (WFTW) program, which collects and restores previously-owned wheelchairs and delivers them to people in need throughout the world.

Ayers, chairman of the council's Handicapped Affairs Committee, said Quincy's SWAP program, which he co-founded three years ago, will work in conjunction with WFTW. He noted that SWAP, which accepts donations of not only wheelchairs but also crutches, canes, walkers and other equipment for the disabled, has grown to the point where it serves not only the city but also the towns of Weymouth and Milton.

Following a brief video presentation about Wheels for the World, Ayers said that by joining forces with WFTW, the city will be helping to strengthen both programs.

"What we're trying to do is put together a network," he said.

Judie Dacey, chairperson of the Quincy Commission on Disability, said the success of the SWAP program should be used to benefit those outside the three communities it serves.

"It's a really nice feeling to know we have a stockpile of goodies (for the disabled)," she said. "But now we want to share them."

WFTW New England Coordinator Dennis Hanrahan, who himself is disabled, said his organization's needs are great.

"We need more wheelchairs," said Hanrahan. "For those who have nothing, it will be worth more than gold."

Ayers noted that after the SWAP program gathers a sufficient surplus of equipment, that which is to be donated to Wheels for the World will be collected by WFTW officials at no cost to the city.

Those wishing to donate equipment to the SWAP program may drop it off at Ayers Handicap Conversion Center, 44B East Squantum St., Squantum or call Ayers at 328-0102.

In a related matter last night, the council agreed, at Dacey's request, to change the name of the Handicapped Affairs Committee to the Committee on the Disabled.

A Breakthrough in Hearing Aid Technology.

If you've been waiting for the very latest hearing technology, we have important news for you.

Starkey's new Sequel Series hearing instruments offer performance advantages unlike any hearing aid we've offered before.

To achieve this preferred level of performance, an ideal hearing aid should not contribute undesirable perceptual elements – like distortion – that can result in poor sound reproduction, especially at high levels.

Thanks to Starkey's breakthrough SMArT Systems Technology, Sequel's sophisticated anti-distortion and efficient circuitry achieves an entirely new plateau in sound quality and performance.

Meeting Set Nov. 26 To Expedite Flood Relief

Highway Department Project Manager Marie Rose told councillors the best way to have the Furnace Brook project speeded up would be to convince state Environmental Affairs Secretary Trudy Coxe to accept an environmental notification form rather than an environmental impact report, or E.I.R., which is more detailed and time-consuming.

Angry residents at the council meeting said they want the work done as quickly as possible. Nine residents, including Linda Johnson of Connell Street, voiced their frustrations during a public hearing called for by D'Amico.

"This problem really has to be solved," said Johnson.

The Army Corps of Engineers' Town Brook plan, which includes projects on Bigelow Street and Brook Road, is to be completed in January, when the final touches are put on a 4,000-foot underwater storm water tunnel.

However, the Furnace Brook work is a separate highway department plan to install wider drainage channels, culverts and other improvements for miles along Furnace Brook and Cunningham Brook, from west of the Southeast Expressway near the Milton line to Black's Creek near Merrymount Park.

Curbside Leaf Pickup Program Extended

Quincy's curbside lead pickup program has been extended to accommodate the large quantity of leaves still in various neighborhoods.

Leaves will be picked up curbside through Friday, Dec. 6. After that, residents can bring leaves and other yard waste to the compost pile at the DPW yard at 55 Sea St., from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Monday through Saturday (year round).

Leaves and yard waste are not accepted with regular trash because the state Department of Environmental Protection prohibits their disposal in Massachusetts landfills.

For more information, call Michael Wheelwright, DPW Program Manager, at 376-1901.

'Name That Horse' Contest Clarification

Elementary students in the city's public and parochial schools recently participated in a "Name That Horse" contest sponsored by the city and Quirk Auto Companies.

Winners were selected by a committee consisting of representatives of Mayor James Sheets, Police Chief Francis Mullen, School Supt. Eugene Creedon, the City Council and Quirk Auto.

The winning names chosen for the three horses that will be a part of the Quincy Police Department's new Mounted Patrol Unit were Patriot, Crackerjack and Champion. In the event that more than one student entered a name, students' names were placed in a box and a drawing was held to determine the winner.

An article in last week's Quincy Sun did not clearly state how the duplicate entries were judged. The Sun regrets any confusion this may have caused.

Building Self Confidence Focus At The Institute Of Okinawan Karate

RUSS CENTAMORE (left), director of the Institute of Okinawan Karate, 28 Chestnut St., Quincy Center, conducts a children's class while an adult class wraps up a recent session. The school, one of the South Shore's oldest karate schools teaching traditional Chinese-Okinawan karate, has been located in Quincy since its inception in 1962.

By LIAM FITZGERALD

Carl Fradet of Quincy's Institute of Okinawan Karate has this simple offering to those interested in studying the art:

"Take your shoes off and join us."

Over the past 34 years, men, women and children of all ages and backgrounds have studied at the Quincy school, which Fradet says teaches people "confidence in handling themselves."

"The bigger and better person can walk away from most any situation," said Fradet, a 2nd Dan and the school's administrator. "Ours is an art of close contact, degree of accuracy and the disabling of an opponent. People who have studied the art can do both: walk away or handle the situation."

Russ Centamore, 3rd Dan, a certified instructor and the institute's director since January 1995, concurred.

"Once you gain enough self-confidence, you can usually pick up a problem before it becomes one," said Centamore, 50, a native of Houghs Neck and a Quincy High School graduate.

The school, located at 28 Chestnut St., Quincy Center, is one of the South Shore's oldest karate schools teaching traditional Chinese-Okinawan karate, dating back to 1962.

The school was started in Quincy Square by retired Quincy police officer Carmen Diramio and Braintree police officer Forrest Sanborn, said Jack Summers, 7th Dan and master instructor at the school.

Diramio later left the school, and when Sanborn died, Summers agreed to take over and run the school in the mid-1980s.

Along with Sensei George Bosworth, a 5th Dan, Summers conducted the school in the North Quincy area. Three years ago, Summers "semi-retired," but when Bosworth passed away in January 1995, he came back to help keep the school up and running.

"George was with me 28 years, and when he died, I came back to the school, because I didn't want it to be abolished," said Summers, 70, who has over 40 years of experience in the martial arts. "The school has been constantly going since 1962, with no gaps or shutdowns, so I didn't want to see anything happen to it."

Centamore, who has co-owned Bromfield Camera in Boston with his brother for 32 years, called Summers a "leader who wanted to keep us together. He goes to dozens of schools, gets people going, then walks away from it. His goal is to keep the art alive.

"He's amazing. He's so dedicated and devoted. He participates in the class while he teaches it, sweats with you, which is the way you get respect. That's who you want teaching and who you want to work with. He's the 'teacher's teacher.'"

"We're very lucky and fortunate to have one of the finest and most dedicated artists, with 40-plus years in system who's well-respected in all styles," said Fradet. "Jack is our mentor. He's a mountain."

Following Bosworth's death, Centamore and Fradet were handed the reins and decided to find a different location for the school.

"When he (Bosworth) passed away, Russ and I thought it would be a shame to let it all go to waste," said Fradet, co-owner of the Corner Food Mart on Hancock St.

So for a year and a half, the school was run out of the Quincy Armory while they searched for a Quincy site. This past April, the school moved into its present location.

"I always knew we'd stay in the Quincy area," said Centamore, who came back to the school five years ago after a leave of absence. "This is a great spot, centrally located in Quincy Center."

The school is the "headquarters" for 22 schools around the country and in Europe, including Florida, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Maine and Rhode Island and Germany, said Summers. Several associated schools in surrounding towns meet with the Quincy school several times a year to hold senior workouts to coordinate any changes from Okinawa.

"We introduce new styles, including changes in the system we get from Okinawa, which we filter into our classes," said Fradet.

So what happens when you attend a class at the school?

Most classes start with stretching and warming-up exercises to build strength and coordination. The classes proceed to Katas, or forms, which help with coordination and timing that consists of pre-arranged movements. These pre-arrangements are a basis of self-defense and help build cardiovascular conditioning, because there are several speeds at which the moves are performed.

The last part of the class is hands-on exercises with a partner to simulate realistic conditions that not only help the students protect themselves, but also help release tension that builds up from the day-to-day problems.

The school is equipped with floor mats that are safe and fun for children to practice grappling and throwing techniques, as well as sparring equipment for advanced students to participate in controlled combat conditions.

Rather than be forced to catch up on their own, students who are unable to grasp some of the concepts are assisted individually by a higher ranked student.

"If you fall behind, the next in charge will take you aside to help you out, like a personal instructor," said Centamore. "You're not just thrown into the class and left to fend for yourself. Everyone's real helpful and here to have a lot of fun. It's a real close-knit group."

Said Summers: "It's a hands-on deal, like having a semi-personal trainer to oversee you. I consider it family, because it's on such a personal basis. It gets more personal as you move up. It's also good for discipline and body conditioning."

Among the several certified instructors teaching at the school are senior instructors Ray Adelsburg and Jack Dowd, both 6th Dans with over 25 years of experience in the art, and Billy Giovanucci, a 3rd Dan.

In a typical adult class, there are between 15 and 25 students, while between 10 and 15 students are in each children's class, said Fradet.

Students are matched up according to height and rank, said Fradet, so "a female white belt is not up against a male brown belt. We don't want someone overpowering or overwhelming another student."

The school, which Fradet said has a "diverse ranking of students," also has classes devoted to advanced students.

In the children's classes, the instructors attempt "to teach the discipline necessary for karate, without making it boring or redundant for them. We want

PRESIDENTS' DEFENSIVE END Steve Wiltshire (76) moves in for the tackle as Barnstable quarterback Mike Griffin is stopped dead in his tracks Friday night. Quincy's defense was solid for the second straight game, holding the balanced Red Raiders' offense to just 10 points.

Quincy Preparing For Showdown With North Quincy On Thanksgiving

Presidents Turn It Over To Barnstable, 17-12

By LIAM FITZGERALD

Once again, turnovers told the story for Quincy in Friday night's 17-12 loss to Old Colony League foe Barnstable at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

The turnover that caused the most damage came with less than a minute left in the first half with Quincy holding a 6-3 lead.

Dropping back from Barnstable's 47-yard line, Presidents quarterback Mark Glynn threw the ball over the middle, right into the hands of Barnstable linebacker Matt Colebourn, who returned it 50 yards for a touchdown.

After an unsportsmanlike penalty, Red Raiders placekicker Mickey Huse booted a 35-yard point after with 28 seconds left for a 10-6 halftime lead.

"That interception killed us," said Quincy head coach Peter Chella. "Without it, it's a different game. I'm disappointed, because we played pretty well and could have won the game. I was hoping for a better outcome, but it just didn't work out for us."

The President started the third quarter with good field position, at their own 38. On the second play of the drive, Quincy halfback Kevin Connolly (24 rushes, 69 yards) gained six yards before fumbling the ball away. The Red Raiders' Anthony Nese recovered the ball at Quincy's 45, but the Presidents defense tightened up and forced Barnstable to punt.

"Our defense played real tough, as it has the last few games," said Chella. "It's the offense that has struggled the second half of the season."

Early in the fourth quarter, the Red Raiders added to their lead when Colebourn scampered into the end zone on a 10-yard jaunt. Huse's extra point put the Red Raiders comfortably ahead, 17-6.

Glynn (4 for 12 for 59 yards, two touchdowns, two interceptions) tried to rally the Presidents, connecting with Shaun Faherty on a 20-yard touchdown pass with 46 seconds left. Quincy went for two, but Glynn could not find an open receiver and the pass sailed out of the back of the end zone.

On the ensuing onside kick by Quincy, the ball popped out of the pile, but the Red Raiders recovered and ran out the clock to seal the victory.

"The kids came back and hung tough, never giving up," said Chella. "They played a good game, but those mistakes really hurt our chances to win."

With the loss, Quincy dropped to 3-6 overall, 2-5 in the OCL. Barnstable, meanwhile, evened its overall record at 5-5 and improved to 5-2 in the OCL.

The Presidents are off until the annual Thanksgiving Day showdown against crosstown rival North Quincy (7-2, 5-2) at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

Friday night, Barnstable's Huse snapped a scoreless tie with a 21-yard field goal on the first play of the second quarter.

On the ensuing kickoff, Quincy's Andrew Byrne returned it 36 yards to Barnstable's 49 and the Presidents' offense went to work. On a fourth and goal from the 3, Glynn rolled out to the right and hit fullback Tim Santos, who found the right corner of the end zone for the score with 6:24 left in the half. Quincy faked the extra point, with the holder Glynn running to the right side before being tackled by a slew of Red Raider defenders short of the goal line.

On the first play of its next possession, Barnstable fumbled it away, only to get it back on the very next play when Glynn's pass was picked off by Mike Griffin.

Quincy's defense then forced the Red Raiders to punt with just under three minutes left in the half, and the Presidents took over at their own 41. Connolly rushed four times for 21 yards and Glynn followed with a one-yard run on third and one for a first down at Barnstable's 37. After Quincy was penalized 10 yards for an illegal block on the next play, Glynn dropped back to pass and threw the fateful interception.

John Fink of Quincy has been named to the Dean's List at Newbury College for the summer semester.

He is majoring in culinary arts.

Squirt B's Down Dedham

The Quincy Squirt B's continued their winning ways with a 5-1 victory over Greater Boston League rival Dedham.

With Pat (Toaster) Maloney unbeatable between the pipes, the Quincy defense held the hustling Dedham scoring machine in check.

The defensive pairings of Danny Durocher and (Joltin') Joe Norris, Myles Clancy and Paul (Graz) Grazioso, (Geno) Nazarro and George (Snowman) Snowling covered Dedham like a blanket.

Quincy's offense displayed a balanced attack with five players lighting the lamp. Captain Pat Casper initiated the scoring with a goal set up by Andy (General) Patten.

Jake (Terminator) O'Donnell made it 2-0 on an assist from Danny Sullivan. Sullivan pumped in the third goal and Patten fired home Quincy's fourth goal. Snowling iced the game with Quincy's fifth goal, set up by Matt (Flash) Haskins and Richie (Stonewall) Stone.

Forwards Andy McDonagh, Paul (Powerhouse) Lennon, (Dangerous) Dennis Rugg and Billy (The Kid) Cox also contributed to the total team effort. Coaches Frank Casper and Dick Morrissey are pleased with the team's play as it prepares for two GBL tilts this weekend.

Girls Pee Wee II Win

The Pee Wee II squad is coached by Jean Gill and Jill Rennie.

North Quincy Readies For Quincy

Raiders Rebound By Thumping Tigers, 38-6

A QUESTION MARK before the season, North Quincy's offensive linemen have been the unsung heroes of a successful Red Raiders squad. The line has gelled as a unit, blocking well and opening huge holes for the running backs and protecting the quarterbacks, giving them time to find an open receiver. Front row (from left): Jim Callahan, Mike Leeber, Brian Wells and Ron Logan. Back row (from left): Kevin Sullivan, Chuck O'Brien, co-captain Norm Connell, Todd DeBoer and Matt Allen. Missing is right tackle Kevin Bowes.

No, this is not a misprint: Brian Walsh rushed for a career-high 348 yards on 18 carries and scored four touchdowns in North Quincy's 38-6 romp at Taunton last Friday night.

"Just amazing," said North head coach Ken McPhee. "That was the most anyone has rushed for in a game since I've been here, and I've been here 25 years. And if it's not the most ever at North, it has to be pretty close."

Not only does Walsh hold the single-season rushing record at North with 1,834 yards, but he is also on pace to become the first North Quincy or Quincy player to rush for 2,000 yards in one season.

The statistics Walsh has compiled this season are nothing short of extraordinary: 203 rushing yards a game, 19 touchdowns and 122 of the 223 points scored by the Red Raiders. Perhaps even more amazing is the fact that he was often replaced by junior running back Jason Turner and others after a half or three quarters of action.

The senior tailback wasted no time getting started against the Tigers, bolting 65 yards for a touchdown on North's first play from scrimmage.

In the first five minutes of the game, both teams lost two fumbles. The Red Raiders (7-2 overall, 5-2 Old Colony League) took advantage of a Tiger fumble to score their second touchdown. Fullback Mike Powers got the call, scoring on a nine-yard touchdown jaunt.

The Red Raiders faked the point after, with holder Tim Semchenko passing to Walsh for the two-point conversion. Later in the first quarter, Walsh went 26 yards around left end for a score to make it 20-0, North.

North scored again before halftime when Walsh ran two yards up the middle for a touchdown and a 26-0 lead at the break.

The Tigers (2-8, 1-7) scored their only touchdown in the third quarter after recovering a fumble on North's 15-yard line. Quarterback Ryan Colton tossed a two-yard touchdown pass to flanker Pat Dunderdale.

The visitors from North came right back, scoring on the first play of the fourth quarter when Walsh went up the middle, cut right and galloped 77 yards for his fourth score. Turner (over 125 rushing yards) closed out the scoring for North with a 34-yard touchdown jaunt.

NQ senior quarterback Tom Coughlin returned from a shoulder injury and impressed his coach with his performance.

"We didn't think he'd be back, but he played very well and threw the ball well," said McPhee, adding that Coughlin will be "100 percent healthy" for the Thanksgiving Day battle against rival Quincy.

North, which is in a three-way tie with Falmouth and Barnstable for second place in the OCL, is idle until that Nov. 28 showdown against the Presidents at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

In the win over Taunton, McPhee was also pleased with the effort of North's offensive line, which opened holes for Walsh, Powers and Turner, and the defensive line, which held Taunton's offense in check the entire game.

"The offensive line did an incredible job as always and the defense also played very well," said McPhee. "They took care of their business, and I'm proud of them for that."

North Quincy Girls Bow To Barnstable In Semifinals

For the third time this season, Barnstable's volleyball team defeated North Quincy, this time by a 3-1 count in the state Division I semifinals in Mattapoisett last Wednesday night.

Following its win over North Quincy, Barnstable (27-0) defended its state Division I title with a 3-1 victory over Dracut in Sunday's championship match. The triumph in the final was Barnstable's 52nd consecutive victory.

Against North Quincy, Barnstable proved too strong after the teams split two hard-fought games and prevailed 15-13, 11-15, 15-4, 15-8.

The two teams battled it out in the first game, with ties at 8-8, 10-10 and 13-13, before Barnstable clinched the game with a frontline slam.

In the second game, North (22-4) jumped out to a 5-2 lead, only to see Barnstable reel off six straight points to surge ahead, 8-5. North's Sarah Downing pulled her team even with some strong serving, before teammate Erica Crawford followed suit to give North a 12-8 lead. Ahead 14-9, Crawford recorded a solid kill to secure the 15-11 win.

Barnstable started to take control in the third game, collecting five points to start the game. North's Katie Jellison rallied North with a couple of service aces to close the gap to 6-4, but Barnstable's Karolyn Zikas and Merrill Lawson ripped off nine consecutive points to close out the game.

In the fourth and final game, Barnstable took a quick 7-2 lead, then doubled it to 14-4 before Katie Jellison, Crawford and Erica Mitchell cut the lead to 14-8. Barnstable then closed the match as North's Ginty and Crawford were unable to prevent the game-winning shot.

McPhee Named EMass Football Coach Of The Year

KEN McPHEE

Ken McPhee, head coach of the North Quincy High School football team, was recently named the Eastern Massachusetts Association of Interscholastic Football Officials (EMAIFO) 1996 Coach of the Year.

In his 15th year as North's head coach, McPhee said he was "surprised" to win the award, adding that "it was very nice to get, a very nice honor."

The award is given annually to the coach who demonstrates the highest quality of sportsmanship and coaching fundamentals. The award reflects on the coach, the team, the school and the entire community.

"It's a reflection on how hard my assistants work and how the kids respond to what we ask them to do," said McPhee, who has led the Red Raiders to a 7-2 record heading into their Thanksgiving Day showdown against Quincy. "It reflects on the school and the program, and I'm just part of the program.

"The most important thing is that we build good teams who understand the real meaning of the sport, which is about sportsmanship and playing hard, smart football."

The award reads: "Awarded annually to the high school football coach who best exemplifies high ethical standards in teaching the game of football to boys so that they become men who demonstrate the finest traits of American sportsmanship."

Pee Wee B's Undefeated

The Quincy Pee Wee B's remained undefeated this season with a 4-1 win over Westwood and a 3-3 tie against Waltham.

Against Waltham, Quincy's Miah Hasson tied the game in the last minute, assisted by Chopper Walsh and Conso. Hasson and Mark Tetreault notched the other Quincy scores.

The B's look to keep their winning streak intact with a game this Sunday in Quincy at 4:20 p.m.

IN A STALLING PATTERN?

When a car stalls, it is usually an intermittent problem that can be detected by a diagnostic checkup. To help isolate the problem, car owners should be able to tell their auto technicians when stalling occurs (when the engine is hot or cold?). If stalling occurs only when the engine is cold, it may be that carbon buildup in the engine's intake manifold is the culprit. If the engine stalls when it is fully warmed up, and it seems to idle too slowly, then a defective idle air control in the fuel injection system may be at fault. On certain automobiles, a broken speedometer cable may cause the engine to stall. These cars' on-board computers depend on an electrical speed signal, which is not produced if the cable is inoperable. The computer uses the speed signal to reset the idle air control which, in turn, regulates idle speed.

HINT: If a car is experiencing a peculiar stalling problem, the speedometer speed signal should be checked to see if it is correct.

OVER EXERTION: 'SNO JOKE

In some parts of the country, you can almost mark your calendar by the cautions to be careful about shoveling - snow. In regions where it rarely, if ever, snows, the same warnings may apply to attempting heavy landscaping or other household chores. Whatever the cause — including a blast of exercise—sudden physical stress to a body that is unaccustomed to it can cause a rise in blood pressure and heart rate, and that may result in a heart attack. The danger is real even in a young person, especially for people with heart disease risk factors such as smoking, family history of heart disease, high blood pressure, high cholesterol, or a sedentary life-style. If you do pick up a shovel, watch for these warning signs of over exertion: chest pain, dizziness, a racing heart. Stop working, rest, and begin more gradually, taking plenty of breaks. Even better, hire a neighborhood teen!

P.S. People from areas where it doesn't usually snow are particularly at risk if they travel to a snowy locale and suddenly pitch in shoveling.

Regular exercise helps you stay in shape all year-round so you don't need to worry about overexertion when you are suddenly called to the task. A Thought For The Week

While most people do not like to think about their own death or that of a close family member, funeral pre-planning and/or pre-financing can ease possible problems associated with death. There are many reasons that people pre-plan their own Funerals.

One of the most important is that pre-planning makes one's wishes known; it eases the burden placed upon the family at a time when clear decisions may be difficult to make.

Pre-planning does away with any possible disagreement among the bereaved as to what to do and how much to spend. Pre-planning gives one a piece of mind in knowing arrangements have been made in advance.

If you have any questions concerning pre-planning and/or prefinancing, please feel free to contact us by phone or stop by for consultation. We will answer all questions honestly and frankly and in the strictest of confidence. At no obligation, of course . . .

New Site Plan Public Hearings Called

The City Council and Quincy Planning Board will again have to hold public hearings on a proposed site plan review process because the council has not acted on the matter since it was last discussed in June.

The council, at the request of Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi who introduced the proposal, will hold a public hearing Monday, Jan. 13 at 7 p.m. in the City Council Chambers at City Hall.

In addition, City Solicitor Stephen McGrath said the matter would be referred to the Planning Board, which also must hold another public hearing. McGrath said the two hearings were needed because the council has not taken a vote on the site plan review ordinance proposal since the public hearing it held on the issue June 3.

Raymondi's proposed ordinance would create a "site plan review" process designed to protect neighborhoods from increased traffic and other problems caused by new commercial buildings and apartments.

Specifically, the site plan review would apply to new buildings or additions to existing ones larger than 10,000 square feet and apartments with 13 or more units. Single-family homes would not be affected.

The process would make it mandatory for developers to show that their project would have no adverse effect on the surrounding neighborhood and to agree to pay for any necessary street improvements. In addition, city department heads would have to review the project.

The Planning Board would have the final say on each project. It would be given the authority to request changes on anything from architecture to landscaping.

Raymondi introduced the measure after Shaw's Supermarkets announced plans to build a new "superstore" at the site of its current store and the former Quinoil headquarters on Quincy Avenue. Under current zoning laws, Shaw's needed only to obtain a permit from the Quincy Building Department to get the project off the ground.

Councillors said in June they would meet with Planning Board members and business community representatives over the summer to discuss possible amendments to the proposed ordinance, but the council had not brought up the matter publicly since until Monday night.

Steps Off At 12:15 P.M. Sunday;
Dedicated In Memory Of Sheriff Marshall

77 Units Featured In Christmas Parade

The 45th annual Quincy Christmas Festival Parade featuring more than 77 marching units will kick off Sunday at 12:30 p.m. at School and Elm Sts. and proceed north along Hancock St. to North Quincy High School.

There will be no grand marshal this year as the event is being dedicated to the memory of Norfolk County Sheriff Clifford Marshall, who died in August. Boston Red Sox third baseman Tim Naehring, a close member of the Marshall family, will be the parade's special guest at the family's request.

Members of the Marshall family riding in the parade will include the late sheriff's wife Louise, his four sons Clifford III, Michael Sr., Paul and Christopher; their wives and fiancees, Patricia Marshall, Kathryn Marshall, Brandi Courington and Allison Sanderson; and Rachel Anne Marshall and Michael Marshall Jr., the sheriff's grandchildren.

There will also be a contingent of color guard, Boston and Norfolk District Court officers, and deputy sheriffs participating in he sheriff's memory.

Approximately 200,000 people are expected to line the 2.8-mile route which will feature more than 77 marching units, including floats, bands and returning favorites as well as some new attractions.

This year's parade theme is "A Story Book Christmas." The parade will feature 22 floats, 22 bands, 20 specialty units and 13 color guards, more than last year.

"This is just going to be an awesome parade, the best ever," said Michael McFarland, chairman of the Quincy Christmas Festival Parade Committee. "And the biggest ever."

Parade participants will include some new faces and attractions as well as some returning favorites, he added. Leading the parade will be the Quincy Police Department's new Mounted Patrol Unit, which hit the streets of Quincy for the first time next week.

"The officers are going to look very impressive riding their horses and wearing their sharp new uniforms," said McFarland.

Another highlight, he noted, will be the participation of two bands consisting of about 350 members of the Temple Aleppo Shriners from Wilmington.

Float participants include Quincy College, Quincy Hospital, Cerebral Palsy of the South Shore, Citizens Bank, Quincy Center Professional and Business Association, Thomas Crane Public Library, Woodward School, Jack Conway Real Estate, Quincy Rotary Club, Bare Cove Fire Museum, North Quincy Knights of Columbus, John Flag, Koch Club, Quincy Partnership, Quincy 2000, Quincy Fire Department, Quincy High School, Quincy Point Congregational Church, DARE Organization, Quincy District Court, Victory Church and Joseph Montoya.

And, of course, Santa will wave to spectators from his float sponsored by the Quincy Christmas Festival Committee.

Floats will compete for eight awards and a total of $4,250 in prize money. The grand prize winner for the best overall float will re-

Squantum Gardens Lease With Navy Seen By December

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Mayor James Sheets said the city may sign a lease for the Squantum Gardens property with the U.S. Navy by early December.

Sheets made his comments Monday following his return from a Navy Community Conference in San Diego, Calif. last week. The city is planning to use the Navy-owned site, empty since the closing of the South Weymouth Naval Air Station, for a 35,000-square-foot senior center that would include senior housing, a health clinic and more.

The mayor, who discussed the Squantum Gardens site with Deputy Secretary of the Navy William Cassidy while attending last week's conference, said he has learned the Navy--which currently only signs one-year leases that can be renewed for up to five years for it properties--is planning to change its lease policy. Once that happens, the city and Navy can agree on the final terms of the lease.

Sheets said he could not speculate on how long the lease will be for, although he added that the policy change will result in longer leases. Currently, the lease is in the hands of Philadelphia-based Greg Preston, a civilian real estate specialist who works for the Navy, he said.

"We will be renegotiating that portion of our lease that relates to the length of the lease," said the mayor.

Sheets said if all goes according to plan, a lease-signing ceremony will be held early next month, and Cassidy may come to Quincy to attend the event.

"The Navy is in full agreement with our use for the site," he said.

Following the signing of the lease, he added, the city will continue its public hearings being held in Quincy's six wards to receive community input about the plan. After that, tenant criteria would have to be determined and applications from prospective tenants reviewed.

Sheets said tenants will then be selected by lottery and seniors likely will begin moving into Squantum Gardens by February or March.

A separate issue which Sheets said will not affect the tenant timetable is the eventual conveyance of the land that will make the city the owner of the property. There are several ways the land could be conveyed for nothing--including a possible sponsorship from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development or the Department of Health and Human Services--and the possibility the deal could transpire through a negotiated sale, something the mayor said would result in "very little cost" to the city.

"We want the land conveyed for nothing, but which conveyance method we will use hasn't been determined yet," he said. "We will continue to work on those issues."

$30,000 State Grant To Benefit City Hall

Massachusetts Secretary of State William Galvin, chairman of the Massachusetts Historical Commission, announces that the City Hall in Quincy has received a $30,000 grant from the Massachusetts Preservation Fund.

The Quincy project is among 65 local projects across the state to be awarded a grant for the repair and restoration of deteriorating historic structures.

"Local historic resources hold a special place in the hearts of Massachusetts citizens. Therefore, I am extremely pleased that my office will be able to find 65 local projects representing a total of $3,550,500 in state monies. We are further pleased to assist in saving these local treasures for future generations to enjoy," said Galvin.

The City Hall grant is for interior restoration work using historical documentation, door and window repairs, carpentry, and

Senior Citizen Police Academy Planned

The Quincy Police Department is planning to begin a Senior Citizen Police Academy at the city's five senior complexes.

The department, following up on the success of its five Citizen Police Academies, is beginning the new program because some seniors have been unable to get to the Quincy Police Station to attend the previous sessions. The Senior Citizen Police Academy will be a modified version of the Citizen Police Academy, holding one session per week for five weeks instead of the 10-week Citizen Police Program.

Topics selected for the Senior Academy will educate seniors about police work as well as about subjects that concern them most including Traffic and Pedestrian Safety, Senior Abuse, Personal Safety for Seniors and Crime Prevention for Seniors.

Other topics will include Police Stress, Criminal Investigations, Community Policing, Drug Investiga-

HOW TO GET A GOOD NIGHT'S SLEEP

Desperate. That's the way most people feel when they have trouble sleeping. It is a frightening feeling that can end up affecting both mental and physical health. Fortunately, there are things you can do to break the sleepless cycle. Ironically, the first often involves becoming more active - exercising, preferably in the afternoon. The body doesn't relax completely unless it has been fully active while awake. Second, make the bed a quiet refuge by blocking out light and noise as much as possible. Banish work papers, intense discussions, and other high-stress activities from the bedroom. Finally, avoid all stimulants (caffeine, nicotine, etc.), alcohol, and non-essential medications for several hours before turning in. P.S. Alcohol may help you fall asleep, but the quality of sleep is poor and waking in the middle of the night is more likely.

Most sleep problems can be helped relatively easily, especially by increasing one's exercise, decreasing one's stress level, and giving yourself enough time on the pillow. But if you are still having trouble, see your physician. At COMPREHENSIVE MEDICAL CARE, Dr. Lisa Antonelli and I are here to help. We are at 700 Congress St., Quincy. I am affiliated with Quincy Hospital and South Shore Hospitals. Call 472-2550 for an appointment. Presented as a public service for the benefit of all by the offices of COMPREHENSIVE MEDICAL CARE.

The Music Stopped

The appointment of Jack Flood as Norfolk County sheriff stopped the music before it could start for a few musical chairs in 1998.

Flood is not the pushover Republican Democrats would like to have seen Gov. William Weld name to fill the two-year unexpired term of Quincy Democrat Clifford Marshall, who died Aug. 28.

A long-time Democrat who switched to the GOP ranks last year, Flood is a former five-term state representative and a 1990 gubernatorial candidate from Canton, with political know-how, experience and ability to fill a campaign war chest for the 1998 election.

Democrats will have their work cut out trying to snatch back the sheriff's badge, and the $80,000 salary that goes with it, two years from now.

The appointment of Flood is sure to give potential Democrat candidates second thoughts. Senator Michael Morrissey who wanted to run has already indicated he won't. He's a friend of Flood, besides.

MORRISSEY

MARIANO

Rep. Ron Mariano who was interested in running reportedly has now changed his mind.

If either Morrissey or Mariano ran, it would have set those musical chairs in motion.

BELLOTTI

TOBIN

If Morrissey ran, Rep. Michael Bellotti and Rep. Steve Tobin might have made a run for the senate seat. And there could have been a surprise waiting in the wings. Former Senator Paul Harold, who vacated the seat in 1992 to run for Congress, was giving thought to winning it back.

If Harold ran and was elected it would open up a city council at-large seat.

HAROLD

Bellotti is more interested in a bid for the state auditor's post so his representative seat is almost sure to open up.

If Bellotti leaves his state representative seat, Ward 3 Councillor Pat McDermott and Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers would be tempted to make a run. And former Ward 3 Councillor Larry Chretien, who lost to Bellotti in 1992 in a close race, might give it another whirl.

McDERMOTT

CHRETIEN

Kevin Coughlin, community activist, would probably be interested in the Ward 3 seat if McDermott moved up to state representative.

If Tobin ran for senate, Ward 5 City Councillor Steve Durkin would probably be interested in Tobin's state representative seat for which he was once a candidate. City Councillor Mike Cheney might be, too.

If Mariano were to run for sheriff, there would be several Ward 2 candidates interested in his state representative seat. Among them, Mark Roberts, a Republican who was defeated by Dan Raymondi for the Ward 2 council seat and Keith McCray, a nephew of State Inspector General Robert Cerasoli and a former state representative. There is also speculation that Mike Marshall, son of the late sheriff, might be interested. Raymondi probably would not be.

But Flood's appointment as sheriff could keep a lot of this from happening.

Word is that Lt. Gov. Paul Cellucci pushed for Flood's appointment as a step toward rebuilding the Republican party after the election day disaster. Cellucci also wants a strong Republican named to fill out the term of Dist. Atty. William Delahunt who will be going to Washington as Congressman in the 10th District.

Flood is keeping Democrat Josephine Shea of Quincy as his top aide.

SHEA

That's a wise move. She has 21 years experience in the department, was Marshall's right arm, and became acting sheriff after his death. And was in strong contention herself for the appointment even though she is a Democrat.

She knows how the department ticks. With her still there, Flood won't be bogged down at a desk. He can be out through the county rebuilding an organization for the 1998 election and knowing the day-to-day operation of the department is in capable hands.

"I LOOK LIKE I lost the fight," quipped former Councillor Ted DeCristofaro referring to injuries he suffered when he tripped and fell while walking along Quincy Ave. the other day.

DeCRISTOFARO

DeCristofaro fell face down, suffering fractures of the nose and left wrist and black eyes.

DeCristofaro was doing an errand at the time. "I guess I was walking too fast," he said.

He hopes to be in shape in time to take part in the Quincy Christmas parade.

"I've got a good nurse," he says, referring to his wife and love, Betty.

THERE'S ANOTHER FREE lunch for either City Council President Peter Kolson or Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers riding on this year's Quincy-North Quincy football game.

KOLSON

AYERS

Kolson, who played for Quincy in the 1960s and Ayers for North in the 1970s have another luncheon bet on the outcome of the game.

Loser has to take the winner to a restaurant of his choice in the other's ward.

Kolson is on a roll with two Quincy wins the past two Thanksgiving but Ayers says this year belongs to him and North.

"This year," says Ayers, "I will be dining in Ward 1 with a big appetite. I hope Peter brings a big fat wallet because he's going to need it."

"No way," says Kolson. "Bruce will be picking up the tab again and it will be a good one. Right now I'm thinking of a nice, thick fillet mignon for openers. And I'll have a look at the lobster when I get there.

Incidentally, there has been something new added to this year's wager.

Both Kolson and Ayers still have their high school football jerseys. They've agreed that the loser not only will pick up the food tab but will wear the winner's jersey while they dine.

"I only hope Peter will be able to fit into my jersey," muses Ayers. "I know I won't have any trouble fitting into his but I won't have to anyway.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1914 postcard view of the Willard School in West Quincy taken shortly after the construction of what is now Furnace Brook Parkway in the foreground. The school was named in honor of Solomon Willard, architect of the Bunker Hill monument and father of the granite industry in America. Sold to private developers for office condominiums in 1984, they have carefully restored and preserved this building. Unfortunately, though, the small copper dome and spire atop the belfry are missing. To fully restore the original architectural beauty and design of the building, the present owners should replace it.

A Job Well Done

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

C Co. 1-182 IN (M) Braintree conducted a Combined Civil Disturbance training exercise Sunday, Nov. 17 at Braintree High School.

This emergency readiness training exercise, involving National Guard and state and local emergency readiness units, was built on several scenarios exposing the National Guard troops to situations they would encounter in an actual state emergency. Tops on the list of training goals for this exercise was crowd control. Few situations place Guard members in such an explosive situation as when they are called upon to disperse unruly groups.

At Braintree High, the unit was deployed to end the "siege" of a fictional food store where the manager was accused of price gouging following a severe storm. The angry crowd, played to the hilt by the Quincy and North Quincy Junior ROTC Cadets and members of E Co. 1-182 IN (M) assisted in the training. Curse words filled the air and the Guard members were pushed and poked, all in an effort to test their reaction to an angry crowd.

I would like to take this opportunity to thank all of the Quincy and North Quincy High School students who participated in our exercise.

The success of the training exercise was largely due to their self-discipline, maturity and enthusiasm. The students were able to witness and experience first hand how the responding emergency units performed their duties in an emergency situation.

After completion of the exercise all of the participants were invited back to the Braintree Armory for lunch and an after action review. This presented a unique opportunity for the students to talk to members of the Braintree Police and Fire Departments, American Medical Response EMTs and members of C Co. 1-182 Inf (M).

I would also like to thank Ltc. Ciampa, Quincy Air Force ROTC; Don Laing, American Medical Response Co.; Tony Siciliano of Quincy Emergency Management and all of their personnel for a job well done.

Thanks Hospice For Support During 'Emotionally Draining' Time

[The following letter was submitted for publication with the approval of the writers.]

Dear Mary Beth, Mary and Mary of Hospice of the South Shore:

We want to thank you for all your help and consideration during our mom's illness. The time prior to her death was emotionally draining but, Mary Beth, you were absolutely right: it was a time none of us would have wanted to do without.

The love you showed to all of us clearly is why Hospice of the South Shore is an organization that is raved about. Mom not only felt comfortable with you but also considered you her "friends." In fact, you were truly friends to the whole family.

Mom wanted her death to be painless, peaceful, and holy. Mary Beth, you upheld your responsibilities by helping the first two. We hope we helped with the third component.

You will all be in our prayers so that you will touch others as you have us. Hospice Month is a good time for others to learn about Hospice.

Thank you for being such a memorable part of our lives the last few months.

Keel Laid For First Nuclear Cruiser

Nov. 28 - Dec. 4

By PAUL HAROLD

An estimated 2,500 people attended the historic laying of the keel of the Navy's first nuclear-powered surface ship at the Fore River Shipyard.

The ceremony came 15 years after energy from nuclear fission was available in usable amounts.

The construction of the Long Beach guided light cruiser marked the beginning of the Navy's conversion from conventional power to nuclear power for surface vessels. Its construction also marked the start of the first vessel to be built from keel up since WWII.

Among the dignitaries participating in the ceremony were Admiral Jerault Wright, commander of the U.S. Atlantic Fleet and NATO supreme commander of the Atlantic and acting governor, Lt. Gov. Robert Murphy.

FIRST BOOKMOBILE LAUNCHED

Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa "launched" the city's first bookmobile with the presentation of keys to L. Paul Marini, chairman of the board of the Thomas Crane Public Library, in front of city hall.

The first run was at 12:30 p.m. to Adams and Hilma Streets in West Quincy, with three stops in Montclair later in the afternoon.

A copy of Historic Quincy was presented by the mayor as an addition to the mobile library's 3,000 books.

COUNCIL VOTES ITSELF EXPENSE ACCOUNT

Following the approval of a city referendum reducing the salaries from $3,000 to $1,500, the council passed a resolution providing itself with an expense account equal to that of department heads: $540 a year.

Provisions for the referendum were sponsored by Rep. Clifton Baker that put a cap on councillors' salaries at $1,500 and that for the mayor at $10,000.

Councillor Carl Anderson made the motion for the $540 amount, following a motion by Councillors Thomas Burgin and David McIntosh who called Baker's actions "an ill-conceived plot" and one that was said of "a conspiracy was too nice a name."

Citizens Donates $12,500 To Three City Organizations

Citizens Bank recently donated a total of $12,500 to three Quincy organizations.

Mayor James Sheets accepted the money on the city's behalf. The three donations included:

•$5,000 to Quincy Neighborhood Housing Services, an active participant in the revitalization of the city's neighborhoods since 1981. Quincy Savings Bank, which was bought out by Citizens, was a major contributor to QNHS, and Citizens is maintaining the partnership by providing funding for the management of property to house victims of domestic violence and the pre-development costs needed to acquire additional units.

•$5,000 to the U.S. Naval Shipbuilding Museum at the Fore River shipyard in Quincy Point. The museum includes the USS Salem, a heavy cruiser which serves as its centerpiece as well as the country's largest collection of military memorabilia outside of the National Archives.

•$2,500 to Father Bill's Place in Quincy, a shelter that serves the homeless of the city and immediate South Shore area. The 45-bed emergency and transitional shelter is operated by the Quincy Interfaith Sheltering Coalition.

Citizens officials said the bank's commitment to the community, in addition to monetary donations, is evidenced by the involvement of bank employees in most major neighborhood improvement efforts.

ASK YOUR LAWYER

by Kevin F. O'Donnell
ATTORNEY AT LAW

AN ATTORNEY ON YOUR SIDE

Those who are injured as the result of another driver's negligence may choose to deal directly with the other party's insurance company in pursuit of a settlement. Some, however, find the negotiation process distasteful to the point that they retain the services of a lawyer to communicate with the insurance company. For others, the decision to use an attorney may be more compelling. In general, it is a good idea to seek the services of a lawyer if the injuries appear to be long-term or permanently disabling. If the insurer is less than forthcoming with a payment, it may also be necessary to hire a lawyer. Then, there is the perception that representation by a lawyer brings a bigger settlement. According to one study conducted by, Rand's Institute for Civil Justice, people with lesser injuries are provided with a greater return as a result of having used a lawyer than are people with more serious cases who do not use lawyers.

HINT: Once those injured in automobile accidents choose to use an attorney, they may only communicate with the other party's insurance company through their attorneys.

As the victim of an automobile accident, the last thing you want to be burdened with is trying to deal with insurance companies to get the compensation you are due. Let my experience work for you. I will keep you fully informed about developments in your case and relieve much of the headaches involved in negotiations. To schedule a free consultation, call 773-2880. My office is conveniently located at Gridley Bryant Office Condominiums, 111 Willard Street.

Parking Area Dedicated At Our Lady Of Good Counsel

A new parking area was dedicated recently at Our Lady of Good Counsel Church, 227 Sea St., Merrymount.

The lot was blessed and dedicated by Rev. James Curtin, pastor.

Among those in attendance were Thomas Keddy, vice chairman of the Parish Pastoral Council and other council members as well as Finance Committee Chairman Matt McDonnell, Parish Building Committee Chairman Dave Kreuz, Kevin Madden of the Parking Area Planning Committee and a number of parishioners.

The parking area was dedicated in memory of the late Dorothy Cavanagh, whose husband Joseph donated a substantial sum to the parish to begin funding for the project. More than 130 other parishioners also assisted with donations.

The parish, which previously had no off-street provision for parking, can now provide parking spaces for about 40 automobiles. Handicapped access to the parish hall is another advantage provided by the new lot.

The Archdiocese of Boston obtained eight bids for the construction of the parking area and the low bidder, Derbes Bros. of Quincy, performed the work.

WJDA Radio Begins 'Giving Tree' Program

WJDA Radio (1300 AM) has begun a new annual holiday program called "The Giving Tree."

The program is designed to make the holidays brighter for those in the Quincy Community Action program Headstart, which serves pre-school children from low-income families in Quincy, Weymouth, Braintree and Hull. This year, 42 children will benefit from Headstart.

Through the new WJDA program, a number of "Giving Trees" have been scattered throughout the South Shore. Each tree contains ornaments with a specific small gift request for a child. People are encouraged to remove one from the tree and purchase the gift indicated.

Once a gift is purchased, each program participant is asked to wrap it--using the ornament as a gift-tag--and return it to either WJDA or the location from which the ornament was taken.

"Giving Trees" are available at WJDA (29 Brackett St.), Brewed Awakenings in Hingham Square and Columbian Square, Bartlett's Bakery in Rockland, the Weymouth Club, Roxie's on Southern Artery in Quincy, the River Bay Club on Brackett St., Cambridgeport Bank inside Roche Bros. in Quincy Point and both Braintree Cooperative Bank locations.

First Night Buttons Go On Sale Friday

Buttons for the fifth annual First Night Quincy celebration to be held Dec. 31 in Quincy Square officially go on sale Friday.

The eight-hour, non-alcoholic family event will be the largest to date, according to First Night Chairman Michael Cheney.

This year, there will be two added sites to visit, five more ice sculptures to view, five more outdoor performers, 15 more floats, bands and school groups in a parade, 5 percent more fireworks and a fifth year anniversary cake over five feet tall. Anyone wearing a First Night Button will receive a slice of the cake as long as the supply lasts.

There will be 24 locations with family entertainment that will take place at all sites. Free parking will be available.

Highlights will include an ice sculpture village, face painting, mask making, dancing, a laser show and more. New to this year's celebration will be a 64-page First Night Book with complete information about to the event that will be distributed to every house in Quincy and selected areas of Braintree, Weymouth and Canton beginning Friday.

Cheney said there again will be plenty of security at the event, at which there have never been any arrests or similar incidents.

"We take a great deal of pride in planning this spectacular alcohol and drug-free New Year's Eve family event," he said. "Planning this fifth year event began in January 1996 officially."

Buttons are $7 in advance, $10 if purchased at the event. Beginning Friday, they will be available at all Dunkin Donuts stores in Quincy, Stop & Shop stores in Quincy, Braintree and Weymouth; Roche Bros. in Quincy, Quincy Public Schools, the North Quincy-Quincy Thanksgiving Day football game and the Quincy Christmas Festival Christmas Parade.

There will be a first-time discount price of $5 for buttons purchased at the parade.

For more information, call the First Night Office at 376-1071.

$30,000 State Grant For City Hall

plaster and painting repair.

"This total of $3,550,500 represents the largest amount of funding allocated in one round, demonstrating that state funding for historic preservation equals the creation of jobs and continues to be wisely invested in Massachusetts neighborhoods. In this round of grants, state dollars will serve to spearhead major revitalization efforts, and stimulate the economy in numerous Massachusetts communities," Galvin said.

The Massachusetts Preservation Projects Fund was designed to benefit State Registry properties in public and non-profit use. It is a matching grant program for up to 50 percent of the total project cost. Therefore, the $3,500,500 in grants represents over $7 million that will be invested in local Massachusetts communities.

One feature of the program allows applicants to request up to 75 percent of total construction costs provided they establish an endowment fund for the long-term maintenance of the grant assisted property.

Business Leaders Address Alcohol Abuse Issue

A group of Quincy business leaders recently met at Quincy Hospital to discuss the issue of alcohol abuse in the workplace.

The conference was sponsored by the Mayor's Commission on the Family and the Alcohol Action Group of Impact Quincy.

Ralph DiPisa, CEO of Quincy Hospital, welcomed the group and commended the participants for taking an active interest in addressing the problem. DiPisa said it is much healthier to prevent alcohol abuse before it becomes a major health problem.

Linda Stice, executive director of the Commission on the Family, opened the conference by discussing the impact that alcohol abuse has on the workplace.

"The great majority of alcoholics in this country are employed, which negatively affects productivity as well as increasing the number of sick days, work-related accidents and grievance proceedings by the employee with an alcoho problem," said Stice.

Conference participants were led through a discussion on how to conduc an intervention, what signs may suggest an employee has an alcohol problem and the legal rights and responsibilities of employers.

Shawn Sheehan of Quincy Detox talked about how treatment can successfully help individuals arrest the disease of alcoholism and allow them to keep their jobs. He said that the threat of losing a job is often the catalyst that will motivate a person so seek help.

Bill Spinks, director of prevention and treatment services for Bay State Community Services, led the group through four steps supervisors can utilize if they suspect a problem exists. Those steps are observation, documentation, confrontation and referral.

Spinks said, "documentation is vitally important in addressing job performance. You are not trained as clinicians and should not be diagnosing alcoholism. You should focus on job performance only. The ultimate goal is to get the employees the help they deserve."

The conference was sparked by a public hearing held Nov. 30, of 1995 to address the issue of alcohol abuse in the city. As a result of that hearing, Mayor James Sheets suggested a conference be held to help educate employers about the effects of alcohol abuse in the workplace. The Hearing Panel produced a report that included 65 recommendations that address alcohol abuse.

For a free copy of the report or to attend future workplace conferences, call Steve Ward at Impact Quincy, 472-6027.

CONGRESSMAN-ELECT and Norfolk County District Attorney William Delahunt (second from right) visited a Quincy Title I Classroom at the Lincoln-Hancock School the day after he was elected to Congress. Delahunt discussed how federal funds were being spent in the Quincy schools with Title I Director Alicia Coletti, Lincoln-Hancock Principal Dennis Carini and School Supt. Eugene Creedon as fifth graders Josh Parthree, Jonathan Pittman, Chris Holt, Rocco Canale and Tim Donahue listened in on the conversation.

Your Roof: Does It Have A Potential Ice Problem?

(NAPS)—Ice dams, those cold-weather build-ups of ice at the lower edge on eaves or roofs and in gutters are formed when heat from the inside of your home escapes into the attic and through the roof decking. Snow then melts on the upper roof and runs downward to the eaves as water. When it reaches the cold eaves and gutters, however, it refreezes and the ice builds up. The result is water backing up under the shingles, where it can soak through the wood decking and into the attic, causing damage to ceilings and walls.

To make sure you do not have a potential ice dam problem:

- Check to see if your attic is properly insulated to today's energy standards to minimize heat escape through the ceiling.
- Determine if you have enough ventilation so moisture can escape.

The best way to have this potential problem checked out is to find an insulation contractor by looking in the Yellow Pages, calling a friend or neighbor or checking with your local insulation contractors association.

When ice builds up on your roof, water can back up under the shingles where it can soak through the wood decking and cause damage to ceilings and walls.

An insulation contractor will evaluate your home's insulation level and tell you where and how much you may need. Then he'll recommend a product that provides high thermal efficiency, such as CertainTeed's Insul Safe III® Blown-In Fiber Glass Insulation. Quality products such as this will provide total coverage including all nooks and crannies and tight eave areas.

In addition to proper insulation, effective air movement is important in an attic as well. Efficient attic ventilation will help draw any heat lost from the interior of a home up and out of the attic so the underside of the roof deck is not heated. Proper ventilation also helps heat build up escape in the summer, too.

Recently published is an informative brochure on insulation and ventilation. The brochure, called Everything You Wanted To Know About Insulation, Ventilation and Vapor Retarders, is available free by writing to: CertainTeed Home Institute, P.O. Box 860, Valley Forge, PA 19482, or calling 800-523-7844.

Habitat For Humanity To Build Homes At Granite Crossing

South Shore Habitat for Humanity, Mayor James Sheets and City Council members have announced that an eight-to-10 home community is to be built at Granite Crossing in Quincy Point.

The announcement was made yesterday (Tuesday) at the Adams Heights Men's Club.

The event included speeches by officers of South Shore Habitat's Board of Directors, Sheets, and councillors. A luncheon at the men's club followed.

Work has begun on the blasting of the granite quarry and construction of the homes is slated to begin in the spring. One of the homes will be a "House That Jill Built"--a home built entirely by women, including a woman architect.

Eight to 10 homes will be built over the next three years. The project is the largest for South Shore Habitat and among the largest of its kind in the Northeast.

South Shore Habitat for Humanity, a leading regional affiliate of Habitat for Humanity International, is an ecumenical, non-profit housing ministry that partners with low-income families in need of decent affordable housing. Raiders Looking To Stop Two-Game Thanksgiving Skid

North Wary Of Underdog Presidents

By LIAM FITZGERALD

With 15 Thanksgiving Day games under his belt, North Quincy High School head coach Ken McPhee realizes his team cannot take the Quincy Presidents lightly, despite their 3-6 record.

"No matter what has happened up to this point, you can throw out the records for this game," said McPhee, who this season has led North to a 7-2 mark heading into Thursday's showdown. "If you're not careful, the underdog will come up and bite you. You never really can predict what will happen."

The Red Raiders, who are seeking revenge following last year's 9-7 loss on a late field goal by Quincy's Tim Santos, would also avoid three consecutive Turkey Day losses with a win over the Presidents.

"Last year, they snuck one on us, but we'll be ready this year," said McPhee. "I'm still on the plus side record-wise at 7-6-2, and I hope to keep it that way. I'm looking forward to it. This is a big one for us."

Winners of four of their last five games, the Red Raiders are on a roll offensively, thanks in large part to senior halfback Brian Walsh, who has rushed for a city high school record 1,834 yards and scored 19 touchdowns in 1996.

Junior fullback Mike Powers and junior running back Jason Turner have also ignited the Red Raiders' powerful running attack and could play important roles in Thursday's clash.

With all the success the Red Raiders have had keeping the ball on the ground, McPhee sees no reason to drastically change the offensive game plan.

"They're going to have to stop Walsh, of course," said McPhee, whose offense averages nearly 25 points a contest. "We're not going to change a lot of things offensively, because a lot of what we have done has worked. If we do what we do and do it well, we'll be in a position to win the ballgame."

Another key player in the NQ offensive set is senior quarterback Tom Coughlin, who will make his first Turkey Day start following a shoulder injury nearly a month ago. After missing the Bridgewater-Raynham game, Coughlin came back last week against Taunton and is "completely healed," according to McPhee.

When North does pass, Coughlin will have an array of receivers to choose from, incldluing senior tight end Charlie Plaskasovitis, and junior Pat Egan, senior Tim Semcheko and senior co-captain Jim Finn, all wide receivers.

A lot of the Red Raiders' offensive outbursts, said McPhee, are a result of the inspired play of the offensive line, a question mark before the season began due to its inexperience.

"The offensive line has gelled very well," said McPhee. "Todd DeBoer and the others--Kevin Bowes, Brian Wells, Norm Connell and Mike Leeber, have done a tremendous job. Todd in particular has really stepped up and done an unbelievable job for us."

North's head coach is also aware of how tough the Presidents' defense has been this year, keeping Quincy within striking distance in all but two games.

"Their defense has played pretty well, so we know they'll be coming after us," said McPhee.

Meanwhile, the Red Raiders' defense has stifled opposing offenses in their seven wins, allowing just over 12 points a contest. Leading the charge on the defensive line have been defensive ends and co-captains Connell and Plaskasovitis, defensive tackles Bowes, DeBoer and Chuck O'Brien and nose guard Wells.

Talented linebackers Walsh, Frank McNamara and Shaun Donovan, cornerbacks and safeties Powers, Finn, Egan, Turner and Chris Bregoli have all played vital roles in the stingy North defense.

Against the Presidents, the Red Raiders will focus on containing senior halfback Kevin Connolly, who rushed for 127 yards in last year's Turkey Day game, and senior quarterback Mark Glynn, who has won both games he has started against North.

"They have the ingredients to be a very good football team," said McPhee. "They do have some personnel that can hurt you. Connolly is a formidable runner and the quarterback (Glynn) has never lost a Turkey Day game, so we have to stop those two guys. (Jon) Ryan's a good tight end, so we'll have to keep an eye on him, too."

Though their seasons have taken different directions, McPhee realizes his squad must go out and play sound football if it is to emerge victorious over the Presidents.

"Our kids are confident, but they also know what they have to do, which is go out and play their game," McPhee said. "If we play as well as we have the last few games, we'll be in good shape to win the game."

Avoiding Turnovers, 'Empty' Drives Keys For Presidents

Quincy Wants Redemption For Season

If Quincy High School is to capture its third straight Thanksgiving Day win, there are a few pitfalls the Presidents must avoid: turning the ball over in key situations and coming up empty on drives deep into North Quincy territory.

All season long, turnovers have plagued the Presidents, turning sure-fire victories into heartbreaking losses. Three interceptions returned for touchdowns proved to be the margin of victory for three President foes--Taunton, Weymouth and Barnstable, all by nine or fewer points.

And when Quincy (3-6) has had the ball, it has driven downfield, but often failed to cross the goal line. Besides Quincy, only two other Old Colony League teams--Taunton and Plymouth--have scored fewer than 100 points heading into Thanksgiving Day's action.

In nine games, the Presidents have accumulated only 92 points, half of which was amassed by senior halfback Kevin Connolly, who has seven touchdowns and two two-point conversions. In last year's 9-7 victory over North, Connolly excelled out of the backfield, collecting 127 yards rushing.

Against the Red Raiders, Quincy head coach Peter Chella said his offense will revolve around the play of co-captain Connolly and senior co-captain and quarterback Mark Glynn, who has led the Presidents to wins in both of his Turkey Day starts.

"Mark is cool, calm and collected, no matter the situation," said Chella. I'm sure he'll be that way on Thursday. If it comes down to one drive, I have a lot of confidence in him, because he has done it before."

In last year's win, Glynn found wide receiver Mike Sheffer on a fourth down play late in the game which led to Tim Santos' game-winning field goal.

"He never lost his cool," said Chella. "When his primary receiver was covered, he looked the other way and found an open receiver (Sheffer) and delivered it."

Against the hot Red Raiders (7-2), Chella said Quincy would not change much of its offensive game plan, because it has consistently moved the ball downfield against stingy defenses.

"The offense can move the ball, which they did against Weymouth," said Chella, "and put some points on the board against one of the toughest defenses in the state.

"Because we throw the ball well enough, I think can move the ball in the air, and we do enough on the ground, so we should be O.K.," he said. "We just need to get it into the end zone."

Senior fullback Santos, who also handles the placekicking duties, and junior running back Shaun Faherty will join Connolly in the backfield. Senior wide receivers Mark Belanger and Bob Walsh, senior flanker Andrew Byrne and senior tight end Jon Ryan will be the main targets of Glynn's passes.

The Presidents' defense, which Chella tabbed as the team's "saving grace the second half of the year," has the unenviable task of keeping senior tailback Brian Walsh (1,834 yards, 19 touchdowns) out of the Quincy end zone.

"You can never stop him (Walsh) 100 percent; he's too good of a runner," said Chella. "You just try to stop him enough to eke out a victory. He's really good, so we'll just do what we can defensively to try and shut him down."

Chella realizes the Red Raiders (24.7 points per game) have "a very explosive offense," but is confident the Quincy defense will turn it up a notch Thursday morning.

"We've been playing great defense the last few weeks, and I think we can play with this team," he said. "We'll set up our defense to stop what they do best and see what happens."

Defensive ends Wiltshire and junior Steve Maze, defensive tackles Feeley and Nichol and senior nose guard Anthony Lallis will attempt to penetrate NQ's line and stop Walsh before he gets started. Lending a hand will be linebackers Ryan, senior Mike Russo and junior Bill Armstrong, while cornerbacks Faherty and junior Pat Harrington and junior safeties Kevin Moore and Bryan Dunn plan on keeping a close eye on North's receiving corps.

For a team that has seen its share of ups and downs, a victory would be "fantastic," said Chella, adding that "it would make the season much more palatable."

Though the Presidents have played some solid games, Chella feels they have not yet played their best game of the year.

"The kids want to redeem themselves for having to deal with so many tough losses," he added, "and they're ready to go. It should be a great game. It always is."

SENIOR HALFBACK Brian Walsh, here accelerating past Don Bosco defenders, has been a force to be reckoned with in North Quincy's backfield. With 1,834 yards and 19 touchdowns this season, Walsh will be North's main offensive threat when the Red Raiders tangle with the Presidents.

STARTING HIS FIRST Turkey Day game, North Quincy senior quarterback Tom Coughlin aims to lead the Red Raiders to their first win over Quincy since 1993.

Raiders' Walsh Leading Scorer

Red Raider halfback Brian Walsh is the leading scorer going into the Thanksgiving Day classic between Quincy and North Quincy.

The 5-7, 175-pound senior has scored 19 touchdowns and 120 of North Quincy's 223 points in nine games. He exploded against Don Bosco for five of those touchdowns.

Among the leaders in the Old Colony League in scoring, Walsh is making his second appearance in the Turkey Day game.

Senior Jim Finn, North's jack of all trades, is second on the team with 25 points, including 19 extra points. Junior running backs Mike Powers and Jason Turner have each scored four touchdowns for 24 points.

Leading the way for Quincy is senior halfback Kevin Connolly, who has rushed for seven touchdowns and two two-point conversions for 46 points. Connolly has scored half of the Presidents' points in nine games. Senior quarterback Mark Glynn and senior fullback Tim Santos have each scored 14 points for Quincy.

Who Has The Advantage?

Picking a favorite in the Quincy-North Quincy Thanksgiving Day game is always difficult, and this year is no exception, despite the different directions the teams have taken.

North Quincy, winners of four of their last five games, appears to have the edge in the form of senior halfback Brian Walsh. No defense has been able to contain the 5-7, 175-pound juggernaut once he breaks through the line of scrimmage.

Walsh has rushed for a school record 1,834 yards and is on pace to become the first running back from either North Quincy High School or Quincy High School to rush for 2,000 yards in one season. He has scored 19 touchdowns and three two-point conversions and has accounted for 120 of North's 223 points this season.

Also dangerous when they carry the ball for North are juniors Mike Powers and Jason Turner, each of whom have four rushing touchdowns in 1996.

The Red Raiders' defense, although under-sized, has also made its presence felt throughout the season. In the Plymouth South game, the North defense intercepted six passes, including four picks in the first half.

The Presidents, losers of three of their last four, have encountered more than their fair share of bad luck this season. Quincy has dropped four games by nine or fewer points, including two-point losses to Bishop Stang and Taunton. In those four games, the Presidents either had the lead or was in striking distance before one play took them out of the game.

Working in the Presidents' favor has been their size up front and the play of their defense, which has kept Quincy in all but two games. Its offensive line has also been up to the task, opening holes for talented senior halfback Kevin Connolly. In nine games, Connolly has scored seven touchdowns and accounted for half of Quincy's points. In the Presidents' three wins, Connolly has scored three touchdowns and a two-point conversion.

Both clubs have lost to Bridgewater-Raynham and Barnstable and both have posted wins over Silver Lake and Plymouth South.

The three differences against common opponents were versus Falmouth, Weymouth and Taunton. North defeated those three teams, while Quincy lost to those three squads.

Quarterback 'Edge' Belongs To Glynn

Senior Mark Glynn will quarterback Quincy and Tom Coughlin will call the signals for North Quincy on Thanksgiving Day.

Glynn, making his third Turkey Day start, has led the Presidents to victories in the last two showdowns against North Quincy.

In last year's exciting 9-7 victory, Glynn connected with Mike Sheffer on a fourth down play late in the game that led to Tim Santos' game-winning field goal with 13 seconds left.

Unlike his first two years, Glynn has thrown the ball more often this year and has three touchdown passes. He has also shown good mobility, scoring two touchdowns and a two-point conversion.

Coughlin is making his first Turkey Day start at quarterback. With a powerful running game sparked by Brian Walsh, Coughlin has not been called upon to throw often, but has been successful the few times he has thrown the ball.

In his first start, Coughlin connected with tight end Charlie Plaskasovitis for a 43-yard touchdown against Stoughton. Against Don Bosco, Coughlin only attempted one pass--an 11-yard touchdown strike to Tim Semchenko. The athletic signal-caller has also rushed for two scores this season.

SENIOR QUARTERBACK Mark Glynn looks to make it three wins in three starts when he leads Quincy against North Quincy Thursday at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

Excitement, Last-Second Drama Mark Q-N Series

For sheer excitement and last-second drama, few football rivalries can match Quincy-North Quincy.

Close games have defined the series, especially in recent years.

Eleven of the last 13 meetings have been decided by less than one touchdown and conversion.

In 1985, 1987, 1989 and 1993 the outcome was in doubt until the final play of the game.

In 1984 and 1994 the Presidents grabbed interceptions in the final minutes to thwart comeback efforts by North Quincy.

In 1975 the Red Raiders won the only overtime game in the series, 15-8.

Of the 63 meetings between the Red Raiders and the Presidents, 35 have been decided by one touchdown and conversion or less.

The margin of victory has been greater than two scores in just 17 games.

Quincy's 1970 Team Undefeated

Quincy's 1970 team, coached by Hank Conroy, had a spotless 9-0 record.

The Presidents defeated North that year, 16-6, and won the Greater Boston League title.

1947 Game Drew Largest Crowd

There has always been debate as to which Quincy-North Quincy game drew the largest crowd.

It appears the 1947 game had the largest paid attendance, reported to have been 18,003. In 1946, the paid attendance was 16,065.

Many estimate that close to 25,000 saw the 1947 game, if you count those who watched for the walls and trees, and those who lined the bus yard where the MBTA garage now stands.

Thousands of extras also watched the 1946 contest.

The biggest previous crowd was the 15,000 who watched the 1939 game.

In recent years, an estimated 9,000-12,000 have attended the game.

North Perfect In 1966, 1992

North Quincy has twice entered the Thanksgiving game with a perfect record, 1966 and 1992.

Ken McPhee had a role in both as a starting guard on the 1966 club and the coach of the 1992 team.

The 1966 team, coached by the late Carl Leone, had a 9-0 record, won the Greater Boston League title, shared the Class A crown with Arlington and shut out Quincy, 8-0.

The 1992 team had an 11-0 record, won the Old Colony League title, beat Arlington in the Div. 1B Super Bowl and shut out Quincy, 20-0.

Sullivan Top Thanksgiving Game Coach

Bill Sullivan is Quincy High School's most successful head coach in Thanksgiving Day games.

He went 6-2 against North Quincy as a head coach from 1952 to 1959. Sullivan led the Presidents to five consecutive wins from 1954-58, the longest win streak in series' history.

He lost to the Red Raiders in 1953 and 1959.

Sullivan was an assistant to Munroe MacLean from 1939 to 1951.

The Series Record:
Quincy 31, North 27, 5 Ties

Entering the 64th meeting between Quincy and North Quincy, the Presidents hold the edge with 31 wins.

North has won 27 times. Five games have ended in ties. The contests in 1934, 1937, 1940 and 1983 were scoreless affairs. The 55th meeting in 1987 ended in a 14-14 tie.

The series was last deadlocked (7-7-3) going into the 1950 game.

This year Quincy is aiming for its third straight victory. The last time the Presidents accomplished the "three-peat" was 1982-84.

North will be trying to stop a two-game skid. The Raiders had won three straight before the Presidents snapped North's winning string in 1994.

Before Game Thursday
Scoreboard Dedication In Degan's Memory

William F. Degan, the U.S. Marshal and Quincy native who was killed in the line of duty four years ago, will be honored before Thursday's annual showdown between Quincy and North Quincy High School.

The panel on the new scoreboard at Veterans Memorial Stadium that reads "In Memory Of William F. Degan" will be unveiled in a ceremony scheduled to start at 9:45 a.m., said Bill Walker, athletic director for Quincy Public Schools.

A former North Quincy football player and member of the Quincy-North Quincy Football Hall of Fame, Degan played alongside current NQ head coach Ken McPhee in the late 1960's.

Attending the ceremony will be the Degan family, Mayor James Sheets, School Supt. Eugene Creedon and other city officials, Walker, and members of the William F. Degan Memorial Road Race committee, among others.

Included in the unveiling, according to Walker, will be two slide-in panels which read "Quincy" and "No. Quincy". The blue Quincy panel and the red North Quincy panel, both with white lettering, will "personalize the board for Quincy or North Quincy events," said Walker.

Four Raiders On OCL All-League First Team

Four North Quincy players have been named to the Old Colony League's all-league first team: senior halfback Brian Walsh, senior offensive guard Norm Connell, senior defensive end Charlie Plaskasovitis and senior defensive back Jim Finn. Connell, Plaskasovitis and Finn are the Red Raiders' co-captains.

Three other Red Raiders were named to the all-league honorable mention squad: juniors Mike Powers and Kevin Bowes and senior Todd DeBoer.

Wal-Mart Plans Moving Along

Plans are moving along for the Wal-Mart store scheduled to become part of the Granite Crossing shopping center in Quincy Point.

On Tuesday, Wal-Mart Stores Inc. sought a Parking Lot License as well as permission to install four underground 1,000-gallon propane tanks behind the building site at 300 Falls Blvd. from the Quincy License Board.

The propane would be used to fuel fork lifts and other necessary machinery at the store.

D.J. MacKinnon, president of Atlantic Development in Hingham, the project developer said in September construction of the store could begin as early as late winter.

MacKinnon also said at the time Wal-Mart should open the new store sometime next summer.

The Granite Crossing project, which also includes a Roche Bros. Supermarket that already has opened, received approval from the City Council in late 1994.

Presidents Golf Course To Use MWRA Fertilizer

The Massachusetts Water Resources Authority (MWRA) announces that the Wollaston Recreation Facility will be using MWRA's Bay State Organic fertilizer on Presidents Golf Course.

"We commend Presidents Golf Course for its commitment to the environment and we're certain that the course will be a greener place as a result of using the fertilizer," said MWRA Executive Director Douglas B. MacDonald.

This is the second year Presidents placed a 20-ton order.

Bay State Organic is manufactured from treated wastewater sludge collected at MWRA's Deer and Nut Island treatments plants. The sludge is treated biologically, dewatered and then dried at high temperatures to kill all germs and bacteria.

The MWRA has been manufacturing pelletized fertilizer at the Fore River shipyard in Quincy since December 1991, when sludge dumping in the Boston Harbor stopped. The fertilizer manufacturing facility is privately operated by New England Fertilizer Company, which markets the fertilizer in bulk quantities in agricultural regions throughout the country.

In 1995, MWRA's local fertilizer program resulted in the distribution of almost 300 tons of Bay State Organic; 108 tons were sold commercially, and 177 tons were donated to MWRA sewer customer communities. Last year's total has already been exceeded in 1996. Twenty-one Massachusetts retailers carried Bay Organic this year.

"We encourage everyone to use this recycled, organic compound," said MacDonald. "Bay State Organic causes less nutrient pollution than other kinds of fertilizers and is therefore better for the environment."

Many of the MWRA's sewerage customer communities have been taking advantage of the availability of Bay State Organic at no charge for use or public property. The communities include Malden, Boston, Wellesley, Canton, Everett, Hingham, Westwood, Burlington, Arlington, Medford, Bedford, Melrose, Wakefield, Winchester, Woburn, Waltham, Winthrop, Framingham, Ashland, Belmont, Cambridge, Chelsea, Milton, Norwood, Newton, Stoneham and Revere.

The fertilizer settings include public housing grounds, parks, school grounds, athletic fields, public golf courses, cemetery grounds, a non-profit community garden and landscaped areas.

The Metropolitan District Commission also fertilizes with Bay State Organic. Officials said golf course superintendents, public works managers and homeowners are attracted to the product's gradual release of nutrients, its ability to improve soil quality and environmental safety.

Marie's Kitchen

BY MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Dell's Pineapple Whipped Cream Cake

At a recent gathering of our group of friends, our friend Dell made the most delicious different exotic looking dessert. In addition to the usual pumpkin pie, I am definitely making her dessert for Thanksgiving.

Dell's Pineapple Whipped Cream Cake

3 pkgs. lady fingers (can be purchased at any market)
1 pint all purpose cream
1 large package cream cheese
1 small package cream cheese
3/4 cup sugar
1 can pineapple pie filling (20 oz.) Do not use plain pineapple.
1 small jar maraschino cherries

Separate lady fingers and line sides and bottom of a large spring form pan. Set aside. Whip the cream. Beat sugar and cream cheese and then fold it into the whipped cream. Beat slightly.

Spread cheese mix, pineapple and lady fingers in layers and top with the pineapple pie mixture. Spoon a little cheese mix and maraschino cherries in center of the top. Chill overnight. It serves 12.

I've had several requests for a quick turkey stuffing. Here it is.

Easy Turkey Stuffing

2 stalks celery, cut up
1 small onion, cut up
6 ounces ground beef (or pork)
1 egg
1/2 bag stuffing mix
1 tablespoon Bell's seasoning
2 tablespoons oil
1/2 cup seasoned bread crumbs grated cheese and white wine are both optional salt and pepper to taste
extra water or crumbs according to the feel of the mixture.

Saute celery and onion. Add hamburg and the wine. Add the stuffing mix (that you have soaked in water). Stir and cook covered. Add the seasoned bread crumbs and an egg, cook for another few minutes until blended. At this point, add the water or a few more crumbs if you want. Cool and then add loosely in the turkey cavity when it is ready to bake. I usually secure the cavity with aluminum foil. Happy Thanksgiving!

Delahunt Named To Two House Committees

After a week-long orientation in Washington, Congressman-elect William Delahunt has been named to serve on House committees which reflect the needs of his coastal District and his own background in law enforcement.

The Democratic Caucus has agreed to Delahunt's request for assignment to the House Committee on Resources, which oversees a wide range of environmental and coastal issues. He was also assigned to serve on the House Judiciary Committee, a tribute to his 21 years as Norfolk County district attorney and his pioneering work against domestic violence.

Of the three freshman members of the Massachusetts House delegation, Delahunt was the only one to garner assignments on two committees.

By making a spot on the Resource Committee his top priority, Delahunt said he will carry on the work of his predecessor, Congress-man Gerry Studds, whose major legislative contribu-tions were under its juris-diction.

In a letter to colleagues, Delahunt said he was attracted by the breadth of the Resources Committee's environmental jurisdiction, from commercial and recrea-tional fishing to the national park system.

As a member of the Judiciary Committee, Delahunt will be involved in all matters relating to civil and criminal proceedings, federal courts and prisons, civil rights and liberties, immigration and naturalization, and a host of consumer issues. He will also use the assignment to enhance the federal commitment to combatting violence against women, an issue he stressed in his two decades in law enforcement.

Richard Allen Named CPC By National Funeral Service

Richard S. Allen, CPC, general manager and director of advanced planning services at Keohane and Pyre Funeral Homes in Quincy and Hingham, has earned the title of Certified Preplanning Consultant (CPC) from the National Foundation of Funeral Service (NFFS).

Allen earned the title after completing the foundation's nationally-recognized certification course and passing the certification test.

The CPC program offers participants the opportunity to enhance their level of professional performance and gain acknowledged expertise in promoting the benefits of preneed.

In addition, the certification program provides validation to state departments of insurance and other preneed regulating services.

The NFFS is an independent educational trust committed to providing advanced education regarding funeral service products, trends and issues.

Allen is a past board member of the Massachusetts Funeral Directors Association, past chairman of the Preneed Insurance Committee and a charter committee member of the New England Funeral Trust. He has been affiliated with the Keohane and Pyre Funeral Homes for the past 21 years.

Average $56 Tax Bill Hike Seen For Homeowners

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The city's homeowners will pay an average $56 higher tax bill under Mayor James Sheets' proposed tax plan for Fiscal Year 1997.

The plan was brought to the City Council Monday night by Board of Assessors Chairman Marion Fantucchio. It was put into committee without discussion and a public hearing on the proposed FY97 tax rates was scheduled for Monday, Dec. 16 at 7:15 p.m. in the Council Chambers at City Hall.

Sheets' plan calls for new tax rates of $31.31 (per $1,000) for Commercial, Industrial and Personal Property--also known as CIPP--and $14.92 for residential property, increases of 73 cents and 38 cents respectively. Last year, the rates were $30.58 and $14.54.

The increase totals about 2.6 percent for residential property and just below that for CIPP.

The mayor has said the tax increase--the largest the city has seen in three years--is necessary to cover a 4 percent pay hike for city workers and an expected decrease in state education and Lottery aid in Fiscal Year 1998, which begins next July 1.

The owner of an average single-family home, valued at $141,100 will pay $2,105 this fiscal year. Last year, the average homeowner's tax bill for a home valued at $140,900 increased from $2,019 to $2,049.

Under the new rates, business owners will pay about 33 percent of Quincy's tax levy of $81.1 million. As was the case last year, the city has opted to tax commercial, industrial and personal property at 169 percent of the levy which is less than the state maximum of 175 percent required under state law.

Homeowners will pay about 67 percent of the levy, despite the fact that residential property accounts for about 78 percent of the total value of real estate in the city.

Total commercial property valuations will decrease slightly, from $965.2 million in FY96 to $963.9 million in FY97. Residential values will rise minimally, from $3.39 billion to $3.41 billion.

Property taxes are the largest single source of revenue for the city's budget (about 60 percent of it) which was $143.1 million this year. The rest comes from local receipts, including sewer and water bills, excise taxes and other fees as well as state aid.

Council Meets In Executive Session

City Plans Strategy Against Court Action

The City Council went into executive session for 40 minutes Monday night to discuss legal strategies to fight a Land Court challenge over a proposed Marina Bay condominium development.

Councillors discussed the matter with Peter Koff, the special counsel hired for the case. The council again will meet in executive session to consult with Koff in January.

Koff, working with City Solicitor Stephen McGrath, is representing the city against Braintree developer Lloyd Geisinger. He is appealing the council's July vote against his plan to build 268 condominiums on a 17-acre tract in the heart of Marina Bay.

The appeal is scheduled to be heard in the state court by Judge Leon Lombardi sometime in the future, according to Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers, whose ward includes Marina Bay.

Geisinger, owner of Marina Court Associates and Thorndike Properties, filed the Land Court Appeal in August, a month after the council voted 8-1 against his plan. He has accused Ayers and other councillors of rejecting the project for political reasons.

Councillors, however, backed by the Marina Bay Neighborhood Association, said the project does not meet the requirements of the city's Planned Unit Development (PUD) zoning law because it is too large for the site and would be too disruptive to neighbors.

Geisinger has said the project, which has been approved by the Planning Board and other city departments, does meet the PUD requirements.

Mayor James Sheets and Ayers have said the city hired Koff because he has considerable expertise in zoning law. In 1991, he was hired to handle legal and environmental disputes with the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority about the location of a sewage sludge treatment plant at the Fore River shipyard, which the MWRA owns.

The city opposed the plant, but a Suffolk County Superior Court judge upheld the location.

Christmas Parade Draws Huge Crowd Despite Weather

DARE Program, Woodward School, QHS Big Float Winners

Floats by the DARE Program, the Woodward School and Quincy High School were the big winners in the 45th annual Quincy Christmas Festival Parade Sunday which attracted an estimated 175,000 to 200,000 spectators despite wet skies.

Parade Committee Chairman Michael McFarland said because of drizzly weather, attendance was down from last year's attendance of 250,000.

"But the people's spirits weren't dampened," he said. "Everyone had a wonderful time."

Children and adults of all ages lined Hancock St. from Quincy Center to North Quincy High School to watch this year's event, which featured more than 77 bands, floats, color guards and specialty units.

In addition, the late Norfolk County Sheriff Clifford Marshall--who died in August--was honored at the event by the presence of several family members and Tim Naehring, Boston Red Sox third basemen and a close friend of the Marshall family, all of whom rode in the parade.

Following the parade, an awards ceremony was held at North Quincy High School for the float, band and color guard winners.

The DARE (Drug Awareness Resistance Education) Program took the grand prize of $1,500 cash and the Fr. Thomas Tierney Trophy for its float with the theme, "Windows To The World."

The Woodward School received the $1,000 first prize for its float entitled "Gingerbread Christmas."

Quincy High won the Mayor's Trophy for Best Quincy Float.

Other cash winners included floats by the Bare Cove Fire Museum, second prize, $750; Cerebral Palsy of the South Shore (with the theme "Happy Endings"), third prize, $500; Koch Club ("Little Drummer Boy"), fourth prize, $250; Quincy Point Congregational Church ("The Greatest Picture Book"), fifth prize, $250 and Quincy Fire Department ("The Grinch That Stole Christmas"), fifth prize, $250.

Jack Conway Company won the commercial category trophy for its float entitled "The Nutcracker."

The awards ceremony also featured presentations to the top bands and color guards. Band winners included:

•Division I: Pittsfield High School, first place; Chicopee Comprehensive High, second place and Norton High, third place.

•Division II: Douglas High School and Immaculate Heart of Mary tied for first place. No second or third place award was given.

•Division III: David Prouty High, first place; Southbridge High, second place and Weymouth High, third place.

•Division IV: New Bedford High was the sole entry.

The Quincy Police Department took first place in the senior color guard category. Other winners were the Massachusetts State Police, who took second place and Women's Auxiliary of the George F. Bryan VFW Post in Quincy which placed third.

The Chairman's Trophy to a Quincy Christmas Festival Parade Committee volunteer was presented to John Noonan.

The theme of this year's parade, "A Story Book Christmas," was submitted by Mrs. M.L. Hawke of Hingham who was among those who rode in the event.

RICK COBBAN on stilts has become a favorite of annual viewers of the Quincy Christmas Festival Parade. Cobban has been a regular at the event for years.

First Night Buttons Hot Item At Parade

More than $3,000 worth of First Night Quincy buttons were sold at Sunday's annual Quincy Christmas Festival Parade, according to First Nigh Chairman and City Councillor Michael Cheney.

Cheney said parade sales were up 30 percent from last year despite the inclement weather and lighter crowd.

"This year, the word is out to purchase your buttons early in order to take advantage of substantial savings," Cheney said.

Buttons are now on sale for $7 at Dunkin Donuts, Stop & Shop, Shaws, Osco Drug, City Hall, Quincy Center Business and Professional Association's downtown office. The price will be $10 on the night of the event.

A First Night button allows individuals admission to any of the 24 entertainment sites as well as substantial savings on souvenirs or any item purchased at the First Night store located in Presidents Place or at the Quincy Center for Technical Education.

"Excitement is building as we draw closer to the event," Cheney said. "People are excited about the return of the laser light show, the ice sculptures and

Help Still Available For Flood Victims

Residents and small business owners who have suffered damage from the October storm flooding can still find help by telephone and at the National Guard Armory in Quincy.

Massachusetts Emergency Management Agency (MEMA) Director Peter LaPorte urges anyone who was impacted by the storm and may be eligible for funding to act immediately.

"Anyone who may be eligible for recovery funds and has not yet registered needs to do that right now," said LaPorte. "All it takes is a call to 1-800-462-9029, and your information is taken by telephone."

He was referring to the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) Disaster Assistance teleregistration line which is open Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.

"Also," added LaPorte, "the Quincy Disaster Recovery Center is still open at the National Guard Armory. MEMA, FEMA, and the Small Business Administration are all there and eager to help you find the services you need. Remember, the deadline date is Dec. 24, and then it will be too late."

FIGHT BACK AGAINST THE FLU

It's easy to feel helpless against the march of the flu season, as it knocks out one after another of your friends and family like so many dominos. Don't despair! There are things you can do to protect yourself. Keep in mind that the pathway for the flu to get to you is from hand to mouth. Keep your hands away from your face as much as possible, and wash your hands frequently with antibacterial soap. Use tissues, and discard them immediately after use. Don't share anything that touches the face, from food and drink to such wintertime regulars as mufflers, nasal sprays, and medicine droppers. Remember that the flu is contagious for several days before symptoms appear, so treat everyone you come in contact with as a carrier, and take precautions. Antibiotics can't cure the flu, but they may be prescribed for patients considered vulnerable to secondary infections such as pneumonia.

P.S. Unlike a cold, the flu usually hits suddenly, brings a high fever and muscle pain, and can develop serious complications.

Flu shots offer good protection against winter illness, but they are not for everyone. Call your physician if you think this might be good for you. At COMPREHENSIVE MEDICAL CARE, Dr. Lisa Antonelli and I specialize in heart disease. I am affiliated with Quincy Hospital and South Shore Hospitals. Hours by appointment. We're at 700 Congress St., in Quincy. Call me or Dr. Lisa Antonelli with questions at 472-2550.

The Clifford Marshall School?

The new Quincy Point elementary school now underway is expected to be completed and ready for students by early 1998.

Sometime between now and then it will get a name. What will it be?

MARSHALL

DRAICCHIO

Well, if it was up to one long-time familiar Quincy Point figure, it would be named for another long-time familiar Quincy Point figure.

Retired Patrolman Bill Draicchio would like to see the honor go to the late Sheriff Clifford Marshall who died in August.

Draicchio, who retired from the police department in 1989, served 34 years directing traffic at Southern Artery and Washington St.

The thousands of youngsters he crossed there on their way to the Pollard School, St. Joseph's and Point Junior High School affectionately called him "Officer Bill."

"I think it would be quite appropriate to name the school for him," Draicchio says. He points out that Marshall was a Ward 2 city councillor and was a founder and president of the Ward 2 Civic Association.

"He was active in the Quincy Point community," he says. "He grew deep roots there."

Marshall launched his political career in 1965 as he won the Ward 2 council seat and went on to serve five terms.

His political career spanned 31 years including three terms as a state representative from the Quincy Point area and four as Norfolk County sheriff.

He never got to finish that fourth term as sheriff, losing a long, courageous battle against a brain tumor.

His political career was an impressive one. And a rare one. He never lost an election.

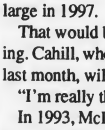
CHARLES McINTYRE, who made an unsuccessful but impressive political debut in the 1993 city election, may be back on the ballot next year.



McINTYRE

McIntyre, who finished a strong fourth in the three-seat City Council at-large race, says he is giving thought to making another run at-large in 1997.

That would be for the seat Tim Cahill will be leaving. Cahill, who was elected Norfolk County treasurer last month, will finish his council term next year.

"I'm really thinking about a run," says McIntyre.

In 1993, McIntyre was up against three incumbents, Joseph LaRaia, Michael Cheney and Cahill and former School Committeewoman Mary Collins. Cahill, LaRaia and Cheney finished in that order with McIntyre something like 632 votes behind Cheney.

This time there won't be an at-large incumbent in the field but there could be a ward councillor or two in the picture.

He could also have to contend with former Mayor Frank McCauley who has indicated he is thinking of running for the Cahill seat.

McIntyre, the son of the late Mayor-Senator James McIntyre, is now an assistant district attorney. He is back at that job after painful knee surgery for a torn ligament, the souvenir of his high school basketball days.

THINKING OUT LOUD: The old comfort station in the Hancock parking lot across from Quincy Court hasn't been open for some time. When it was in use, it became a hangout for undesirables. And even now, it attracts loiterers outside. Question: If it has become such a nuisance, why not tear it down and create a few more needed parking spaces?

RON DELLA CHIESA will be hosting a new "Music America" program Saturday nights from 7 p.m. to midnight on WPLM-FM/99.1 FM in Plymouth.

DELLA CHIESA

He will continue to do his Jazz Songbook from 7 to 9 p.m. on WGBH radio in Boston.

So you might say that listeners who really appreciate Ron's musical knowledge and that nice and easy style, will be getting him back-to-back Fridays and Saturdays.

Ron, as you may know, is a Quincy boy with deep roots. His late father, Aldo, was a Ward 3 city councillor and his late uncle, Amelio, was one of Quincy's all-time popular mayors. Ron's mom, Florence, still lives in Quincy.

IF YOU HAPPEN to bump into former School Committeeman Charles Sweeny, don't offer him a cigarette if you happen to have one. And if he has one and is looking for a match, don't give it to him.

SWEENY

Going into this week, Charlie hadn't had a cigarette since the Great American Smokeout anniversary Nov. 21.

His friend Dave Becker is encouraging him by reminding him he's not only saving his health but a lot of money, too. (The money got his attention.)

Charlie's better half, Betty, is quietly rooting for him. For the good of his health and the good of the house. The house was recently done over and she'd like to keep cigarette smoke out of the new curtains, carpeting, etc.

If you see Charlie, give him a few words of encouragement. And get his mind off cigarettes by asking him about his roses.

Charlie, you can do it.

TOM GILMARTIN, the political analyst, is recovering from muscle spasms and cuts, suffered when he fell down six stairs at his Weymouth home.

GILMARTIN

Gilmartin had planned to march in the Quincy Christmas parade last Sunday. Says he has missed only five or so of the 45 so far.

He may have missed the parade but his injuries aren't keeping him from looking at next year's city election possibilities.

IF THERE WAS ever an argument for limits on sale items, this is it:

A local supermarket recently had a well-advertised sale on two-liter bottles of Pepsi: 2 for $1.

A couple of hogs--a man and a woman--piled their shopping cart as high as they could with bottles. At the checkout counter, another customer said to the guy: "That should last you a year."

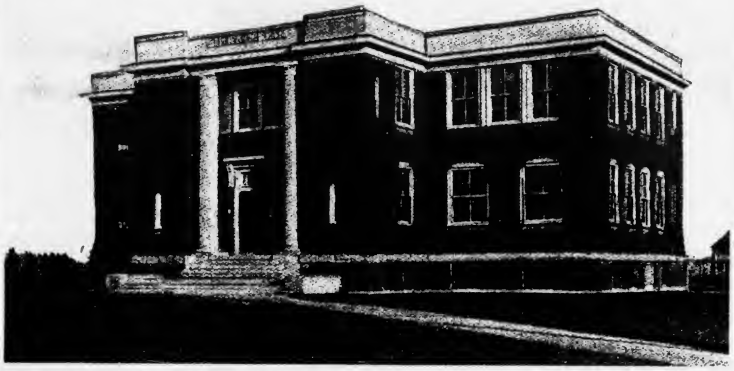
"Oh," said the guy, "this is nothing. I've already got 32 more bottles out in the trunk of the car." (He and the woman were making their second run on the Pepsi.)

The other customer's curiosity was aroused. Did they own a variety store or run a boarding house, he wondered. He had to ask:

"Why do you want all that Pepsi?"

And the guy answered: "Oh, the kids love it."

Scenes From Yesterday



THIS IS AN OLD postcard view of the Atherton Hough School built in 1911 at the corner of Manet Avenue and Sea Street in Houghs Neck. Originally only four rooms, the red brick building cost $18,000 to build. Later additions were completed in 1915, 1929 and 1949 bringing the total to 21 rooms with an auditorium. For a time before this school was built, Houghs Neck students were transported on a horse drawn barge to a point where they walked to the old Coddington school near Quincy Square.

Storm Drain Is Not The Only Answer To Flooding Problems

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

The City of Quincy recently installed a storm drain to relieve flooding problems in the section of Squantum which we old timers knew as "the sandpit" (Heath, Deerfield, Lansdowne and Essex Sts.).

I do not doubt that the drain has reduced the groundwater seepage through the porous sand/gravel into some cellars. No doubt it has provided an outlet for some surface runoff during rainstorms.

However, since the drain was installed, there have been no windstorms from southeast capable of creating coastal storm surges of maximum intensity in Quincy Bay, and wind is the primary cause of coastal flooding.

Prior to the reconstruction of East Squantum St. in 1992, a wind-driven surge from Quincy Bay would flood over the Squantum marsh, submerge the street (for a couple of hours), and fall into the westerly marsh (also called Billings Creek marsh, Marina Bay marsh, or subject marsh in other letters).

The westerly marsh (showing severe die-off since 1992) is connected by a ditch (30 feet wide, 2 1/2 feet deep) to Billings Creek, which drains through twin 10-feet culverts under Commander Shea Blvd. (the Jordan Marsh Co. road) into the Neponset River.

The reconstruction of East Squantum St. raised the level more than four feet above the pre-1992 surface. Flood waters which once would have flowed more than two feet deep over more than 600 feet of the street between the Moswetuset Hummock and the Victory Rd. entrance to Marina Bay, will now be diverted to residences bordering the Squantum marsh.

The next time a maximum intensity storm roars across Quincy Bay from the southeast, how high will the flood rise? Pushed by the wind and diverted by the fraudulently reconstructed East Squantum St., the surge will be forced into the funnel-shaped Squantum marsh. Like a miniature Bay of Fundy, the surge will rise in the narrow end of the funnel at the pumping station (and the sandpit, and Newland St., and residences bordering the marsh at Shore Acres).

How high will the storm surge rise? Who knows? My guess is that residents abutting the marsh may see flood levels more than a foot higher than would have occurred if the city had complied with the Conservation Commission Order of Conditions (#23, no diversion of flood waters and #24, install bridge or box culverts under East Squantum St.). Instead of complying with wetlands law, the city placed a revetment where the bridge should be (proof of fraudulent intent to disregard the Order of Conditions).

It is my belief that the new storm drain in the sandpit will not be able to carry off flood waters from a maximum intensity southeast storm. The only way this area can avoid such flooding is by compliance with the Quincy Conservation Commission's Order of Conditions.

Tom Galvin's Postcards 'Intriguing And Interesting'

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

As a lifelong resident of Quincy and a baby boomer, I have found the pictures from the collection of Tom Galvin to be most intriguing and interesting.

I know many others from my generation who have also derived great enjoyment from these pictures shown in The Quincy Sun, and some of us also collect his antique postcards.

Although the picture book about Quincy's history by Patricia Browne is very interesting, the Galvin collection is also appealing and relevant to those in my generation. I wish that he would publish a book of his collection so that we could look at it in one place.

If this is not likely, I wish that The Quincy Sun would make a special issue featuring the collection of Tom Galvin. I think it would be quite a hit with the people of Quincy.

Granite House Thanks Citizen's Bank For Help

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Speaking for the residents, families, and staff at Granite House, I would like to thank the Citizens Bank for a recent donation of $1,000 to our program. The money will be used to offset the costs of replacing our kitchen and dining room floors.

Granite House is a long-term residential education and treatment program for adolescents referred by Massachusetts Department of Mental Health. Granite House is a program of Bay State Community Services, Inc., a private, non-profit human service agency headquartered in Quincy.

I very much want to thank John O'Connor, President and CEO of Citizen's Bank, for valuing and assisting our program with this donation, and Elspeth Brown, Branch Manager at the 77 Granite Street Citizen's Bank, for helping to facilitate this process.

Salvage Committee Plans New Drive

By PAUL HAROLD

Dec. 5 - 11
46 Years Ago

The Quincy Federation Salvage Committee, the successor to the wartime Quincy Salvage Committee, announced plans for its 58th consecutive monthly waste paper salvage collection. Quincy was the only city in Mass. with a continuous salvage program

As in the past, proceeds would be allocated to a community service project. In this case, the funds would be donated to the auditorium fund for the new YMCA.

The original committee was established ion 1924 by D. Foster Taylor, while the successor committee was headed by Clarence Edwards.

During wartime, the primary object for the collection was to round up scarce materials.

NEW QUINCY YACHT CLUB TROPHY

Under the will of the late Amos Merritt, the Quincy Yacht Club was given $500 to establish a new racing trophy.

Merritt, who died at age 82, was a member of QYC and for half a century raced the cat boat "Arbutus" when big cats dominated racing in Quincy waters.

He left half of his estate to longtime QYC steward James Nash of Houghs Neck along with a ship model made from timbers of the old Quincy Point Bridge. Former Mayor Joseph Whiton was given a famed picture of the barque "Thomas Goddard" that was built in the old Merritt boatyard in Duxbury, owned by Amos' father.

BILL UPS CITY'S BORROWING POWER

Rep. Carter Lee filed legislation at the request of City Manager William Deegan that would raise the city's borrowing capacity from two and a half to five percent of the total assessed valuation of the city.

The legislation came as a result of a resolution by City Councillor Edna Austin. She noted that under the current formula, the city had only a half million dollars in borrowing capacity left, with many badly needed capital projects. Among these were the Rock Island sewer project and the heating plant at the hospital.

QUINCY-ISMS

ENC Seeks Zoning Change For HoJo Factory Purchase

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The City Council held a public hearing Monday night on a request by Eastern Nazarene College to have six acres of land at Old Colony Avenue and St. Ann's Road in Wollaston rezoned from Planned Unit Development (PUD) to Business "B" zoning.

School officials have requested the zoning change so that ENC can buy the property--which includes the former Howard Johnson's candy factory subsequently bought by Exeter Foods and several other abandoned buildings--for classroom, office and other uses.

During the lightly-attended public hearing, four people, including ENC President Kent Hill, spoke in favor of the plan. Three others spoke in opposition.

Hill said the college, which purchased the former Egg & I Diner and other buildings on Hancock Street across from Merrymount Park for similar reasons, said Eastern Nazarene desperately needs the space.

"This property is a critical component of Eastern Nazarene College's future in the City of Quincy," he said.

Those opposed to the change said while they have nothing against the college, they fear the city will be giving up too much control over the property through the zoning change. PUD zoning gives the council greater authority over how a site can be used.

John Mullaney of 115 Standish Ave. said ENC will be able to move any kind of business it wants into the property if it is rezoned to Business "B."

"We don't know what we'll be getting there," he said.

Councillor Michael Cheney also expressed concerns the city would be giving up too much control through the rezoning. In addition, Ward 5 Councillor Stephen Durkin--whose ward includes the property--said

Nominations Coming In For Sun 'Citizen Of Year'

Nominations are coming in for The Quincy Sun's 12th annual "Citizen of the Year" award.

Established in 1985, the award recognizes an individual for outstanding community service or a special achievement.

Last year, Joseph McConville was honored for "freely giving a good part of his life to Quincy youth and to his city. His community service includes being a volunteer ice skating instructor and coach for Quincy Youth Hockey Association for 25 years. He has also served the city and his community in many unpaid positions, including chairman of the Quincy Planning Board.

He was selected from 35 nominations submitted by Sun readers.

Sun readers may nominate the person they feel is the most deserving.

After nominations close Tuesday, Dec. 31, a judging panel will be selected to make the final choice from the nominations submitted.

A nomination ballot to help the selection process appears below in this week's issue of The Sun.

If you know of someone you would like to see recognized with this award, fill out the ballot and mail it to:

The Quincy Sun
Attn: Citizen of the Year
1372 Hancock St.
Quincy, MA 02169

Nominations should be postmarked no later than Dec. 31.

Ballots can also be dropped off at The Sun office at the above address by Dec. 31.

Those submitting nominations should identify themselves. They can also attach to the ballot a letter detailing the reason for the nomination.

Nominees can be someone in elective office, a member of an appointed board, a clergy member, a teacher or school administrator, a police officer or firefighter, someone in the business community, a sports figure or an "unsung" neighbor or friend who has given freely of his or her time to a worthy project or cause.

Past recipients of the award, and the year of their selection, are:

Tony Siciliano, deputy director of Quincy Emergency Management (formerly Civil Defense, 1985.

Ruth Wainwright of Houghs Neck, a long-time community volunteer, 1986.

The late Richard J. Koch Sr., for his work with charitable and community causes over four decades, posthumously in 1987.

Martin Finnegan, retired Quincy high school athletic director, for coordinating the drug and alcohol program Project Impact, 1988.

Clara Yeomans, a longtime environmentalist and charter member of the Quincy Conservation Commission, 1989.

Gerald Gherardi, for his contributions to charities and service organizations over a half century, 1990.

Frank Kearns, for his innumerable volunteer contributions as a community activist and advocate for the city's elderly, homeless, needy and poor, 1991.

Stephen Cantelli, an innovative Quincy public school teacher and advocate of community education, 1992.

Mary Vallier, a founder of Domestic Violence Ended and a longtime aide to battered women and abused children, 1993.

Fr. William McCarthy, retired pastor of St. John's Church and Quincy's beloved "Father Bill," for helping the poor, hungry, homeless and all others in need for many years, 1994.

Those nominated the past 11 years are eligible to be nominated again this year. Since this is not a popularity contest, a person receiving the most nominations will not necessarily be the final winner.

Anyone nominated just once has an equal chance of being the award recipient.

Again, the deadline for nominations is Tuesday, Dec. 31.

The name of the winner will be announced in The Quincy Sun in January.

Cub Scouts Collect Food For The Needy

Cub Scout Pack 1 of Quincy Point Congregational Church recently went door-to-door to collect canned goods and other non-perishable Thanksgiving food for the needy.

The Scouts collected over 400 pounds of food which was donated to the emergency food center at the SouthWest Community Center. Mary Bradley of the community center accepted the donation at a recent Pack meeting and presented a Certificate of Appreciation to Cubmaster Mallisa Gorreia and the Scouts for their efforts in the "Scouting For Food" project.

PREMISE FOR LEGAL ACTION

When an accident caused by a defect or a dangerous circumstance leads to injury inside or outside a building, it is termed a - "premises liability" accident. The building's danger may lie with its poor construction, shoddy materials faulty design, lack of maintenance, or buildup of trash. Whatever-the cause, an accident on commercial premises, at private residence's, or on public property may prompt legal action by the accident victim. A determination of who is legally responsible is based on two factors. For one, there is the question of whether the property's owner or occupier subjected the victim to an unreasonable risk of injury due to the design, construction, or condition of the property. Then, it must be resolved whether the victim's behavior contributed to the accident.

Hint: A property owner is not always responsible for someone's slip on something that an ordinary person would be expected to see and avoid.

Have you been injured? Call 773-2880 for a free legal consultation. We are happy to provide advice, conduct the case and be compensated only when recovery is made. Quite often, we can take appropriate legal action and the steps necessary to keep you out of court. Remember, your legal rights are only as good as your ability to protect them. Our office is located at Gridley Bryant Office Condominiums, 111 Willard Street..

Hearing Continued On Point Liquor License Request

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

The Quincy License Board continued until Dec. 17 a hearing on a request for a Quincy Point liquor license because of the limited number of licenses in the area.

O'Connell's Restaurant, 520 Washington St., seeks the license once owned by the Fore River Eatery.

And also according to Chairman Joseph Shea, a review will be taken in the next couple of weeks of those establishments who may or not be renewing their licenses. Shea said he felt as though some may not be renewing their licenses which would lower the total of licenses granted.

Also, Shea noted that Fire Chief Thomas Gorman was called to a meeting at the last minute, and was unable to attend Tuesday's board meeting. Building Inspector Matt Mulvey excused himself from this portion of the meeting because he is related to one of the owners of the restaurant.

The restaurant at the site was known as the Knotty Pine for years. It later became Dimitri's and then the Fore River Eatery.

Shea read a letter from a citizen objecting to the name stating the owners may be trying to capitalize on the O'Connell name (referring to Peter O'Connell) and made a request for the owners to change the name.

However, when Shea asked the owners how they arrived at the name, he was told it was fashioned after O'Connell Street in Dublin.

Although Tuesday's meeting was considered an open one, only a few neighbors turned out, mostly opposing the parking on Lebanon St., noisy patrons leaving the restaurant at 1 a.m. and debris left on the premises.

Atty. Kevin Burke representing new owners, Gerard S. D'Arcy, Joseph D Mulvey and Joseph D'Angelo said they will accommodate the neighbors in any way and cited a plan to post a sign saying "left turn only" after leaving the restaurant which he said

Alzheimer's Assn. At Beechwood Center

Beechwood On the Bay, the Quincy-based community life center, announces that the center's services for those affected by Alzheimer's disease is now defined as the Quincy Alzheimer's Association.

The association's leadership team consists of Sharron Beals, executive director; Mary Centola, director of Beechwood's elder services and the association's Alzheimer's programs; and Don Strong, chair of Beechwood's Elder Advisory Council.

The identification of "association" is intended to clarify Beechwood's long-standing role as a provider of support groups and associated services. The name does not change programs already in place at Beechwood. Rather, it is designed to help Beechwood communicate its wide range of services for Alzheimer's victims, families and categories.

"Beechwood has long been supportive of efforts to research, educate and promote services related to Alzheimer's," said Beals.

Beechwood established Quincy's first support group for caregivers in 1984. A second group later was added for working participants. Both support groups now meet at Beechwood at 2 p.m. and 7 p.m. every third Thursday of the month.

For more information, call Beechwood at 471-5712.

School Breakfast Weeks Begin Dec. 9

The Lincoln-Hancock, Point Webster and Snug Harbor schools will kick off a series of breakfast events for children and parents Monday, Dec. 9.

The aim of the School Breakfast Week is to reinforce the importance of starting the day with a healthy and nutritious breakfast.

"Breakfast is the most important meal of the day, and the School Breakfast Program is available to all students," said Joanne Morrissey, food service director for the Quincy Public Schools. "Schools play an active role in improving children's nutrition by promoting school breakfast to children and parents."

The U.S. Department of Health and Human Services says that one out of every five children arrives at school without any breakfast at all. Studies have shown that children who participate in the School Breakfast Program have improved test scores on standardized tests, as well as reductions in absenteeism and tardiness. Statistics also have revealed that students who eat a healthy breakfast arrive at class alert and ready to learn.

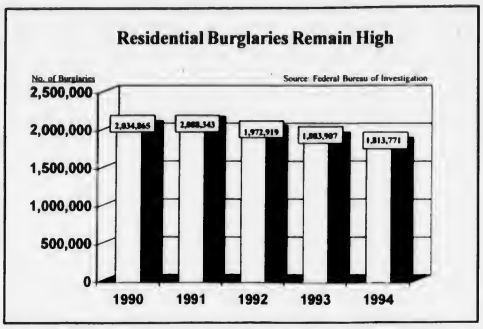
Squantum Gardens Meeting Rescheduled

Ward 6 City Councillor Bruce Ayers announces that due to a scheduling conflict, a meeting on the Squantum Naval Gardens at Beechwood on the Bay, 440 East Squantum St. has been rescheduled to Thursday, Dec. 12 at 7 p.m.

The meeting originally had been scheduled for Dec. 11. For more information, call Ayers at 328-0102.

Prevent Burglaries With A Home Security Plan



Although nearly 2 million burglaries occurred in 1994, homeowners can reduce their chances of being burglarized by following some simple measures.

It's known in law enforcement circles as the "Crime Clock" — the rate at which criminal offenses occur in our country.

Homeowners should be particularly alarmed at the startling number of burglaries that occur in the U.S. A burglary takes place an average of once every 12 seconds and, according to the most recent FBI statistics available, almost 2 million residences are victimized each year.

In the face of these startling statistics, homeowners can greatly reduce their chances of becoming another "Crime Clock" statistic. What many people fail to realize is that effective protection against thieves is neither difficult nor expensive. And with June being National Burglary Prevention Month, now is an ideal time to take a close look at how you can secure your residence.

"The key to burglary prevention is eliminating a would-be burglar's opportunities for success," says Mike Bruening, executive director of the Burglary Prevention Council, a national non-profit organization dedicated to the prevention of residential burglaries. "Surprisingly, many burglars don't even have to use forcible entry to gain access to a residence because they can enter through an improperly locked door or window."

Create a plan

According to the Burglary Prevention Council, homeowners should implement a basic security plan and start by performing an inspection of their home. Identify all vulnerable points in your home, including weak door and window locks.

"Many homeowners violate some of the most basic rules of home security, like making certain all possible points of entry are secure," says Bruening. "If a burglar happens to approach your home, he won't turn down an open invitation like an unlocked window or an attached garage that is easily accessible."

Eliminating these types of unprotected areas are necessary elements of a home security plan. However, homeowners should take further steps in order to deter burglars from even approaching their residences.

Outside appearances matter when it comes to residential burglary. Do not make it easy for burglars to get close to your home without being noticed. Keeping the outside of your home neatly groomed and well lighted will reduce a burglar's opportunity for success. Trim trees and bushes because any shrubbery that is overgrown and touches your home provides a perfect cover for a burglar.

One of the best methods of deterrence is keeping the perimeter of your home well lighted at night. Low voltage outdoor lighting systems not only are very effective, but also make your home look more attractive. Because they use safe 12-volt current, they are easy to install and inexpensive to operate.

Security timers create the impression of movement throughout the house at different times of the day or night. You can set the timers to operate lamps, radios, televisions or other appliances at specific times. Random security timers vary the time at which lights or appliances go on and off in order to eliminate any predictable schedule.

Other tips

The Burglary Prevention Council also advises stopping all mail and newspaper deliveries or at least arranging for a neighbor to pick them up so that they don't accumulate. Ask a neighbor to park in your driveway to make it appear that you are home.

The average dollar loss in a residential burglary is over $1,300. When you consider the fact that implementing a home security plan and securing your residence with some basic products will cost a homeowner only about $100, it's a wise investment indeed.

"The biggest payoff of all is security and peace of mind," says Bruening. "You can't put a price tag on those benefits."

FULLBACK TIM SANTOS (45) breaks through the line as North Quincy's Brian Wells (61) gets a firm grasp on the Quincy back's leg. Santos, who won last year's Thanksgiving Day game with a field goal, looked on as Quincy's latest hero, Andrew Byrne, scored the game-winning touchdown on an 85-yard punt return in the third quarter.

ON THE GAME'S decisive play, Quincy defensive end Steve Wiltshire (76) closes in to make the tackle on Red Raiders' quarterback Tom Coughlin (3) on a fourth and goal from Quincy's 2-yard line. Coughlin reached the 1 before Wiltshire dragged him down, turning the ball over on downs to Quincy, which ran out the clock to seal the win.

Senior Sparks Presidents' Offense As Defense Makes Game-Saving Stand

Quincy 'Byrnes' North In 12-7 Triumph

By LIAM FITZGERALD

Amid chants of "Byrne-sie, Byrne-sie," Quincy relished in the wake of its third straight Thanksgiving Day triumph over North Quincy, this time by a 12-7 score.

The recipient of the accolades was senior Andrew Byrne, who electrified the President faithful in the third quarter with an 85-yard punt return for the eventual game-winning touchdown. A solid block by senior co-captain Kevin Connolly allowed Byrne to escape would-be tacklers en route to the end zone.

"No one but us thought we could win this game," said head coach Peter Chella, now 2-0 in Turkey Day games as Quincy's head coach. "We have gone through lot of adversity this year, and we were looking for some redemption. We got it with this win."

On the game's opening kickoff, Byrne gave the crowd a taste of what was to come when he raced 68 yards to the NQ 12, setting up the Presidents' first touchdown. On a key fourth and seven from the 9, Quincy senior quarterback and co-captain Mark Glynn found senior wide receiver Jon Ryan for an eight-yard completion and a first down. Glynn (3-0 in Turkey Day starts) then scored on a one-yard run over senior left guard Chuck Feeley for a 6-0 lead less than three minutes into the game.

Opting for the two-point conversion, Glynn (3 for 7 passing, 35 yards) carried the ball for the score, but an illegal formation penalty against Quincy negated the play. The Presidents (4-6) went for two again, but Glynn's pass fell incomplete.

After the two teams exchanged punts, the Red Raiders (7-3) were forced to punt again from their own 40 late in the opening quarter. However, a 15-yard roughing the kicker penalty against Quincy gave the Red Raiders new life. Taking over at the Quincy 46, North reached the 8 as the quarter expired, sparked by a 29-yard romp by senior halfback Brian Walsh (32 carries, 133 yards).

"That was a phenomenal effort by Brian, to get 133 yards on a day like that, when the field was frozen over," said NQ head coach Ken McPhee. "I thought all our kids played well offensively and defensively, as they have all year."

On the third play of the second quarter, North senior QB Tom Coughlin (2 of 3 passing, 41 yards) rolled to his left, but couldn't find an open receiver. Rather than throw it away, he tucked the ball in and dived over the goal line for NQ's only touchdown. The run, which covered 10 yards, was followed by senior Jim Finn's 20th successful extra point of the season for a 7-6 North lead.

"Tom played an outstanding game, his best of the season," said McPhee. On that score, he took his time and got it in the end zone. I thought he did a great job leading our offense."

QUINCY'S STEVE MAZE (10) and Mike Russo (36) combine to bring down Red Raider receiver Jim Finn. Earlier, Finn caught a 37-yard touchdown pass from quarterback Tom Coughlin, but the score was negated by an offensive pass interference call.

NQ had the opportunity to add to its lead in the third when junior defensive tackle Kevin Bowes recovered a fumble by Connolly (25 carries, 95 yards) at the Quincy 34. On a third and 13 from the 37, Coughlin apparently connected with Finn for a touchdown, but the score was disallowed by an offensive pass interference penalty.

"That was a tough play, but I thought the official made the right call," said McPhee. "We still had the opportunity to score, but couldn't do it."

Two plays later, North punted, and Byrne was off to the races, breaking tackles as he scampered 85 yards for the winning score. Again, Quincy went for two and came up empty when

GETTING A JUMP

According to the American Automobile Association, 27.5 million motorists called for assistance in jump-starting their cars last year. For this reason, the AAA recommends that motorists carry jumpercables in their trunks. When jump-starting, a car: Make sure that the car providing assistance has at least as much voltage as the car in need of the jump. Turn off the ignitions in both cars and shut down all electrical accessories. Connect one end of the positive (red) cable to the dead battery s positive terminal, and the other end of the cable to the five car's positive terminal. Next, attach one of the clips on the negative (black) cable to the negative terminal on the five car's battery, and securely attach the remaining negative clip to an unpainted metal part of the dead car's engine chassis. Start the five car, then start the dead car.

P.S. After jump-starting your car, have the battery professionally recharged - unless you are planning to drive continually for several hours.

QUINCY HALFBACK Kevin Connolly, who rushed for 95 yards on 25 carries, strikes a Heisman-like pose as he tries to fend off North Quincy's Tim Semchenko (11).

Quincy 'Byrnes' North In 12-7 Thanksgiving Triumph

Glynn kept it himself and landed short of the end zone.

"Jimmy Finn boots the punt 55-60 yards in the air, then he (Byrne) returns it for a TD," said McPhee. "Our kids slid right by him. The conditions obviously hurt us, but we're not making any excuses. They had to play on the same field and made the plays to win the game."

Now trailing 12-7, North got another break midway through the fourth when Quincy senior punter Tim Santos slipped and managed just a one-yard punt. After two short runs apiece by Walsh and Powers, NQ faced a third and 16 from the Quincy 38.

Looking over the middle, Coughlin connected with Finn for a 18-yard pass play and a crucial first down at the 20. Three plays later, North looked to be in more serious trouble when Coughlin fumbled on third down. Walsh finally tracked down the fumble for North, which then faced a fourth and 22 from the 32. Rolling to his right, Coughlin hit an open Walsh, who barreled his way to a huge first down at the 9.

After Ryan stuffed Walsh for no gain, Coughlin rushed for four yards on second down. Walsh appeared to be caught for a big loss on the next play, but managed to elude the Quincy tacklers and reach the two-yard line. On the game's decisive play, Coughlin kept the ball on fourth and goal from the 2, aiming for the left corner of the end zone.

He nearly reached paydirt before Quincy junior defensive end Steve Wiltshire, with help from senior linebacker Mike Russo, brought Coughlin down at the 1-yard line with 1:41 to play. Quincy's offense took over and ran out the clock to seal the hard-fought victory.

"I knew the kids could do it," said Chella. "They saved the best for last and rose to the occasion. Coach (Bob) Keuther (defensive coordinator) deserves a lot of credit for getting those guys ready.

"We did a real good job on the line of scrimmage, especially defensively. It was an ugly win, but we'll take it."

McPhee, who is 7-7-2 in Thanksgiving Day games as NQ's head coach, said Coughlin kept the ball to provide the offense with the option to either run or pass.

"If we give it to Walsh, he might get in, or he might fall or be stopped," said McPhee. "With Tommy having the ball, we had the choice of either passing or having him run for the score. If the kid (Wiltshire) doesn't make a great tackle, we get in the end zone and take the lead."

Wiltshire spearheaded the staunch Quincy defense, recording seven tackles, two sacks and two fumble recoveries. Feeley, Ryan, Russo (nine tackles, four assists), and senior linebacker Lallis (six tackles) also shone defensively in their final high school game. Steve Maze, Dan Nichol, Bill Armstrong, Pat Harrington, Shaun Faherty, Kevin Moore and Bryan Dunn helped keep the NQ offense in check.

"Russo played one heck of a football game," said McPhee. "He was all over the field making plays. We have to give their whole defense credit, they came off the ball well."

NQ's Walsh, who needed 166 yards to reach the 2,000-yard rushing plateau, finished the season with 1,967 yards. He was contained in the first half, collecting just 48 yards on 12 carries. For the game, he was either stopped for a loss or no gain on 12 of his 30 carries.

"That was one of our goals, to stop Walsh, and we did a pretty good job, keeping him out of the end zone," said Chella.

On the other side of the ball, Quincy's offensive line--Feeley, Nichol, Wiltshire, Jay Little (senior co-captain), Don McCarthy--kept the Red Raiders' defense out of the Quincy backfield.

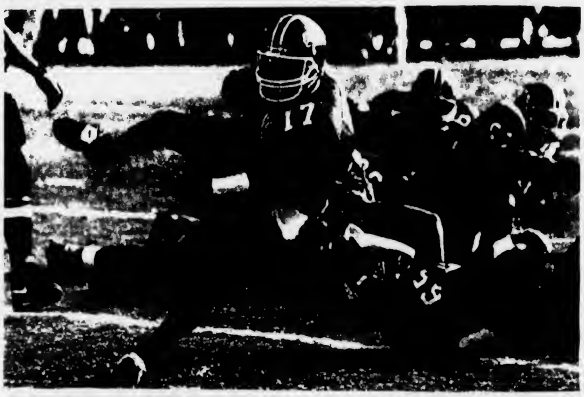
Defensive standouts for the Red Raiders included defensive linemen Charlie Plaskasovitis (senior co-captain), Norm Connell (senior co-captain), Todd DeBoer, Chuck O'Brien, Brian Wells, and Bowes, linebackers Walsh, Shaun Donovan and Frank McNamara, and defensive backs Finn (senior co-captain), Powers, Jason Turner and Chris Bregoli.

Providing Walsh and Co. with room to run were NQ offensive linemen Connell, Bowes, Wells, DeBoer, Mike Leeber, along with tight end Plaskasovitis and fullback Mike Powers.

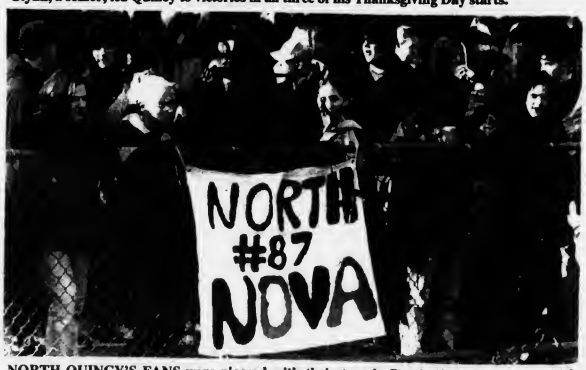
The five-point margin of victory marked the 12th time in the last 14 years that the Thanksgiving Day game was decided by less than one touchdown.

The win improved Quincy's lead in the all-time series to 32-27-5 following the 64th showdown between the city's two high schools.

Next year, the Presidents will go for their fourth straight victory on Thanksgiving, something neither team has accomplished since Quincy won five in a row from 1954-58.



PRESIDENTS' QUARTERBACK MARK Glynn leaves North's Kevin Bowes (65) in his wake as he scores the game's first touchdown, a one-yard run early in the opening quarter. Glynn, a senior, led Quincy to victories in all three of his Thanksgiving Day starts.



NORTH QUINCY'S FANS were pleased with their team's first-half performance, which resulted in a 7-6 lead at the break. However, the North faithful had little to cheer about in the second half, as NQ fell behind and eventually lost to Quincy for the third year in a row.

THE THIRD TIME was a charm for Quincy and its fans as the Presidents won their third straight Thanksgiving Day game over their rivals from North Quincy.

Elks Dethrone Manets To Capture Title, 18-14

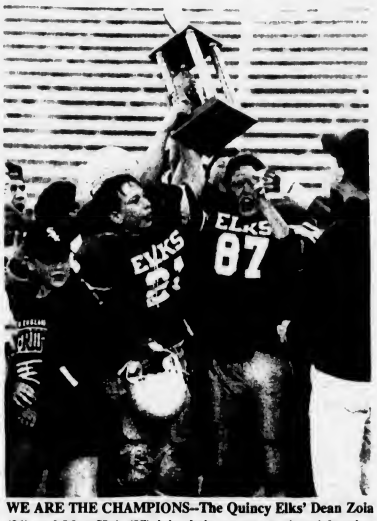
The West Quincy Elks recently won the Quincy Youth Football League championship with an 18-14 victory over the Houghs Neck Manets, the team that beat the Elks in last year's championship game.

The game went back and forth, in a good old fashioned smash mouth football style. The Elks trailed, 14-12, going into the final minutes of the game. On a fourth and goal play, Elks quarterback Dave Centrella rolled right, breaking a tackle before passing the ball to heavily covered Matt Holt, who leaped above the Manets defenders and came down in the end zone with the game-winning touchdown.

Also scoring for the Elks were Mike Pilot and Max Ferreira. Defense was the key once again, as the Elks' Big Red Machine defense came up with a huge goal line stand. Leading the way was defensive captain Joe Moran, co-captains Dean Zoia and Steve King (three sacks). Matt Kenny's fumble recovery led to an Elks score.

The rest of the Elks' defense--linemen Matt Tupe, Chris Kerr, Matt Holt and Dave McDonnell, linebackers Scott Kelly and Mike Pilot, defensive backs Max Ferreira, Mike Ferreira, Jack Liuzzo and Chris Lumaghini turned in their usual hardworking efforts.

Offensively, the line did its job of pounding away and wearing their opponents down. Chris Sullivan, Joe Swanson, Paul Sing, Bryan Gately, Bryan Cooper and Jonathan Okereoke round out the rest of the city champs.



WE ARE THE CHAMPIONS--The Quincy Elks' Dean Zoia (21) and Matt Hoit (87) join their teammates in celebrating their Quincy Youth Football League championship victory over the Houghs Neck Manets. Hoit caught the game-winning touchdown pass in the 18-14 triumph. Under head coach Chris Chevalier and assistant Dean Zoia, the Elks avenged their loss to the Manets in last year's championship game. (Quincy Sun photo/Tom Gorman)

North's Lynda Wilson Qualifies For Allstates

North Quincy ended a three-year drought with freshman Lynda Wilson qualifying for Allstates.

Wilson didn't disappoint: her 59th place finish in 21:20 over the 3.1 mile hilly Mt. Northfield course was the best performance by an NQ freshman since 1983.

Since head coach Geoff Hennessy took over the reins at North in 1988, the program has qualified either a team or an individual six times. With the rotating Allstate site (Eastern Mass. is always at Franklin Park), the Raiders have seen Mt. Northfield three times. Wilson's time is the third fastest in that time span and fourth fastest in NQ history.

"Our goal was to do well in the big meets--OCL's, Brown Invitational and Eastern Mass.," said Hennessy. "If we advanced to Allstate, great, but we're a mostly freshman squad and you can't rush things. We beat every OCL team except Barnstable sometime during the season, so the kids finished on a 'high note'.

"Our senior captains Lauren Molloy and Carrie Jarvie did a great job motivating the younger kids and keeping it all in perspective. It was a fun team to coach."

North Quincy Boys Soccer Wraps Up With Banquet

The North Quincy High School boys soccer team ended its 1996 season at the recent annual soccer banquet.

The banquet featured NQ graduate John Murphy, currently an assistant coach at Brown University, addressing the boys and girls teams.

Although the NQ boys team was competitive in many of its contests, lack of roster depth and injuries took their toll, and the team fell short of its preseason expectations, finishing at 3-14-1 overall.

There were outstanding contributors, with eight players having a part in the scoring. Old Colony League All-Star senior Chris Erler led the way with eight goals and four assists, and junior Bill Walker notched four goals and two assists.

The OCL Sportsmanship Award went to senior co-captain Bill Barron. Also recognized were senior co-captain Neil Costa and seniors Ryan Herlihy, Mike Johnston and Jeremy Riley. Co-captains elected for the 1997 season were Colin Shea and Steve Wilson.

With 10 returning juniors and six sophomores, as well as a strong group on the junior varsity, head coach Robert Dano and assistant coach Rich Hanlon are looking forward to further improvement next fall.

Any eighth grade soccer player who wishes to be informed of upcoming NQHS soccer events, or is interested in playing soccer, should call head coach Robert Dano at 773-9087.

Girls Pee Wee II Drops Two

Despite the hard work of defensemen Colleen Murphy, Sandra Sullivan and Lucy Ross, the Quincy Girls Pee Wee II team fell to Westwood by a 2-1 score.

The loss overshadowed a strong performance by goalie Erin McNamara. Danielle Gatto scored Quincy's one goal.

In other recent action, Quincy lost to South Boston, 3-2, despite leading until the third period. Scoring for Quincy were Callie O'Connor and Colleen Clifford, while goalie Erin McNamara was tough to beat between the pipes.

The Quincy Pee Wee B's, sponsored by Roche Brothers, collected wins over Brookline and Triboro last weekend.

In a 14-0 shutout of Brookline, Matthew Conso, Rob Mooney, Mark Tetreault and Chopper Walsh all lit the lamp twice for Quincy (6-1-1). Single goals were tallied by Bobby Donovan, Frankie Guest, Miah Hasson, Scottie Markarian and Steve McGonagle.

Key defensive plays were made by Matt Alleva, Sean Moriarty and Pam Sullivan, as goaltender Bruce Maggio recorded another shutout.

Against Triboro, Quincy rallied to win 3-1 on goals by Mooney, Conso and Brian Cooper.

Quincy trailed, 1-0, until the end of the second period when Mooney put the biscuit in the basket off a feed by Conso. The game remained tied until Conso scored unassisted on a rink-length rush with 1:48 left in the game to give Quincy the lead. Cooper, on a pass by Hasson, tallied with two seconds left to secure the victory.

Squirt A's

Goaltender Nick Manning posted the shutout as the Quincy Squirt A's blanked Belmont, 7-0, in recent action.

Strong defensive play by Kye Carmody, Timmy Duggan and Kevin Richardson was also a major factor in the victory.

After a scoreless first period, Matt Grazioso started the Quincy offensive onslaught with assistance from Matt Lavery and Matt Germain. Ryan Feldoff followed shortly with an unassisted tally. Brendon Conley then assisted Carmody on Quincy's next score. The second period ended with Steve McGrath scoring on a pass from Brendan Craig to give Quincy a 4-0 lead.

The third period action was also all Quincy as Lavery scored off a Germain lead pass. Ryan Conley then netted an unassisted goal. Duggan finished the scoring with a goal assisted by Carmody.

Squirts, Southie Battle To 2-2 Tie

The Quincy Youth Hockey Squirts, aka Barter's Bullies, clashed with the South Boston Squirts and battled their way to a 2-2 draw.

After falling behind 2-0 on two early breakaway goals by Southie, the Bullies went to work. In front of the net, Quincy's Justin Thorley received a pass from Alex Shaffer and lifted a shot past the Southie goaltender.

In the third period, Paul Graham and Joe McManus hooked up, with Graham putting the puck in the net to tie the game at 2-2. Paul McLean was robbed by the Southie goaltender's glove on several shots out front.

Quincy's Brendan Linnane received the game puck for his work in the corners. Speedy Brendan Clifford sped past the Southie defense, while Thorley and Danny Donovan ripped up the ice taking the puck to the net only to hear the clang of the pipes turning back their shots. Mike Tetreault was outstanding with his on-the-stick passes.

Defense was the key to the game as the Bullies' Chris (The Bulldozer) Sheehan kept the Southie forwards at bay. Jonathan O'Connor back checked faster then the Southie forwards could move forward. Keith Flaherty was the keeper of the turf on the blue line, letting nothing get past him. Tony (Benji) Benigni cut up the ice, moving back to cover the Quincy defensive zone.

Bullies' goaltender Ryan (The Beezer) Barter made numerous stand up saves to keep the game close for Quincy.

The Bullies, now sponsored by Sugarmans of Quincy, play their next game in Quincy.

SCOTT DEWARE

A Thought For The Week

Ralph Waldo Emerson once said, "By necessity, by proclivity, and by delight, we all quote."

Here are some quotes we would like to pass on to you...

"ANYWAY"

People are unreasonable, illogical and self-centered.
LOVE THEM ANYWAY.
If you do good, people will accuse you of selfish ulterior motives.
DO GOOD ANYWAY.
If you are successful, you will win false friends and true enemies.
SUCCEED ANYWAY.
Honesty and frankness make you vulnerable-
BE HONEST AND FRANK ANYWAY.
The good you do today will be forgotten tomorrow.
DO GOOD ANYWAY.
The biggest people with the biggest ideas can be shot down by the smallest people with smallest minds.
THINK BIG ANYWAY.
People favor underdogs but follow Only top dogs.
FIGHT FOR SOME UNDERDOGS ANYWAY
What you spend years building may be destroyed overnight.
BUILD ANYWAY.
Give the world the best you have and you'll get kicked in the teeth.
GIVE THE WORLD THE BEST YOU'VE GOT ANYWAY.

H. Hobart Holly, 88
Quincy Historian; Retired Engineer

H. HOBART HOLLY

A funeral service for H. Hobart Holly, 88, of Braintree, was held Nov. 30 at Emmanuel Episcopal Church, Braintree.

Mr. Holly died Nov. 25 at South Shore Hospital in Weymouth after a period of failing health.

He was a veteran historian and former president of the Quincy Historical Society.

A retired civil engineer and a devoted scholar of maritime history, he was recognized statewide for his encyclopedic knowledge of the Adams family and other aspects of Quincy history and genealogy.

He wrote and edited histories of Quincy and Braintree, and also served as town historian in Braintree.

Even from his hospital bed, Mr. Holly edited articles for the next issue of Quincy History, the Historical Society's bi-annual publication.

A native of New York City and a graduate of Gorton High School in Yonkers, N.Y., he developed an early interest in maritime history from his family: His grandfather, William Carnley, owned the Black Ball packet ship line, which operated between New York and Liverpool, England, in the early 1800s.

After earning a bachelor's degree in engineering at Yale in 1930, and then a master's degree in industrial engineering at Columbia, he went to work for the Federal Shipbuilding Co. in New Jersey.

He came to Quincy in 1949 as an assistant naval architect for the American Export Line, which was then building its passenger ships at the Fore River shipyard. He joined the Historical Society the same year.

He stayed on when Bethlehem Steel took over the shipyard, doing design engineering and architectural design for a large number of ships, including the USS Independence and the USS Constitution.

When General Dynamics bought the Fore River shipyard in 1963, he moved to Boston's Metcalf and Eddy engineering firm, and retired in 1973.

By that time he had been president of the Historical Society for 17 years. He held that position until 1976, his 20th year, then became the city's historian.

Mr. Holly was a member of 17 historical societies, including Braintree's and the Peabody Museum in Salem. He published articles in the Naval Institute Proceedings and the maritime journal Neptune.

A past president and active member of the Quincy Tennis Club for many years, he received the organization's "Man of the Century" award. He was also a Sunday School teacher and youth basketball supervisor at Emmanuel Episcopal Church in Braintree.

He began researching the Adams Family papers when that project began in 1955.

One of his special areas of study was John Adams' writing of the Massachusetts colonial constitution, and the influence of that document on the U.S. Constitution.

He is survived by his wife, Virginia Nash Holly; a daughter, Catherine M. Holly-Nash of Conway, N.H.; a son, William Carnley Holly of York, Pa.; two grandchildren, Heath McCrea Bigar of Jackson, N.H., and Anne Kelsey Holly of York, Pa.; and two great-grandchildren.

Burial was in Blue Hill Cemetery.

ENC Seeks Zoning Change

he has enough questions that he has yet to make up his mind about whether to support the change.

Hill said the Business "B" zoning would allow the college more freedom to implement its plans, rather than having to go through the council and the more detailed PUD process. He added, however, that the college is willing to put detailed agreements in writing to give the city more control in the event ENC's plans change or are somehow derailed.

The council will vote on the matter following a Planning Board hearing on the requested rezoning Dec. 11.

Councillors Have Questions About Center Concourse

Despite the fact construction on the proposed Quincy Center Concourse is expected to begin in the spring, the City Council still has questions about the $8.6 million roadway.

On Monday night, councillors asked Quincy Department of Public Works Commissioner David Colton and Anthony Lionetta of Earth Tech in Quincy, the project manager, a number of questions about the project.

Among the concerns they voiced were whether local property owners in the path of the concourse would agree to city landtakings and if the project will increase flooding problems caused by rainstorms along the nearby Town Brook.

Another question brought up was why one part of the roadway will have one-way traffic and why all of it will be two lanes instead of four.

Colton and Lionetta said most property owners contacted about the matter have been agreeable to the situation and that increased flooding will not result from the project. Colton added that most of the landtakings are expected to be "friendly," noting that all affected property owners have been contacted either by letter or in person.

The two officials also said one stretch of the roadway will be one-way to make sure it is a route from Burgin Parkway onto Hancock Street and Quincy Center instead of a way to bypass the downtown.

Ultimately, the council unanimously appropriated $23,500 from the city's free cash (cash reserve) account to make appraisals for the city landtakings. Still, council members said they might ask for further design changes before construction of the concourse begins.

Among those who asked specific questions about the concourse route were Councillors Paul Harold and Michael Cheney and Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi.

The concourse, expected to be completed by 1999, is to be built in two phases--a west link, which will bridge Burgin Parkway and connect to the Parkingway and Hancock Street and an east link which will continue the roadway from Hancock Street to McGrath Highway.

While officials said Monday night traffic congestion will decrease as a result of the roadway--which will be funded primarily by state monies--the main objective of the project is to bring more consumers into the downtown shopping area.

"The basic premise of the concourse is to improve access to Quincy Center," Colton said.

Hearing Continued On Point Liquor License Request

will alleviate some of the problems.

Capt. Frederick Laracy, sitting in for Police Chief Francis Mullen told Burke that although the sign was a good idea, it would also carry a liability. He advised the owners to direct the patrons upon leaving verbally instead of posting a sign.

Burke promised that all bartenders will be T.I.P.S. certified, a course that helps to recognize appropriately how to deal with patrons that have had too much to drink.

Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi, although stating that he "felt comfortable" and "impressed by the new owners pre-sentation". still expressed a fear that in the event business does not live up to expectations, that busi-nesses "sometimes become bigger barrooms."

The restaurant will seat 150 patrons and have 35 parking spaces.

Shea, who said he was also very "impressed with the three new owners" said he would confer with Traffic Engineer Jack Gillon concerning the parking.

If the license is granted Dec. 17, the owners hope to open the eatery sometime in February.

Mother Of Two Killed By Car While Riding Bicycle

A 39-year-old Quincy College student and mother of two children was killed Tuesday when she was struck by a car while riding a bicycle on South Street near Atherton Street, according to police.

Atsuko Pecorelli was pronounced dead at Quincy Hospital shortly after the accident, which took place just before 11 a.m. A resident of the neighborhood, she reportedly was returning home following a class at the college.

Police said at press time the matter when under investigation and that it was unknown if charges would be filed against the 37-year-old driver, whose name was not released.

Dr. Jeremiah Ryan, president of the college, expressed the institution's condolences in a prepared statement:

"The entire Quincy College community is deeply saddened at the tragic death of Atsuko Pecorelli. We join her friends in extending our sympathy to Atsuko's and her relatives in Japan. We are appreciative of the support services provided to Atsuko and her children by the Japanese Consulate.

"The death of a member of our college community is an infrequent and extremely emotional event for all of us. Our campus attracts hundreds of international students like Atsuko, who for a wonderful time in their life call Quincy their home. We will make all of our services available to those members of our extended family who are attempting to deal with this tragedy."

Pecorelli's two children, both students in the Quincy Public Schools, were notified of the tragedy immediately and met with School Supt. Eugene Creedon and Kiyoshi Sumita, the Boston Japanese Consulate-General.

Creedon said the children will temporarily live with a family friend in Cohasset before moving back to Japan, their native country, to live with their grandmother who has been told about the accident.

Creedon added that school officials will do what they can to ease the grief of the two children.

"It (news of the accident) was difficult for both children to accept," he said. "The reality of it has yet to set in."

McCauley Asks For Report On H.S. Seniors GED Test

School Committeeman Francis McCauley wants School Supt. Eugene Creedon to prepare a report on the state Board of Education's recent proposal that high school seniors be required to pass the GED (General Equivalency Diploma) test.

McCauley planned to make the request at Wednesday night's School Committee meeting. The request calls for Creedon to include in his report the process for taking the GED test and that the report be presented along with a copy of a recent GED test taken in the state at the committee's Jan. 8 meeting.

McCauley said the reason for his request is purely informational.

"I'm just kind of interested in the GED test," he said. "There's been a lot of talk about it recently. I just want to know about the process, where someone goes to take the test, things like that."

McCauley added that he is "not really sure" what his feelings are about Quincy students taking the test and said he needs more information on the matter.

Creedon said he will be happy to prepare a report for McCauley but noted he is against seniors being required to take the test, which is often taken by high school dropouts.

"Most superintendents I know oppose the use of the GED test for this purpose," he said. "It's a language-based test that requires a certain level of proficiency in order to be able to pass it. It's a very focused curriculum, at about the ninth or 10th grade level, that is not meant to be equated with a high school diploma."

Creedon also said, however, the recent mandate by

Up To 2,000 Jobs Projected

Shipbuilding Expected By January, '98

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Shipbuilding is likely to return to the Fore River shipyard in Quincy Point by January 1998, according to Mayor James Sheets.

The mayor made his comments this week following the recent news that Gov. William Weld has signed legislation providing a $6.6 million state loan guarantee, which greatly increases the chances for reopening the shipyard.

Sheets said the action is crucial to obtaining federal loan guarantees to modernize the shipyard--which has been dormant since General Dynamics launched its last ship there 10 years ago-- and raises significantly the likelihood shipbuilding will return.

"That $6.6 million piece was absolutely essential in order to move forward with the program," he said. "We have the pieces of the puzzle; we just need to put everything in place."

Sheets added that, if all goes according to plan, "I'm confident we're going to be building ships by January 1998."

Greek shipbuilder Sotirios Emmanouil and his Swampscott-based firm, Massachusetts Heavy Industries, have been trying for more than a year to secure backing to revitalize the shipyard.

In November, the U.S. Maritime Administration (MARAD) tentatively agreed to give the company $42 million in loan guarantees to renovate the aging shipyard. The government also is considering another $218 million to help make possible the construction of the first six tankers at the site, which would be built for the Greek shipping company Mare Maritime.

The mayor said the guarantees would allow Emmanouil to get private financing for the project.

Sheets added that he hopes to have the modernization money from MARAD by next month. Once that happens, he said, acquiring the subsequent $218 million for shipbuilding should not be a problem.

"My own sense is, that ($218 million) piece will not be as difficult as the modernization piece," he said.

The revitalized Fore River shipyard would employ 1,000 construction workers per 40-hour shift, mostly from the machinists' union, according to the mayor. The initial modernization phase, which would take about a year, also would employee union workers from the Quincy and Boston areas, he said.

Massachusetts Heavy Industries plans to expand the fabrication and steel shop at the shipyard, restore and Goliath crane and dry docks, renovate the shipyard's office building and exterior. In addition, the company will install new robotic and computer technology to handle the welding and construction of ships.

Sheets and others have said as many as 2,000 workers eventually could be employed at the shipyard.

Emmanouil must meet several additional conditions, including providing MARAD with blueprints for the tankers, before the agency gives final approval to the guarantees. Among those participating in regular talks regarding the federal

The intersection of South Walnut Street and Elm Street will be dedicated Saturday, Dec. 14 at 11 a.m. in memory of Cpl. George F. Giancaterino.

Keno License Denied At Convenience Store

The Quincy License Board Tuesday denied the request from 7-Eleven Convenience Store, 75 Copeland St., for a Keno license following an initial opposition from Ward 4 Councillor Michael D'Amico.

The owner of the store Vipul R. Patel failed to attend the meeting.

D'Amico said he was following his past stand on convenience stores having Keno and said the "nature of the business" and the location were factors in his opposition.

The License Board will notify the state on its vote and according to Chairman Joseph Shea, the state may or not abide by the vote.

Fire Chief Thomas Gorman said, however, that usually the state "goes along with the board's decision".

The only other 7-Eleven that has Keno is the store on Adams Street. According to Shea, that license was given before the License Board adopted the new policy of having to go before the board.

In other business the board voted to grant Andrew Lee, owner of Saigon Panda, 47-49 Billings Rd. a common victualer-wine and beer license.

The board also voted to extend the hours of pouring establishments from 1 a.m. to 2 a.m. on New Year's Eve, in keeping with past years.

Junkyard Complaints Bring Committee Action

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

The Quincy License Board Tuesday voted to establish a task force committee following harsh complaints from Ward 4 Councillor Michael D'Amico and neighbors of Sugarman's Junkyard, 299 Centre St.

In addition to D'Amico and Chairman Joseph Shea, the committee will consist of two or three neighbors of the junkyard and two members of the License Board. Its purpose will be to re-evaluate the site to make certain the business is in compliance with all city ordinances and state regulations.

Shea said he will write to the Department of Environmental Protection concerning construction debris being stored.

D'Amico told the board he had asked for noise testing four times already and said he "needs some answers" in order to satisfy the complaints of the many abutters.

John Hart of Centre Street said he has complained until he was "blue in the face" and not getting anywhere. He accused Sugarman of not complying with the hours of operation beginning at 7 a.m. but much earlier. Shea read the hours from a June meeting which stated the hours of operation to be 7 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Hart also accused Sugarman of using land belonging to Monti Granite Co. and said his house shakes from the workings at Sugarman's. He said he cannot go out in the yard in the summer and also has to keep his windows closed.

Shea said he wasn't sure whether or not Sugarman had permission from Monti to use his property, but assumed he must have.

Neighbors questioned whether the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) was ever called in to test the area. and said the cars are being crushed without removing the fluids.

Sugarman said he misunderstood a former ruling by the board stating that all fluids be removed from cars before crushing. He said cars are only partially crushed (just the roofs) so they can fit on to trucks.

Building Inspector and board member Matt Mulvey said that was like playing "Russian roulette."

Sugarman told the board his plans for expansion include a partially enclosed building with walls equipped with a sound barrier to eliminate noise. He said all iron will be moved to the back of property.

Mulvey, however said in order to assure neighbors about the decision to expand, that Sugarman would have to go to the Board of Appeals and have a rough plan made of the expansion.

Sheets Attends Holiday Reception At White House

Mayor James Sheets and his wife Joann flew to Washington, D.C. Tuesday to attend a Holiday Reception at the White House.

Sheets said Monday he did not know why he and his wife were invited to the event, but added that he suspected it had something to do with the enthusiastic reception that First Lady Hillary Rodham Clinton received from Quincy when she spoke at a Democratic rally at the Thomas Crane Public Library in October.

"I assume it's because the First Lady was very pleased with her reception to the city," she said. "She was very impressed the day she came here with the crowd and the logistical setup of everything."

Sheets said he has visited the White House several times in the past "but never from a social point of view." He said while he is "very appreciative" of the chance to do so, he is aware that it is the citizens of Quincy who made it possible.

"I fully understand that I go there representing the people of this city," he said. "It's really an accomplishment for the city, not me as an individual."

Sheets said while at the White House, he would renew his invitation for Mrs. Clinton and her daughter Chelsea to attend the unveiling of an Abigail Adams Statue in Quincy next year. He also said he wanted to discuss the planned revitalization of the Fore River shipyard in Quincy Point with those in attendance but probably would not have the chance.

The mayor also noted that while he normally would take a camera to such an event, "They frown upon cameras at those things."

The Holiday Reception was scheduled to take place Tuesday from 8 to 10 p.m. Sheets and his wife planned to return to Quincy yesterday (Wednesday).

ASK YOUR LAWYER

by Kevin F. O'Donnell
ATTORNEY AT LAW

YOUR RIGHTS AND WRONGFUL INJURY

Common law is the unwritten law based on custom that was handed down to us from the English and which holds every person responsible for his or her wrongdoing. Beyond that, both state and federal statutes protect certain personal rights, including the right to enjoy freedom and property without undue interference from others. In the event that these rights are violated and that violation causes injury to a person and his or her property, that person can remedy the violation either by entering into a mutually agreed upon settlement or by bringing a lawsuit against the person who caused the damage. Victims can recover damages for harms caused by negligence, intentional acts, or by products and goods that have entered the marketplace. Those who think that they have been wronged in these manners should consult an attorney.

HINT: Driving an automobile requires a duty to exercise care and common sense.

Are you the victim of another party's negligence? Whether or not the harm inflicted was intentional, you have the right to receive compensation to try and make you "whole again," that is, to return your situation to what it was prior to the incident. You'll find that I offer diligent and aggressive representation and have the track record to demonstrate this. To schedule an appointment, call 773-2880. G As In Generous

George Burke certainly is no shrinking violet. But you would embarrass him if you called him a philanthropist.

He'd rather talk about his basketball days at his beloved UMass back in the 1950's. But that word philanthropist is beginning to fit him like a glove.

BURKE

Don't tell him you saw it here but he's been a quiet--and generous--benefactor for sometime now.

One of his most recent beneficiaries is St. Ann's School where he picked up the tab for the renovation of the school gym, a new kitchen and some new windows, reportedly somewhere in the $140,000 neighborhood.

Over the past four years he has also given $25,000 in scholarships--$1,000 each to 25 Quincy and North Quincy High School graduates going to UMass at Amherst, Boston and Lowell.

Word is that his next project will be an outside basketball court with lights at the South Shore YMCA in Quincy.

And, speaking of lights, when things were tight for the city back in the 1980's, George paid the electric light bill for the lighting at the Fenno St. Tennis Courts in Merrymount Park.

Burke, who now has a successful private law firm in North Quincy, is a former Ward 5 city councillor, councillor-at-large, state representative and district attorney.

Start shooting the breeze with him though and he will quickly get the subject around to UMass.

He was a star basketball player there in the early 1950's and good enough to become a Celtics rookie before he decided to leave the basketball court for a career in the court of law.

Two years ago his alma mater gave him equal billing honors with another famous UMass star, Julius Irving.

Burke had No. 32 when he played there and Irving wore the same number years later. The number was raised at the new Mullins Center in honor of Irving a few years ago. And then in 1994 it was officially retired and raised again in honor of Burke. The two No. 32's and Burke's and Irving's name are alongside one another in the rafters.

Burke has been generous to his alma mater, contributing something like a quarter million dollars there.

And over this last weekend, he was honored again with the dedication of the George G. "Trigger" Burke Athletic Hall of Fame on the third floor of the Mullins Center.

He got the name "Trigger" for his sharpshooting as a basketball player, setting a number of scoring records.

The middle initial G is for Gerald.

It could also stand for Generous.

KELLY

FORMER WARD 1 Councillor Leo Kelly may be getting restless.

He's looking at that council at-large seat Tim Cahill will be leaving at the end of next year. "I'm giving it some thought," he says.

That race could get a little crowded. Former Mayor Frank McCauley is considering a run as is former Councillor Charles McIntyre. And, former Councillors Tom Fabrizio and Larry Chretien are being mentioned as possible candidates.

AND, OF COURSE, if McCauley tosses his hat in that ring, it will create a school committee opening.

McCauley will be completing his current two-year term on the school committee and would have to vacate that seat to become a council candidate.

Overall, though, next year's city election isn't looking too exciting at the moment. And there may not be any real excitement in the near future unless Mayor Jim Sheets decides to call it a career and go fishing.

McARDLE

NICE TO SEE Joe McArdle, co-owner of Hancock Tobacco, up, out and around after painful surgery and a long convalescence. Joe's one of those nice quiet guys who takes things in stride without complaint.

His wife, Nancy, has been like a devoted nurse and cheerleader to him during his recovery.

And, by the way, doesn't Nancy remind you a little of Liza Minnelli?

QUINCY'S NICK MALVESTI has the magic words to get Ted Williams' attention: Sam Mele.

Nick, who was a pretty good ball player himself as a third baseman with the Fore River team in the old South Shore League, was in Zephr Hills, Fla. recently and went over to see the Ted Williams Hall of Fame.

MALVESTI

MELE

While inside, he heard shouts of "Ted! Ted! Ted!" outside and ran out just in time to catch Williams leaving in a van.

WILLIAMS

But Nick knew how to stop him.

"Hi, Ted," he yelled, "Sam Mele asked me to say hello for him."

"You from Quincy?", Williams asked. "How's Sam doing?"

"Great," replied Nick.

"Glad to hear that," said Williams.

Nick has used Sam Mele's name before to get Williams to stop and chat.

"Works everytime," says Nick.

Williams and Mele, of course, were Red Sox teammates in the 1940s and have remained close friends. Mele has made his home in Quincy since marrying pretty Connie Clements during his Red Sox playing days.

Williams was among other former Red Sox teammates who came to Quincy several years ago to honor Sam at a special night at the Quincy Neighborhood Club.

OBSERVATION: Those red banners with white doves and the word Peace on them and the Christmas wreaths hanging from those Colonial style lamp posts in the city really help set you in the holiday spirit. Makes coming to Quincy most enjoyable.

And the Christmas lighted windows at Expose, former site of the Cummings store, is an added plus for the downtown area this year, thanks to Arnie Parsegian.

Niagara Falls have receded seven miles since they were formed 10,000 years ago. At this rate, they will disappear in about 24,000 years.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS OLD POSTCARD is a view of Elm Ave. in Wollaston as it appeared about 1905. In the foreground is an unpaved Hancock Street and at the far end of this view was Huntington Square where Elm Ave. splits into East and West Elm Avenues. Originally this road was the driveway to the estate of Boston Mayor Josiah Quincy Jr. that was on the present site of the Eastern Nazarene College. Trolley tracks were later laid down the center of this street where today there are flower-filled islands. The Wollaston Park land developers planted the elm trees. Sullivan's Corner antique shop is now on the left of this view.

Keep Up The Good Work, Mr. Mayor

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

I would like to congratulate the City of Quincy on the absolutely splendid job they have done in decorating the downtown area with Christmas lights and decorations.

Upon driving through Quincy Center last night, I was taken aback by the breathtaking beauty of the lights around City Hall. This area is much more beautiful than the Boston Common or Faneuil Hall ever was. Mayor Sheets should be proud of the work he has done for this city.

In addition, the banners that now decorate Quincy Center and the Wollaston business areas are beautiful. Not only do the bright banners add color and life to the area, but the messages of peace and goodwill are refreshing reminders for this time of year.

Keep up the good work, Mr. Mayor, and Merry Christmas to all.

Exclusion Of Boy Scouts From Parade Was Wrong

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

The logic and good intentions of a decision does not necessarily make the decision right. The exclusion of the Boy Scouts of America from the Quincy Christmas parade because of concerns of the length of the parade and the concern that the parade conclude before dark was, perhaps, well intentioned but wrong.

The parade committee is to be commended for once again giving the city a truly wonderful and outstanding parade. Unfortunately, the exclusion of the scouts from the parade caused bitter disappointment for Boy Scout Troup 3 and, frankly, bafflement from many Wollaston residents. Troop 3 was invited and encouraged to march in the Veterans Day parade and they were the only scout troop to participate. In the words of one local businessman, "Why in the world would the committee prohibit the Boy Scouts from marching?"

As mentioned, the committee did have what they believed to be a good reason for the exclusion. The scouts would have been able to be in the parade had they had the resources to have a float. Unfortunately, for a small troop such as ours, this was not feasible.

In this day of broken homes and high drug use among young people, the exclusion of a small group of boys from marching in the Christmas parade was wrong.

Christmas Spirit Gives Parade Float A Lift

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

I never cease to be amazed by the depth of kindness and generosity that exists in the hearts of those who live, work and do business in our city.

As an anecdote, on Saturday, Nov. 30 I was in a state of panic, scrambling to find someone who could pull a float in the Christmas Parade. The float was created by the Dorchester Lower Mills 180 Council Knights of Columbus and co-sponsored by the North Quincy K. of C. and the Montclair/Wollaston Neighborhood Associations.

The trailer for the float, which was given to the K. of C., had a particularly unique hitch design, a problem not recognized until two days before the parade. I began a frenzied search putting the world out to anyone who would listen.

As both time and luck were running out on Saturday afternoon, I found myself on the doorstep on the Gardiner & Sons Contractors in North Quincy. Paul Gardiner and his family literally dropped what they were doing and spent the next several hours rigging a creative hitch setup and trying different trucks to make it work.

I had never met Paul before, but I won't soon forget his kindness and that of his family. It was either incredible good fortune or divine intervention that led me to him. Were it not for his response to my request, our float, a mockup of Columbus' ship the Santa Maria would have been dry docked.

Many thanks and blessings upon Paul Gardiner, his family and all at the Gardiner Company in North Quincy.

Seniors May Need Ward 4 Center Phone

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

On the way out from the Ward 4 Community Center, I noted the telephone from the desks at the door was missing. I was told the telephone has been relocated in the office, which is always locked when the senior group meets every Wednesday from 1 to 4 p.m.

The senior group are all grandparents or great-grandparents. No one knows when "911" is needed, or may be also visa versa. Are the senior groups deprived of the telephone at other community centers?

In a letter to the School Committee, parents urged that the soccer program be expanded to the high schools next year.

Noting the success of the soccer program in its first year at the junior high school level, the group noted that ninth graders wanted to continue playing, while even seventh and eighth graders were asking for a high school program.

Those who watched the junior high school teams play at Adams Field were impressed with the abilities of the players and gave credit to the coaches: Thomas Adams of Central, Paul Stanton of North, Alfred Mazukina of Broad Meadows, George Pauley of Point and George Kane of South.

QUINCY CENTER SALES UP 22 PERCENT

Sales figures from department stores in Quincy Center were up 22 percent over the same week last year, according to figures complied by the Federal Reserve Bank in Boston. They were also up 12 percent from the preceding week.

At the same time, sales figures from downtown Boston department stores were down by five percent during the same period.

INJUNCTION ON GERMANTOWN RE-ZONING

Atty. Raymond Barrett succeeded in gaining an injunction against the city council from holding a public hearing to consider the question of re-zoning 50 acres in Germantown, from industrial to single family residence.

Barrett argued that the council could not act until the issue was considered by the Planning Board and the sufficient time had not elapsed since the council last re-zone the area.

Atty. Douglas Randall, representing the city, said that chaos would result if the judiciary, except in the most unusual circumstances, interrupted the deliberations of a governing body of a city or town.

QUINCY-ISMS

School Supt. Paul Gossard proposed that during the strike of the E. Mass Street Railway that taxis be used to transport 110 elementary students with the leasing of busses to transport 830 junior high school students... Coast Guard and U.S. agents patrolled Quincy and South Shore waterfronts to intercept a $1 million arms shipment to Cuban President Fulgencio Batista. . . He told the meeting of the Quincy Shipbuilding Committee at the Fox and Hounds that he would be "nonpartisan in his Capitol work." . . . George Yarrington, executive director of the Quincy Taxpayers Association, said that "If the Plan A city council tax rate goes over $80 by a general raise for city employees, Plan E would be back in 1963.". . Dr. Charles Djerf was the speaker at the meeting of the Myles Standish School PTA. Mrs. Harold Neal was president... Nathan Belt of Longwood Rd. was the banquet chairman for the Temple Beth El dedication... The United Fund purchased 57 Revere Rd. to house three agencies: Red Cross, Visiting Nurses and Girl Scouts, for an estimated, combined rental savings of $360 monthly. . . Former city engineer Ezekial Sargent spoke to the Historical Society for early land records, specifically the Salters, Edmund Quincy and Crosby farms... ENC was continued in membership in the N.E. Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools, following a campus visit, that gave high marks to the school's new science building and the excellence of its library... For the first time Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa rode in the Christmas parade. He had just been released from Quincy City Hospital following minor surgery. . . John Wipfler, president of the Quincy-South Shore Central Labor Council, called for a reorganization of local unions of the AFL-CIO to form the Norfolk County Mass. Labor Council... Richard Flavin joined his father Jim as head of the insurance division at Flavin and Flavin... Msgr. Arthur Riley rode on the "Red Plane" to Rome with the new Cardinals. At Our Lady's rectory during his absence were asst. Charles Webber, Thomas Shortell, S.J. and Joseph Hyde, O.P.

WJDA Giving Trees Going Far Over Goal

WJDA's Giving Tree program has exceeded expectations, according to the program organizer.

"Thanks to tremendous support from the community, we're paced to have about 385 gifts for 97 children in the Headstart program. That's more than double our original goal," said Debbie Logan.

"The idea was to start small and see how the program was received," she added. "I'm so happy with the results. Thanks to everyone out there who's helped make this a success. Next year we'll aim even higher."

There are currently 11 Giving Trees around the South Shore. Each tree contains ornaments with a specific small gift request for a child. Items include toys and clothing. People are invited to remove a tag from the tree and purchase the gift indicated.

They should then wrap the gift, using the ornament as a gift-tag, and return it either to WJDA or the location where they received the ornament.

WJDA Giving Trees are located at WJDA; Brewed Awakenings in Hingham Square and Columbian Square; Bartlett's Bakery in Rockland; The Weymouth Club; Roxie's; Cambridge-port Bank inside Roche Brothers at the Falls; Second Sight in Quincy Center; and both locations of Braintree Cooperative Bank. The River Bay Club also has a tree for their residents and employees.

Headstart serves preschool children from low-income families in Quincy, Weymouth, Braintree and Hull. People who are participating are asked to return their wrapped gift by Dec. 18 for collection and distribution.

For more information about The WJDA Giving Tree program, call Debbie Logan at 479-1300.

ALCOHOL + PAIN RELIEVERS = ?

Here's another case of headlines creating chaos. When the news came out that mixing over-the-counter pain medications with alcohol could be dangerous, many people who down an occasional pill after finishing a glass of wine or beer wondered if they were in trouble. As usual, the answer isn't simple. Both alcohol and acetaminophen act on the liver, so combining the two carries an increased risk of liver damage, especially among people who consume a lot of either. Aspirin, ibuprofen, and naproxen leave the liver alone but can irritate the stomach, as can alcohol, so combining any of them can increase the danger of gastrointestinal upset and bleeding. The best advice is to follow medication label directions carefully and keep alcohol consumption to a minimum. Don't exceed recommended dosages, be careful about mixing medications, and avoid taking pain relievers of any kind while drinking alcohol.

P.S. The best beverage to take a pain reliever with is water, which helps the pill dissolve properly in the stomach.

Never mix medications without consulting your physician as all kinds of medical problems can easily be avoided with the proper advice. At COMPREHENSIVE MEDICAL CARE, located at 700 Congress St., in Quincy, we specialize in treating heart problems, hypertension, and cholesterol. Call 472-2550; office hours by appointment. FEELING AN UNWANTED PULL

Cars that drift or pull to one side of a flat road do not necessarily need wheel alignments. The first thing to check is tire pressure. Then, the tires should be examined for uneven wear. If the wear is uniform, it may be that an internal problem in one of the tires is causing the pull to one side. This can be determined by interchanging the left front wheel-and-tire assembly with the one on the right. If the pulling disappears or reappears on the other side, a tire is the problem. If not, it may be that an incorrect steering caster may be the culprit. An incorrectly angled caster can cause the car to drift without causing any abnormal tire wear. The side of the car to which the car pulls will have the wheel with the most negative caster angle. This alignment angle can be adjusted during a wheel alignment.

HINT: If the caster angle is not adjustable, replacement of some of the suspension parts may be necessary.

Don't hesitate to ask any questions about handling problems or about anything else related to your car when you bring it into LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO for servicing. We have modern test equipment, the right parts and the best ASE Certified service technicians available in the area. Let's get acquainted at 258 Quincy Ave., E. QUINCY MUNICIPAL CREDIT UNION recently donated $3,300 to the Quincy Park Department for new equipment at the Allerton Street Playground in Houghs Neck. From left are Park Department Executive Director Thomas Koch, William Phelan, James McCarthy, Harold Carroll and William Barron of the credit union's Board of Directors; Credit Union Community Reinvestment Committee Chairman Russell Patten Jr., Harold Goodwin of the Board of Directors, Credit Union President William Center and Credit Union CEO Stewart Steele.

Credit Union Donates $3,300 For Playground

The Quincy Municipal Credit Union recently donated $3,300 to the Quincy Park Department for the purpose of installing new playground equipment at the Allerton Street Playground.

Two new swingsets and a new slide were purchased and installed at the Houghs Neck playground. A sign recognizing the credit union's contribution will be installed at the site by the Park Department.

The new playground equipment is part of an ongoing effort by the Park Department to replace antiquated, unsafe equipment from children's playgrounds with more modern, safety-conscious equipment. Part of the recently-completed $3 million Park Improvement Bond, allocated by Mayor James Sheets and passed by the City Council, went to providing new "tot lots" at 10 different playgrounds throughout the city.

The credit union's gift is part of a continued commitment to give back to the community in which they are located. Each year, the credit union's Community Reinvestment Committee donates a portion of the annual budget to a municipal department to augment the services that are provided to the people of Quincy. Past donations have included monies for police, fire, hospital and other city departments.

The credit union, located on Washington Street, also sponsored the 1996 Quincy Tennis Tournament conducted by the Quincy Recreation Department.

"It is gratifying to realize that we are able to make a direct positive impact in the communities and neighborhoods of Quincy. I hope that this donation is enjoyed by hundreds of Houghs Neck youngsters for years to come," said Quincy Municipal Credit Union CEO Stewart Steele.

"The Quincy Municipal Credit Union continues to be a leader in fostering the type of private-public partnerships that have made Quincy such a success," said Park Director Thomas Koch. "As park director and a Quincy resident, I am grateful to have such an organization doing business in this city."

Retail Development Shifts To Downtowns

By DANIEL J. FLYNN

One of the latest trends in the retail commercial market is the shift of retail development from the regional mall to the urban city centers.

In major cities throughout the United States, consumers are returning to city centers. The experts cite various reasons for this shift, including the fact that people have less time today.

We are living in the electronic age. Consumers want more services than ever, like personal shoppers, babysitters and childcare, for example. This directly takes the focus off the regional mall. Due to cities operating 24 hours, seven days a week, many downtown areas of cities like Downtown Crossing in Boston are experiencing a Renaissance.

Downtown establishments offer the type of close-to-home conveniences needed for the person who is continually "on the go." Researchers have concluded that the average consumer now only spends two and a half hours per week shopping.

As a result, people moving back to the Main Street philosophy for their day-to-day shopping needs. It not only saves time, but retail developers believe that most consumers also want a sense of community when shopping. To create this communal atmosphere, architects are designing wider sidewalks, more colorful store awnings, and outdoor music all to provide a "feel good" shopping atmosphere in your own neighborhood.

Retail developers look to areas with a high employment rate, high density, and high traffic counts when they determine if a "new downtown" will be successful. They realize that consumers are smarter today. Main Street urban retail shoppers are strategically positioned for a quality retial mix as if they were in a mall with stores like The Limited, The Gap, Gap Kids, Coach and Borders, etc.

Developers of Main Street sites, often funded by Real Estate Investments Trusts (REITS), look to the upper-scale communities to develop urban retail centers. Some cities already experiencing the "Downtown Renaissance" are Greenwich, Conn.; Philadelphia, Pa.; Winter Haven, Fla.; Santa Monica, Calif.; Bethesda, Md.; and close to home, Coolidge Corner in Brookline.

In our local retail market, the suburban/regional mall will continue to offer consumers the full shopping experience. But there is also a need for "city center" shopping. Developers and retailers must learn from the past, listen to the people, and be willing to change to fit the needs of the consumer.

It's not as simple as in "Field of Dreams" where "If you build it, they will come." The hot dogs must be tasty, the seats comfortable, and the game entertaining!

Manet Center Holds 17th Annual Meeting

Manet Community Health Center, Inc., recently held its 17th Annual Meeting.

The corporation recognized the supportive team work of community residents, board members and staff required to meet its goals and mission "to ensure that its patients have access to all levels of care especially for the medically underserved".

Ellen Hafer, executive director, reported that Manet provided over 45,000 primary care visits in FY96. The health center continues to see high growth in managed care activities and in the need for services by a growing uninsured population, she said.

Larry Butler, president of the board for the past two years, reported that Manet ended the year with a positive bottom line and had increased services provided while reducing costs.

Fred Dolgin, M.D., medical director for Manet Community Health Center, Inc., praised City Council President Peter Kolson's contribution to Manet and the community. Dolgin noted that many people shy away from political activity today and that the community was fortunate that someone with Kolson's integrity and caring continues to serve. Dolgin presented Kolson with a "Community Service Award" from the board and staff.

Butler's contributions to the leadership of the Manet Board and to access to primary care services in Quincy, Hull and the South Shore were recognized. Butler is completing his term as president and has served on the board of directors for 10 years..

All board members were recognized for their years of service with certificates. Gertrude Peter was recognized for her involvement for 20 years since the planning of Manet CHC. She was elected president for the next year. Also elected to serve three-year board terms were Larry Butler, Judy Kolson, Richard Coleman, Joan McDonald, and Gertrude Peter. Richard Coleman was elected vice president, Barbara Morris, secretary, and Peg Richards, treasurer.

The Manet Center operates three sites in Quincy and one in Hull.. It is designed to provide access to primary care for all residents of the community regardless of ability to pay. Manet is able to provide services and programs to the uninsured through support from the state, federal and local governments.

Raiders Host Silver Lake In Opener Nov. 17

Size, Experience Keys For North

By LIAM FITZGERALD

Size, experience and leadership will be the keys to the success of this year's North Quincy High boys basketball team, said coach Ted Stevenson.

When the Red Raiders open their season Tuesday, Dec. 17 at 7 p.m. against visiting Old Colony League foe Silver Lake, six returning players will lead North Quincy's into battle.

Two of those players-- 6-8 junior center Brian Ross and 6-6 senior forward Matt Bromley--will wreak havoc on opposing defenses down in the blocks. Ross is already receiving attention from Division I schools, including Tennessee and Boston University, said Stevenson.

"With Ross and Bromley up front, it makes us bigger than a lot of teams," said Stevenson, in his 10th season as North's coach. "We'll kick it inside, push the ball and run the court. One of our goals this year is to control both backboards."

Senior forward Jim Finn (6-1), another returning player, will start alongside NQ's Twin Towers. Off the bench, North's other front court player will be senior forward Nick Shea (6-1).

When opponents double team North's big men, the Red Raiders will have the option of bombing away from outside. Sharpshooting senior guards Chris Erler (5-9) and Mike Johnson (6-0) and sophomore guard Brian Doyle (6-1) will be counted on to carry some of the offensive load. All three made significant contributions to last year's team.

"Erler, Johnson and Doyle are all good outside shooters," said Stevenson. "Twice last year, Erler hit six threes in a game, including six of seven in one game."

Erler and Johnson will start in the back court, with Doyle serving as the Red Raiders' sixth man. Joining this trio will be seniors Brendan Shidler (5-9), John Heim (5-10), Peter Connolly (5-9).

Finn and Erler, two players Stevenson can rely on to lead the team through a tough OCL season, will be the Red Raiders' co-captains.

"Jimmy and Chris and provide great leadership, both on and off the court," said Stevenson. "They set the example for the other kids, working hard in practice every day."

With all these essential ingredients in place, how does Stevenson feel the Red Raiders will fare?

"I think we'll be very good," he said. "We should be in the hunt for the Old Colony League title. It's hard to compare, but there's more talent on this team then the one that went 15-5 four years ago. On the other hand, the league has gotten tougher as well, so we'll have to see what happens."

Stevenson feels the Red Raiders will face their toughest tests against defending OCL champion Taunton, Bridgewater-Raynham, Boston English, and Milton, state champions a year ago.

"Taunton, B-R and North should be the big three in the league," he said. "Taunton is one of the better teams around, and they got everyone back, so we'll have our hands full with them. Boston English and Milton will be two tough non-league games for us."

Serving as Stevenson's assistant coach will be his son, Ted Stevenson Jr., a NQ graduate who played for his father during his senior season at North.

"This will be his first year here after coaching Hingham's JV squad the past two years," said Stevenson. "I feel very fortunate having coached him here and now coaching with him. Something like that doesn't happen too often."

Following the season opener against the Lakers, North hosts OCL opponent Weymouth Friday, Dec. 20 at 7 p.m.

Presidents Open Dec. 17 At Home Against Falmouth

Quincy's Hopes Lie With Its Depth, Defense

With three returning starters, a talented transfer from Don Bosco, and two junior varsity standouts among many other fresh faces, Quincy High School boys basketball coach John Franceschini may have reason to be optimistic about this year's squad.

"This is one of the deeper groups I've had here," said Franceschini. "Our depth makes us a better team. We could have nine or 10 players in a game, all contributing, which is a real nice situation.

"The kids enjoy playing with one another, and our chemistry is very good, which is a real positive sign heading into the season."

The Presidents kick off the new season Tuesday, Dec. 17 at 7 p.m. when Old Colony League foe Falmouth comes to town. Quincy then travels to Silver Lake Friday, Dec. 20 for a 7 p.m. contest.

Led by 6-3 senior forwards Bob Walsh and Geoff King, along with 5-11 point guard Brad Smith, the Presidents will look to improve on last year's disappointing five-win season.

"With those three starters back, I'm very optimistic about our chances," said Franceschini. "I think with their experience, close games will be in our favor.

"The players are close in abilities, which makes for great competition in practice. We have good speed at the guard position and a lot of quick forwards, but not a lot of size."

Lending the veteran trio a hand will be 6-2 senior swingman Carmen Lorenzano, in his first year at Quincy following a transfer from Don Bosco. Two of Quincy's top JV players, 5-10 junior guard Jared Downey and 6-2 junior forward Jim Quigley, will also be relied on in their first year on the varsity.

Others vying for playing time include sophomore forward Dennis Palardi and guards Steve Reeves and Jim Munchbach, along with freshman guard Dan Kelley, who Franceschini expects will make a "great impact" on the Presidents' squad.

Squirts Top Tri County, Milton

The Quincy Youth Hockey Squirts, aka Barter's Bullies, had a busy week on the ice, defeating Tri County and Milton after tying up South Boston.

Sponsored by Sugarmans of Quincy, the Bullies blanked Tri County, 3-0, behind the outstanding defense of Keith Flaherty and Tony (Benji) Benigni and the solid netminding by goaltender Ryan (The Beezer) Barter.

Quincy forward Paul Graham charged ahead with linemates Danny Donovan and Joey McManus for a goal that was a passing spectacle. Donovan broke loose in the second and single-handedly fired on in the past the Tri County goaltender. Forward Alex Shaffer took a pass right on his stick from Brendan Clifford and whizzed one into the net.

The Bullies then traveled to Milton to play their first States game. A large contingency of Bullies fans (aka The Sugar Babies) filled the visitors' stands to root on the Quincy squad to a 4-1 triumph.

Milton scored 30 seconds into the game on a breakaway that left the Bullies baffled. However, the Bullies answered right back, when Brendan Linnane took the puck up ice, passed back to the pointman Jonathan O'Connor, who fed Alex Shaffer for the goal at 1:33 in the first period.

The Bullies' Mike Tetreault scored the eventual game-winner, an unassisted scored in the second period. Shaffer later scored his second goal of the game on a play set up by Paul Graham passing to Joey McManus, who found Shaffer for the score. Paul McLean and Justin Thorley were robbed by the quick hands and the face mask of the Milton goaltender.

Mike Faherty was outstanding as he set up the forwards and moved the puck ice for the Bullies on several occasions. Quincy had a chance to seal the win with a penalty shot by Paul Graham, but the Milton goaltender's quick hands denied Graham the goal.

Chris (The Bulldozer) Sheehan kept the action in front of him, not allowing the puck to elude him and enter the Bullies' zone. Tony (Benji) Benigni, O'Connor and Flaherty set up walls, turning back Milton's offense on numerous occasions. Goaltender Ryan (The Beezer) Barter blocked many a shot en route to the victory.

The win over Milton moved the Bullies into the second round of the States Tournament to be played later this month.

Quincy's Hopes Lie In Its Depth, Defense

Hyacinthe, Brandelle Pinckney (JV's leading scorer last season) and Tom McIntyre will come off the bench to provide scoring and help out on the boards.

The primary characteristic of a Franceschini-coached team, its in-your-face defense, will receive a boost this season with the implementation of the 30-second clock in Massachusetts high school games.

"We always generate our offense from our defense, so this 30-second clock is another element on your side on defense," said Franceschini. "We'll be a team of changing defenses, though primarily man-to-man. We play defense full court, make you work every foot of the court, play right up on you and put the pressure on your offense."

Offensively, Franceschini is impressed with the Presidents' shooting, which he noted has improved over the off-season.

"This is one of our better shooting teams," said the coach. "Last year, we lost seven games by four or fewer points, mostly because of our poor free throw shooting. We finished the season around 57 percent from the line, which just can't happen. We have to get that up to the low 70's or better."

The team to beat in the OCL, said Franceschini, is defending champion Taunton, which returns all five starters to a deep and talented squad.

"I see them (Taunton) as above the rest of the league, with so many good players back this year," he said. "A close second is Bridgewater-Raynham, which lost just one starter.

"The rest of the league has lost some players, but remains a very competitive league. As the saying goes, anyone can beat anyone on a given night."

Looking at the overall picture, Franceschini sees a tournament slot with Quincy's name on it--if the Presidents get off to a good start against their league foes.

"If we get through our first 10 games with a .500 or better mark," he said, "we should have a legitimate shot at making the tournament."

SCOTT DEWARE

A Thought For The Week

During the early years a child is frequently asked his or her age. It is one of the first things learned. Birthday cards mentioning an exact age are often seen. Candles on cakes correspond in equal number.

In later Years, family records, court records, school records, employment records, social Security records all mention age. From the birth certificate to the death certificate, age is a dominant concern. In many cases the concern is unwarranted, even absurd. It is ridiculous when either the young or old attach a mistaken importance to the number of candles on the cake. Behavior, ability, achievements, skills, health, attitude and mental outlook are the indicators of a realistic age. For example, in your own case, if you did not actually know how old you are, how old would you realistically think you are? . . .

Your comments are welcome on this or any other thought you read here . . . and are appreciated. . .

Cremation Society Working With Pacemaker Organization

The Cremation Society of Massachusetts has joined forces with Heart Too Heart, a pacemaker recovery organization founded in Billings, Mont. in 1994.

The organization recovers and refurbishes pacemakers to be used in third world countries of eastern Europe, Asia, the Middle East and the Caribbean.

Cremation Society President Scott Hamel of the Hamel, Wickens and Troupe Funeral Home in Quincy explained how the process works.

"Pacemakers are removed before the cremation takes place since they can cause damage to the cremation chamber if they explode during the cremation process," he said. "In the past, we had nothing to do with these medical devices except return them to the family or throw them away. We are pleased to participate in this program where some good can come from the equipment."

Once a pacemaker is received, the donor's family is acknowledged by Heart Too Heart.

Heart Too Heart Program founder Bill Daem said, "Families see pacemaker donation as equal to organ donation and are delighted to know that the pacemaker that serviced their loved one so well can serve others."

For more information about the program, call the Cremation Society at 1-800-696-5887.

PUBLIC NOTICE

U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development
Community Development Block Grant Program
COMBINED NOTICE OF FINDING OF NO SIGNIFICANT IMPACT AND OF INTENT TO REQUEST A RELEASE OF GRANT FUNDS

CITY OF QUINCY December 10, 1996
1305 Hancock Street
Quincy, MA 02169
617-376-1373

TO ALL INTERESTED AGENCIES, GROUPS AND PERSONS:

On or about December 27, 1996, the CITY OF QUINCY will request the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development to release Federal funds under Title I of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974, the U.S. Housing Act of 1937, the Steward McKinney Homeless Assistance Act, and the Cranston-Gonzales National Affordable Housing Act for the following project:

PROJECT TITLE OR NAME: Habitat for Humanity Housing Development

PURPOSE OR NATURE OF PROJECT: Construction of 8-10 family units and streets and sidewalks; Installation of sewer/water lines, etc.

LOCATION OF PROJECT: Bower Rd., Quincy, Norfolk County, Massachusetts

EST. COST OF PROJECT: $1,000,000 ($115,346 from HUD's Housing Opportunity Program; $63,000 from CDBG; $90,600 from HOME Program)

PROJECT SUMMARY: Construction of 8-10 mostly single housing units, extension of an existing road and sidewalks and installation of utility lines.

FINDING OF NO SIGNIFICANT IMPACT:

An environmental review for the project has been made by the CITY OF QUINCY and is available for public examination and copying at the office noted below. Based on this review, the City of Quincy has determined that a request for release of project funds will not significantly affect the quality of the human environment and hence an environmental impact statement will not be undertaken under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (P.L. 91-910).

Department of Planning and Community Development
1305 Hancock Street, Quincy, MA 02169

The reasons for the decision not to prepare an environmental impact statement is that the project will have no significant negative effect and will actually enhance the quality of the human environment.

The CITY OF QUINCY will undertake the projects described above with Block Grant funds from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD), under Title I of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974, the HOME Program and the Housing Opportunity Program. The CITY OF QUINCY is certifying to HUD that the CITY OF QUINCY and its Chief Executive Officer in his official capacity, consent to accept the jurisdiction of the Federal courts if an action is brought to enforce responsibilities in relation to environmental reviews, decision making, and action; and that these responsibilities have been satisfied. The legal effect of the certification is that upon its approval, the CITY OF QUINCY may use the Block Grant, HOME and the Home Opportunity Program funds, and HUD will have satisfied its responsibilities under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 and other environmental responsibilities listed in 24 CFR Part 58. HUD will accept an objection to its approval of the release of funds and acceptance of the certification only if it is on one of the following bases: (a) that the certification was not in fact executed by the Chief Executive Officer or other officer of the City of Quincy; (b) that the Applicant's environmental review record for the projects indicated omission of a required decision finding, or step applicable to the project in the environmental review process; or (c) another Federal agency has submitted written comments pursuant to Section 309 for the Clean Air Act or Section 102(c) of NEPA. Objections must be prepared and submitted in accordance with the required procedure (24 CFR Part 58), and may be addressed to HUD, Room 313, 10 Causeway Street, Boston, MA 02222. Objections to this release of funds on bases other than those stated above will not be considered by HUD. No objection received after 15 days from the date of request of funds listed above will be considered by HUD.

MASSACHUSETTS DEPARTMENT of the American Legion recently donated $9,500 to St. Coletta's of Massachusetts for the purchase of a forklift. St. Coletta's operates work centers for students with special needs and the forklift will be used to transport materials from delivery trucks to the centers. From left are Legion State Hospital Chairman Richard Dean, Past Department Commander Arthur Smith, Past National Commander John "Jake" Comer of Quincy, District 7 Commander Henriett Justice, Department Vice Commander James Flattes Sr., St. Coletta's Production Manager Carol O'Dowd, St. Coletta's Vice President/Director of Programs and Operations Henry Perrin, Tom Walsh of Yellow Freight which supplied the 1992 Caterpillar forklift and Michael Bliss of Cooney Industrial Trucks which re-conditioned the forklift.

Too Many Clients A Daily Reality

Fr. Bill's Facing Same Problem As Other Shelters

Homeless shelters throughout Massachusetts have been attracting more clients than they have beds in recent days, and Father Bill's Place in Quincy is no exception.

In fact, the percentage of people helped at Father's Bill's last winter is even greater than the statewide average, according to Joseph Finn, executive director of the Quincy Interfaith Sheltering Coalition (QISC), which operates the shelter.

Finn said Father Bill's, which has 75 beds for the homeless between the shelter on Broad Street and its satellite spot at the former St. John's School in Quincy Center, operated at 113 percent of capacity throughout last winter. A recent study indicated that the statewide average for homeless shelters is 110 percent.

"Yes, we've been feeling the problem as well," he said. "We're always over capacity, although the number of clients changes from night to night."

While the amount of people the shelter attracts in the winter tends to be a little higher than the rest of the year, Finn said the fact that overcapacity is a year-round problem mainly can be attributed to the fact that the state has cut back on funding to certain programs.

"There's broader issues than the weather," he said. "There's now a lack of other services and other kinds of housing."

Finn said a planned expansion of Father Bill's will provide the shelter with a little more space for women's beds. However, he added that ultimately it likely will take partnerships and collaborations between various state and housing agencies to address the problem.

The QISC has an annual operating budget of about $1 million, which includes the operation of the shelter and other housing services. Finn said about 50 percent of that figure comes from the state and the other half from private donations.

Junkyard Complaints Bring Committee Action

Health Inspector Jane Gallahue questioned whether or not there was hazardous materials being shipped to Sugarman containing asbestos.

She suggested a private company to inspect the premises.

Sugarman said that the DEP did a "walk through" about a year ago, but that he never received a report on any analysis. Shea said he would work with Gallahue and try to get results from the DEP.

A few neighbors said they would volunteer to help in any way they could to come to some agreement.

The hearing was continued indefinitely.

McCauley Asks For Report On Seniors GED Test

Board of Education Chairman John Silber will require all high school seniors in Massachusetts to take the test, although it is not clear yet when that will take place. The board also has the authority to reverse it decision if it so chooses, he added.

Creedon said regardless of what happens with the GED test, a new mandatory test for high school seniors currently being designed as a result of the state Education Reform Act of 1993 is expected to be implemented in the next two to three years.

McCauley also planned to ask Creedon at this week's committee meeting to present a report Feb. 5 on the financial impact the Education Reform Act has had on the Quincy schools and the city's school budget.

QUINCY ROTARY CLUB members recently manned the Salvation Army kettles at Stop & Shop on Southern Artery. Among the volunteers who rang bells and collected donations were Fred Bergfors and Beth Greenspan. More volunteers are needed to man kettle sites for the Quincy Temple Corps.

Volunteers Badly Needed To Man Kettles

Salvation Army Donations Running Far Below Goal

A severe shortage of volunteer bellringers has left the Salvation Army far below its holiday fundraising goal with just six days left before Christmas.

Throughout the state, contributions are down $300,000 and at the Quincy Temple Corps, Capt. Scott Kelly is projecting a $45,000 shortfall unless there is more help.

"The number of volunteers here is down 40 percent," Kelly said. "This means the number of kettles we have been able to put out is down 40 percent also."

Unless enough volunteers come forward, Kelly is projecting a $45,000 goal shortfall which would be $37,000 behind last year.

And last year was not a good year.

Kelly said anyone willing to volunteer to man a kettle is asked to call the Quincy Corps at 617-472-2345. The Quincy Corps is located at 6 Baxter St., just off Washington St.

"We would be most grateful for any help," said Kelly. Otherwise, it's going to be pretty dismal."

The Massachusetts Divisional Headquarters reports that while contributions are far below goal, requests for aid are up 13.5 percent since that new state welfare law took effect in November of last year.

No Sewer Rate Hike For Third Straight Year

Mayor James Sheets said Tuesday there will be no sewer rate increase for Quincy residents for the third consecutive year.

Sheets said the rate will not go up because the City Council placed $1 million into the city's stabilization fund designed to help offset Massachusetts Water Resources Authority rates on Monday night.

"That is a fund which allows us to control the sewer fee," said Sheets. "We're happy to be able to do that."

The council voted unanimously to appropriate the money this week. A total of $597,114 was taken from Quincy's free cash (cash reserve) account, while the other $402,886 was left over from the amount the city originally had set aside for the sewer rates.

Sheets said at the beginning of a fiscal year, the city must project the amount of the MWRA rates. This year, the city's projection was a little over $400,000 more than the actual rate, and the leftover money was added to the free cash amount to make an even $1 million in the stabilization fund.

The mayor also noted that while the MWRA's charge for water usage is not directly affected by the stabilization fund, that figure also has stabilized and is not expected to increase.

"And the sewer fee is the one that really skyrockets," he said.

Teen Center Receives $20,000 From Council

The City Council appropriated $20,000 Monday night to pay for staffing and equipment The Teen Get-Away, a youth center that operates out of two sites in Quincy.

The funding was taken from the city's federal Urban Development Action Grant (UDAG) monies.

Bob Jarnis, a member of the center's board of directors, said "a good portion" of The Teen Get-Away's funding comes from the city, although it also receives money from private donations and smaller fees from the participating teens.

The center operates Friday nights at Quincy Community United Methodist Church in Wollaston and Saturday evenings at the South Shore YMCA in Quincy Center.

Unanimous Approval

Council Okays Tax Rates

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The City Council has unanimously approved Mayor James Sheets' tax classification rates for Fiscal Year 1997.

The council voted 9-0 Monday night to pass the tax plan. As a result, the average homeowner will see a $56 increase in his or her tax bill.

Sheets' plan calls for new tax rates of $31.31 (per $1,000) for Commercial, Industrial and Personal Property--also known as CIPP--and $14.92 for residential property, increases of 73 cents and 38 cents respectively. Last year, the rates were $30.58 and $14.54.

The increase totals about 2.6 percent for residential property and just below that for CIPP.

Sheets has said the tax increase--the largest Quincy has seen in three years--is necessary to cover a 4 percent pay hike for city workers and an expected decrease in state education and Lottery aid in Fiscal Year 1998, which begins next July 1.

The mayor said Tuesday that the city, which has not called for a tax rate increase the past two fiscal years, is doing its best to go easy on taxpayers.

"I still think to have one tax rate increase in three years is pretty good," said Sheets.

The owner of an average single-family home valued at $141,000 will pay $2,105 this fiscal year. Last year, the average homeowner's tax bill for a home valued at $140,900 increased from $2,019 to $2,049.

Under the new rates, business owners will pay about 33 percent of Quincy's tax levy of $81.1 million. As was the case last year, the city opted to tax CIPP at 169 percent of the levy which is less than the maximum of 175 percent required under state law.

Homeowners will pay about 67 percent of the levy, despite the fact that residential property accounts for about 78 percent of the total value of real estate in the city.

Total commercial property valuations will decrease slightly, from $965.2 million in FY96 to $963.9 million in FY97. Residential values will rise minimally from $3.39 billion to $3.41 billion.

Property taxes are the largest single source of revenue for the city's budget (approximately 60 percent) which was $143.1 million this year. The rest comes from local receipts, including sewer and water bills, excise taxes and other fees as well as state aid.

On Monday night, the council held a public hearing on the tax rates. Two people spoke against the increase and no one voiced support.

Frank Cirillo of 78 Nightingale Ave. and Roy Johnson of 12 Harrison St. both complained about the tax hike, saying property taxes should not go up if the city has a surplus of funds.

Early Deadline For Sun Christmas Issue

Because Christmas falls on a Wednesday, there will be an unusually early news deadline for next week's Quincy Sun.

All news and church releases, legal notices, retail advertising and classified ads must be in The Sun office, 1372 Hancock St., by 2 p.m. today (Thursday) to ensure publication.

The same early deadline will apply for the New Year's issue.

Next week's Sun will be on the newsstands and to our carriers Monday. Mail subscribers should receive it Tuesday.

Next week's issue will carry traditional holiday wishes from fifth graders in the public and parochial schools.

Concourse Committee Meeting Today

The Quincy Citizens Advisory Committee (CAC) for the Quincy Center Concourse will meet today (Thursday) at 3:15 p.m. in the second floor Conference Room at City Hall Annex, 1305 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

The CAC recently started to address the design and safety features of the bridge and roadway to be constructed as a connecting link between Burgin Parkway on the west side and Hancock Street and McGrath Highway on the east side.

The CAC will make its recommendations to Mayor James Sheets and the task force committee of the project. Input from the CAC and general public is essential to the progress of the project to maintain scheduled deadlines.

At a recent CAC meeting, several recommendations relative to the west side at Granite Street, the bridge over the MBTA tracks, and the Paperama parking area where decided. They will be placed before the Quincy Department of Public Works and Earth Tech officials for final consideration.

The CAC will take up its recommendations for the East Side phase involving landtakings, traffic flow, and routing at its meeting today.

Meetings are open to the public.

QHA Donates $8,635 To 17 Organizations

The Quincy Housing Authority recently donated the profits of its recent 50th anniversary celebration, a total of $8,635, to 17 city organizations.

The largest of the donations went to the Quincy Police Athletic League, Quincy Teen Mothers Program and the Quincy Chapter AARP Scholarship, which each received $1,000.

QHA Executive Director John "Jake" Comer said because the authority is a non-profit organization, it could not keep the proceeds from the celebration, most of which came from an ad book.

"It was our interest all along, after all the expenses were paid, to distribute any profit to organizations in the community, and we were happy to do that," he said.

Other organizations that received donations:

Quincy Housing Authority Lunch Program, Seaside Advocacy Group, Quincy Community Action Programs, Quincy Interfaith Sheltering Coalition, Helping Hands of Brockton, Father Bill's Place (for Veterans' Home on Burgin Parkway), Quincy Firefighters' Association, Harborview Residents' Committee, Degan Memorial Fund, Horace Mann Society, Boy Scouts of America, The American Legion Children and Youth Account, New England Shelter for Homeless Veterans and South Shore Mental Health Center.

Neighbors Complain About Blasting At Wal-Mart Site

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Although the Quincy License board continued a hearing regarding the storage of 1,000 gallons of propane tanks behind Wal-Mart Stores until Jan. 7, they listened to almost two hours of complaints about blasting from neighbors who live on Bower Road.

Judy Dacy, a disabled resident of Bower Road, said her health is being affected by the heavy dust on her shelves and all around her home caused by the blasting. She said the dust is so heavy on the shelves which she has to clean every day, she can "write her name on them."

She said she is "resentful" of the way the project is being run and accused the persons blasting of not correctly notifying her when they were going to blast, and said they had "plain bad manners."

Another resident, Jack Romans, the closest resident of the blasting spoke of cracked ceilings, bricks falling off of chimneys, having to have his car washed daily and said the whistles that were blown were "not loud enough" to make residents aware of the oncoming blast.

George Colarusso, who owns a courier company in the area asked the board to deny or table the request for the storage of the propane. He cited a time when the blasting was supposed to occur at 4 p.m. only to have them do it at 3:23 p.m., causing breakage of two of his computers.

Trooper Bill Shaughnessy of the fire marshal's office tried to explain the technology of the blasting and noted that the blasting was well within the limits established by law. Although he said that the blasting was "not in violation," residents still voiced concerns.

Paul Della Barba, project manager of The Falls, who said he was surprised at the complaints said he will try to rectify some of the flaws by the blasting company.

Citing a lack of communication, Dacy, Romans and Colarusso said they didn't even know who Della Barba was until recently.

Matt Mulvey, building inspector and board member said that a cleaning company should be responsible for the dust accumulated from the blasting and threatened to revoke the building license on site if proper action was not taken.

Chairman Joseph Shea questioned whether a natural gas line could be brought in from another customer and cited the fact that Roche Brothers has natural gas.

Ward 2 Councillor Dan Raymondi suggested a meeting at night with engineers, license board members and contractors to address the issue of blasting as related to one's health. And also to adopt a "dust control plan".

Raymondi referred to a recent article about a propane fire in Walpole, and questioned the safety of its storage.

Councillor At Large Paul Harold also expressed concerns about an accident and questioned Fire Chief Gorman what the evacuation radius would be. In citing public safety concerns he also wanted to know if fighting a fire from propane was different from oil or natural gas.

Gorman said the fact that the tanks will be underground, chances of an accident happening are almost "nil."

He said more accidents occur from oil and gas than propane. He added that up North and down South, propane is used quite often mostly without incident.

D.J. McKinnon at Atlantic Development told the board that propane was part of the original Wal-Mart plan and that natural gas would require a longer blasting program.

Stuart Latrell, owner and developer of the Wal-Mart parcel said the installation of propane tanks has less of an impact and reduces the scope of blasting as compared to natural gas.

Latrell said propane has been installed in 30 businesses that he has constructed in New England.

Before the License Board meeting scheduled for Jan. 7, a neighborhood meeting will be held in the community room of Roche Brothers.

NEWLY PLANTED TREES recently were added to the Quincy Park Department facility at 100 Southern Artery as part of the Mass Releaf Program. Mass Releaf allows funeral homes to donate $10 for every arrangement they handle into a fund that goes toward planting trees in the community. From left are Tree Warden Frank McLaughlin, Park Department Executive Director Thomas Koch, Ed Keohane of the Keohane Funeral Home, a longtime program participant; Mass Releaf Program Director Edith Makra and Philip Rodbell, program coordinator of urban and community forestry for the Massachusetts Department of Environmental Management.

Beware Of Telephone Scam

Quincy Hospital is asking residents to be aware of a phone scam that has recently been taking place in the city.

A hospital spokesperson said callers have been contacting residents and identifying themselves as a group raising money for "the children of Quincy Hospital" or local veterans' organizations. Residents are asked to leave checks in their mailboxes for pickup.

The hospital is not connected with any phone solicitation and only asks for donations through mailings the spokesperson said.

Praise For The Park Department

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

Having just moved back to Quincy after a three-year absence, I was astonished to notice the condition of the city's basketball and tennis courts.

I remember that they used to be in rather tough shape but were still playable. Now they are unbelievable! The Park Department should be commended for their fine work on the courts.

The courts (both tennis and basketball) at Fenno Street are the best outdoors courts I have every played at. Quincy should be proud of the commitment they have made to their parks. Every one that I drive by, looks as if it were just built.

I congratulate Mayor Sheets on turning the park system around and hope that the city is able to maintain what I consider to be the finest parks and playgrounds around.

TANGIBLE EVIDENCE

Sometimes an accident victim can only offer a description of the events that led to an accident. In other cases, those who suffer injury have the benefit of physical evidence to help corroborate their stories. Such evidence may come in the form of a broken stair or a skid mark that may indicate how fast a vehicle was moving. If such evidence cannot be saved for exhibition later on, it is imperative that a photograph of it be taken soon after the accident. It is important to shoot the photographs from a variety of angles to give an accurate representation of the evidence. It is also a good idea to establish the time that the photographs were taken by including a newspaper in the pictures or by having the film developed immediately with the date indicated on the backs of the pictures.

Hint: Photographs of injuries can give testimony as to their severity weeks and months after they heal and trial begins.

It is hard to think straight after involvement in an accident. First, make sure that a police writes up an accident report. If you are able to, write down as many details surrounding the accident while you are at the scene. For further information, call 773-2880. My office is conveniently located at Gridley Bryant Office Condominiums, 111 Willard Street.

Mariano Eyes Sheriff Run

Ron Mariano still has his eye on the Norfolk County sheriff's badge.

There has been some recent speculation that Mariano would not run after Republican Jack Flood was named by Gov. William Weld to fill the two-year unexpired term of late Sheriff Clifford Marshall of Quincy.

MARIANO

But Mariano says: "I'm giving it serious thought and will make a final decision by January or February."

Mariano adds: "Right now, I'm looking at the numbers."

By numbers he means both potential votes throughout the county and enough money to mount an effective campaign in 1998.

He and others feel something like $200,000 will be needed.

As for the votes being out there, Mariano sees a good sign in the numbers Tim Cahill rolled up last month to unseat Norfolk County Treasurer Robert Hall, a Republican.

"I think the votes would be there for a Democrat sheriff candidate," says Mariano.

As a state representative, Mariano represents part of both Quincy and Weymouth. And, as a school committeeman, he has a Quincy city-wide vote base.

Although the appointment of Flood, a long-time Democrat who recently turned Republican, seems to have cooled other potential candidates, it apparently hasn't discouraged Mariano.

His final decision, however, may depend on whether he can raise the necessary $200,000 or so to finance a strong bid.

"Running for sheriff is something I have thought about for a long time," says Mariano. "I always thought I would run when Kippy Marshall retired."

Marshall, who served 21 years as sheriff, was thinking of retiring after finishing his fourth term. But a brain cancer he courageously battled, cruelly stole retirement away from him last August.

Mariano now has the same state representative seat that Marshall held before being elected sheriff. And he would like to follow the same route to Dedham.

INCIDENTALLY, Mariano likes the idea of naming the new Quincy Point School in Marshall's honor.

His would be one of the four school committee votes needed.

"I'm leaning toward a vote for Kippy," says Mariano. "I think it would be quite appropriate to name the school for him."

Bill Draicchio, retired Quincy police officer who crossed students for 34 years at Southern Artery and Washington St., suggested here last week that the new school be named for Marshall.

SCHOOL COMMITTEEMAN Frank McCauley at last week's meeting asked School Supt. Gene Creedon to gather more formation about the GED test high school seniors. At that time it appeared the test would be mandatory throughout the state but now apparently won't be.

McCAULEY

While discussing the matter, McCauley quipped: "The School Committee should take the test before the seniors do. And if they flunk it, they should be out." (Off the school committee.)

But he added that any school committee member over 65 should be exempt from having to take the test.

McCauley is 66.

GEORGE McDONALD, former city councillor and Norfolk County commissioner, is recuperating at his Grove St. home following two heart attacks and heart surgery in October.

G. McDONALD

"He's coming along nicely," says his wife, Sheila. "And he's most grateful for all the cards he has received from so many old friends who responded to the item about him."

They'll be glad to hear of the progress he is making. Stay in there, Buddy.

OUR NOMINATION FOR the "Nice Person of the Week Award": Jack McDonald, George's brother. Jack owns the Common Market where last week he hosted a reception honoring Fr. William McCarthy on his 70th birthday.

J. McDONALD

Jack picked up the entire tab so that every penny of the ticket price ($20) went to Fr. Bill's Place which, of course, is named for Fr. McCarthy. The event raised over $6,000 to help the homeless at Fr. Bill's.

BRIAN BUCKLEY, executive director of the Quincy Council on Aging, has done it again.

BUCKLEY and SHAPIRO

He got another celebrity to pose with him for this year's Christmas card: Robert Shapiro.

Buckley heard Shapiro would be at WBZ in September to appear on a talk show and hustled in there where he met Shapiro and asked him to pose.

"He was very accommodating," says Buckley. "Very nice and down to earth."

No, Buckley didn't ask him about the O.J. Simpson case.

Shapiro joins such other Buckley Christmas card celebrities as: Ray Charles (last year), Shaquille O'Neal, Johnny Cash, Bobby Hull, Lee Trevino, Rafer Johnson, Chris Ford, Bill Fitch, Monty Hall, Marjorie Vincent (Miss America 1990), Jerry (The Beaver) Mathers, Jack Nicklaus, Reggie Jackson, George Wendt, Burt Reynolds, Bob Hope, Bo Derrick, Carroll O'Connor, Bobby Orr, Rodney Dangerfield and Nick Nolte.

Only two have turned him down: Gene Autry and Penn State football coach Joe Paterno.

LAST WEEK WE asked if Nancy McArdle, co-owner of Hancock Tobacco, reminded you a little of Liza Minnelli. Some said yes. But Marie Watts, Quincy Center Business and Professional Association secretary, thinks Nancy's more a Teresa Brewer look-alike. What do you think?

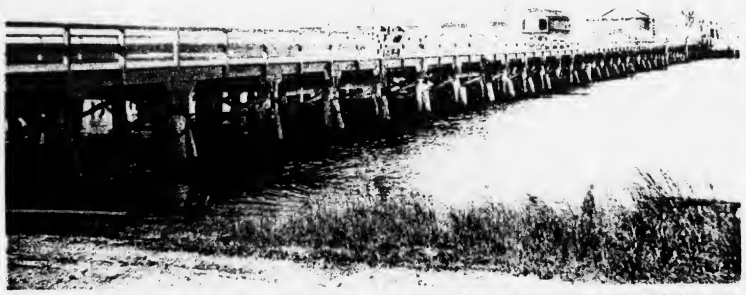
THAT HANDSOME 30-foot blue spruce placed on McIntyre Mall in front of new City Hall was donated by the Ronald McGann family on Russell St. The tree is prettily decorated and was the center-piece for the city's annual Christmas tree lighting ceremony.

Tom Koch and the Park Department will soon purchase a new blue spruce to plant in the McGann's yard to replace the one they donated.

Scenes From Yesterday

Neponset Bridge, Neponset, Mass.



THIS IS A 1908 postcard view of the old wooden Neponset River bridge that extended Hancock Street in Atlantic across the river to Boston. This picture was taken from near the old Neponset skating rink on the Boston side. In 1923 this bridge was replaced by a much larger arched Quincy granite structure which in turn was replaced by the maze of concrete roadways and ramps crossing the river at this site today. What will be next?

A Thank You From The Christmas Festival Committee

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

The members of the Quincy Christmas Festival Committee extend sincere appreciation to the editorial and pictorial staff of your newspaper for the extensive coverage given the Committee- sponsored holiday activities held recently.

These activities start with the selection of a theme for the parade each year. An area-wide contest resulted in a record number of entries and final selection of "A Story Book Christmas" as this year's theme.

The poster contest held in Quincy elementary schools and the construction of the many beautiful and prize-winning floats are based on the parade theme. Poster contest entries and the number of floats increased this year.

The crowd, including many hundreds of children who turned out for the turning on of the Christmas lights in front of the Church of the Presidents and Quincy City Hall, enjoyed themselves immensely and set the tone for other holiday activities.

Another large crowd thrilled to the official arrival of Santa Claus and his helpers by parachute onto Faxon Field by a most spectacular jump from a plane.

The 44th annual Quincy Christmas parade attracted an estimated 200,000 spectators of all ages along the Hancock Street line of march. This parade, considered the largest of its kind on the East Coast, has become an integral part of Quincy's history and holiday tradition.

The Festival Committee also wishes to thank the general public for its support and cooperation in making these events the success they have become. Lastly, a special thanks to all the sponsors who contribute in various ways to make these events possible.

The Festival Committee is already making plans for a bigger than ever parade for next year.

Sincere best wishes for a most Happy Holiday season to all.

The Quincy Christmas Festival Committee

Cahill Thanks Voters

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

It is with deep pride that I take this opportunity to thank each voter who participated in the 1996 November election.

Again, Massachusetts residents were in the national forefront when it came to exercising their democratic rights, with three out of four voters going to the polls. In certain Norfolk County communities, the voting percentage exceeded 80 percent, nearly 50 percent above the national average!

As the newly-elected treasurer of Norfolk County, it is an honor to have been selected to serve you for the next six years. It is also an honor to have been considered for this office by so many caring people who took seriously their voting responsibilities. I am truly humbled by your support for my candidacy, but more importantly, for your support of the electoral process.

Timothy Cahill,
Treasurer-Elect
Norfolk County

Thanks For Paul Foley Benefit Help

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

We would like to thank you for all your help in promoting the Paul Foley raffle.

We raised over $6,000 and without your participation it would not have been possible.

Again, our sincerest thanks to all who were involved in the raffle. We wish everyone a Happy Holiday and a great New Year!

Quincy's Yesterdays

Post Office Swamped With Millions Of Letters

Dec. 19 - 25
1962

By PAUL HAROLD

For three days in a row, the Quincy post office was handling more than one million letters a day, its largest volume ever, said Postmaster Frank Anselmo.

His regular staff of 210 was beefed up with more than 350 extra holiday assistants, housewives and college delivery boys.

In the spirit of the holiday, the post office lobby was decorated by Frank Ramacorti along with paintings by city school children.

Anselmo also noted that the new red and green four-cent Christmas stamps were already sold out.

700 AT HOUGHS NECK CHRISTMAS PARTY

More than 700 children age 12 and under were treated to the annual Houghs Neck Christmas party at the Atherton Hough School hall.

The event was chaired by Vincent Vecchione, the junior vice commander of the Houghs Neck Legion that sponsored the party along with Most Blessed Sacrament Church, the Houghs Neck Congregational Church, Houghs Neck Community Council and the auxiliary of the Legion post.

Christmas films and cartoons were shown by Arthur Saccoach, with caroling by the Council Carolers.

1963 STATE LEGION CONVENTION HERE

In ceremonies at the State House, state American Legion officials signed a contract to hold their 1963 state convention in Quincy.

The signing culminated a two-year effort by Anthony Ravida, commander of the Wollaston Legion Post, and Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa to bring the estimated 1600 convention delegates to the city.

The convention meetings were slated to be held at Quincy High School, with the drum and bugle corps competition at Memorial Stadium. Also, as part of the convention activities, a four-hour parade would be held along Hancock St.

$89,500 Appropriated For Cemetery, New Trees

The Quincy Park-Forestry-Cemetery Department received $89,500 from the City Council Monday night.

A total of $75,000 for Pine Hill Cemetery in West Quincy was appropriated from the city's sale of lots account. Department Executive Director Thomas Koch said the money will be used to begin work on a new section at the cemetery, where work on Section 7 was completed last year.

"We've still got quite a bit of room to work with up there," said Koch.

The other $14,500, which was taken from the city's free cash (cash reserve) account, will be used to help the department pay for tree plantings around the city.

Koch said although the council appropriated $75,000 for that effort in October, the bid from the firm hired to perform the work, DelPrett Co. of Rockland, came in higher than expected.

Council Okays Tax Rates

Councillor Michael Cheney, however, said any surplus the city possesses at the end of a fiscal year must be used for other purposes and has nothing to do with the budget.

Cheney also pointed to an appropriation of $1 million Monday night that was placed in the city's stabilization account to help offset the impact of Massachusetts Water Resources Authority water and sewer rates, as well as the fact that city has held the line on property taxes in recent years, as examples of the council's efforts to reduce the financial burden on Quincy residents.

Bellotti Co-Sponsors Resolution For Low-Income Energy Assistance

State Rep. Michael Bellotti has co-sponsored a resolution filed recently in the Massachusetts House of Representatives asking President Clinton not to seek a 25 percent cut to the Low Income Home Energy Assistance Program offered by the White House Budget Office for the President's fiscal 1998 budget proposal.

The administration plans to seek a cut that will eliminate the program in five years.

"This news could not come at a worse time as the prices for heating oil, natural gas and propane have risen sharply this year," said Bellotti. "Between the proposed Medex rate increase and the possible elimination of the local Office of Elder Services, many senior citizens on fixed incomes are being forced to choose whether to put food on their table, obtain needed medical prescriptions or heat their homes."

The resolution is a result of proposed federal budget cuts of $250 million annually, so the energy program would be completely phased out by 2002. The plan affects 5.6 million households in the United States, mostly concentrated in the Northeast and Midwest.

Members of the U.S. Senate are conducting a similar effort by sending a bipartisan letter to Clinton asking him to reconsider the substantial cuts.

HOW TO KEEP THINGS MOVING

Constipation may be a problem of a single part of the body, but it can make a person feel totally miserable. Regular exercise, eating plenty of fiber-full fruits and vegetables, and drinking lots of water can help keep the bowels moving comfortably. However, it may be equally important to know that certain things tend to make constipation worse. These include high-fat foods, especially cheese, and a number of medications, including antacids that contain aluminum hydroxide, certain pain medications (codeine, Demerol), some antidepressants (Elavil, Trilafon), some blood pressure drugs (Calan, Verelan, Isoptin), and iron and calcium supplements. Ironically, taking too much of some anti-constipation medications can actually make the problem worse, as their strong chemicals can damage nerve cells in the colon wall.

P.S. Constipation can also be a problem during pregnancy and before menstrual periods, partly due to the influence of hormones.

If this problem persists, see your physician for what might work for you. For more information, visit COMPREHENSIVE MEDICAL CARE, at 700 Congress St., in Quincy or call me or Dr. Lisa Antonelli at 472-2550. Office hours by appointment. I am affiliated with Quincy Hospital and South Shore Hospitals.

South Shore Chamber Earns Reaccreditation

The South Shore Chamber of Commerce in Quincy was recently reaccredited by the U.S. Chamber of Commerce.

The Chamber was first accredited in 1973, and has completed five successful consecutive reaccreditations since then. Less than one percent of the chambers of commerce in the country have reached that level.

The accreditation program was instituted by the U.S. Chamber to:

•define standards of planning and performance in chamber of commerce work, and to show how those standards can be reached and maintained;

•measure achievement;

•give recognition and encouragement to organizations and staff members who meet basic standards of operation and performance, and who are contributing in a meaningful and effective way to the good of the community and the country; and •upgrade and improve voluntary organization of business and professional persons.

The voluntary program provides a way for local chambers of commerce to make a self-study and analysis. More than 50 volunteers worked on six different committees to examine all aspects of Chamber operations, including communication, finance, organization, plant and equipment, program of action, and staff.

The reaccreditation process took six months to complete, and culminated with a site visit by a representative of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce. The merits of an organization applying for accreditation are first considered by the Accrediting Board and final approval comes from the full U.S. Chamber Board.

"The South Shore Chamber of Commerce has many reasons to be proud of its accomplishments. Accreditation is an important achievement and signifies quality leadership in community improvement." said Richard L. Lesher, president of the U.S. Chamber of commerce. "This organization continues to meet its tests."

The South Shore Chamber of Commerce, a 2,500-strong membership organization, is dedicated to serving the interests of the local business community through government relations, community outreach and economic development assistance.

To Receive Update In January

Council Seeks More Information On E911

The City Council is seeking more information on the planned Enhanced 911 emergency telephone service scheduled to begin in the city in March.

Councillors agreed to have Data Processing Director Robert Brennan give them another update on the matter in January following lengthy discussion Monday night.

The system is designed to increase the opportunity to help someone in distress, according to Brennan.

Among the issues discussed by Brennan and councillors Monday night were the $900,000 pricetag that comes with the system--for renovations and equipment at the Quincy Police Department, where the E911 system will be based--as well as the proposed hiring of a civilian director who would be paid $50,000 annually to oversee the service.

There was also resentment expressed by union officials when Brennan suggested that the police and fire unions did not fully participate in the planning of the system, which has been in the works for three years. Both Richard Churchill, president of the police union and Jim McCarthy, president of the firefighters' union said their unions have nothing to do with the fact that Quincy will be one of the last dozen communities to install the E911 system.

In addition, they questioned the need for a civilian director for services traditionally run by police and fire officials.

Brennan said Quincy's E911 plan, drawn up by Mayor James Sheets, Police Chief Francis Mullen and Fire Chief Thomas Gorman, calls for the system to have civilian call takers supervised by a police sergeant and fire lieutenant who would make all decisions on dispatch calls.

Brennan also noted that the civilian director would be an administrator who would have no control over calls. The E911 system would be supervised by the mayor and two chiefs.

Police officers and firefighters take the calls under the current 911 system. Brennan said, however, that while communities across the country use varying combinations of police, fire and civilian dispatchers, the trend is moving toward all civilian dispatchers, and a consultant who helps set up E911 systems recommended hiring a civilian director.

Other union concerns have been voiced about contract negotiations related to the E911 system. Michael McFarland, executive secretary to the mayor, said no positions will be cut as a result of civilian dispatchers being hired.

Brennan said the $900,000 needed for the system will include $250,000 for alarm equipment, $200,000 to $225,000 for equipment furniture, and $200,000 to $250,000 for other renovations to the police station. He noted that while $200,000 in equipment will be provided and maintained by the state, the city must pay for the installation.

The state has mandated that all Massachusetts communities have the E911 system installed by March 12. Brennan termed that date as "tight, but doable."

LOSING THAT OLD SPARK

According to tests, mistimed ignition and improperly gapped or defective spark plugs cause a significant decrease in automobile fuel efficiency. Tests conducted in automotive laboratories indicate that the loss in fuel economy resulting from out-of specification tune-up factors, such as worn spark plugs and incorrect timing adjustments, range from 9% to 12%. It should be noted that these tests were conducted with 6 and 8-cylinder engines. Fuel efficiency losses due to worn plugs and bad timing, in 4-cylinder engines is even greater (14% to 25%) due to the fact that a bad spark plug in a smaller engine wastes a greater percentage of fuel than one in a larger engine. These differences aside, the clear conclusion is that maximum fuel economy can be attained by keeping the timing set to specification and keeping the spark plugs in top-notch condition.

HINT: Fuel economy declines long before a car begins to show a reduction in performance.

Be Sure It Is Energy Efficient

Good Fireplace Adds Value To Your House

A fireplace may take the chill out of those first frosty days of autumn in cold weather climates, but it may not really be effective in reducing your overall energy bill.

"A properly-functioning fireplace flue will not only draw out smoke but also about 20 percent of the heated air in the room each hour," says Mary Dawson, president of the South Shore Association of Realtors. "Moreover, you are most likely only receiving 15 percent of potential heat produced by each burning log because much of the combustible material in the wood is lost as gas without burning or producing heat."

This doesn't mean you should give up your dream of cozy nights by the fire. A few simple modifications can increase the energy efficiency of your fireplace.

A heating grade made of hollow tubing that wraps around logs and extends over their tops can recirculate heat produced by the fireplace into the room. Certain models are equipped with electric blowers that direct hot air into the room instead of up the chimney.

"Fireplace covers also increase heating efficiency," Dawson says. "Steel covers with fire-resistant glass enable you to watch the fire while receiving radiant heat through the glass. But be sure to leave your damper open when the fire is burning or the coals are still glowing."

A cover should be placed over the opening of the fireplace at the end of the evening when the fire is nearly extinguished, but hot enough to require an open damper to release smoke. Make certain the cover is tight-fitting around the edges so that room heat does not escape.

New technology can improve the efficiency of an existing open fireplace. Open fireplaces exhaust large quantities of air up the flue, resulting in drafts that pull heat out of the home. Thus, an open fireplace only has an energy efficiency of about 5 to 6 percent.

Home owners can boost the efficiency of an existing open fireplace by installing a gas-fueled or wood-burning fireplace insert. Inserts fill the existing fireplace opening and connect to the existing flue. These inserts, which use a catalytic combustion system, ensure clean burning and provide a 78 percent efficiency. A fan provides natural convection heating and a thermostat ensures steady, even heat.

"The type of wood burned also can affect fireplace efficiency," Dawson advises. "Harder woods such as birch, oak and maple burn more slowly and give more evenly-distributed heat. Softer woods such as pine burn faster and more unevenly. Beware of green, unseasoned wood which is difficult to burn and produces a great deal of smoke."

The damper should be kept closed whenever the fireplace is not in use, unless you are using natural ventilation to cool your home. Otherwise, you may find that it could pull expensive heated or cooled air from your house, which adds to your energy bill. To be sure the danger closes tightly, hold a hand mirror inside the chimney base to check for light leaks.

As a safety precaution, it's also a good idea to have your chimney swept each year to remove debris and to check for obstructions.

Installing a fireplace also adds to the value of your home. According to statistics compiled by Remodeling Magazine, a fireplace can return as much as 140 percent of the home owner's investment.

The South Shore Association of Realtors is one of more than 1,800 local boards and associations of Realtors nationwide that comprise the National Association of Realtors. As the nation's largest trade association, NAR is "The Voice for Real Estate," representing nearly 750,000 members involved in all aspects of the real estate industry.

Map-Directories Are Now Available

The Christmas banners and the tree lights in Quincy Center look great and can't help but put you in the holiday spirit. The decorations are tastefully done and were installed in a very timely manner. There is something special about Christmas lights, especially when they are glowing from the large trees on the lawn at the Crane Public Library for everyone to observe. A big "thank you" to City Hall and the Quincy DPW for a job well done.

Santa will be greeting children and parents at Quincy Center's newest women's clothing store, Expose' Ltd. Fashions, located at 1479 Hancock St. Santa will be seated in the front window listening to children's Christmas wish lists. In addition, they will have an opportunity to have their picture taken with Santa. You can call the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association at 471-3232 for the dates and times of Santa's visits or look in The Quincy Sun.

Hot off the press and just in time for use by Christmas shoppers, residents and visitors—Quincy Center Business Map/Directories. This directory serves as a guide to over 400 businesses located in the center. It also identifies public buildings and local telephone numbers of the same. These directories are FREE and available at numerous locations throughout Quincy Center. Feel free to call the QCBPA at 471-3232 to find a location nearest to you. Make an effort to pick up a directory; you will be impressed with the large number of goods and services currently available to you in Quincy Center.

The Quincy Center Business Map/Directory was produced and jointly funded by the Quincy 2000 Corporation and the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association. Here, we have yet another fine example of the local business community working together to create a user-friendly environment for residents and visitors to Quincy Center.

The success of the Quincy 2000 Corporation's Commercial Building Renovation Program to anyone visiting Quincy Center. Several major building renovation projects are close to completion including the Adams Arcade Building on Hancock St. and the Agnitti property located on the corner of Hancock and Maple Sts. The facade and new signs frieze going up on the Arcade Building is looking super. Add to this new signage, lighting and awnings, and you will have a new building facade that is going to knock your socks off!

Look to see an upscale coffee/expresso shop in addition to a full service restaurant opening up at the Agnitti location early next year. The renovations are moving along on schedule and very soon, the outside plywood panels will be removed, displaying a new and very attractive exterior facade.

It is very pleasing to see property and business owners once again investing in Quincy Center as renewed confidence and opportunity continues to grow. The enthusiastic endorsement of the Quincy Center Action Plan by the City Council last month was a momentous step forward in assuring continued significant public/private reinvestment and development within the center. The Quincy Center Action Plan, which took over a year to prepare, was presented to the council by the Quincy 2000 Corporation's executive director, Joseph Mannarino and consultant Mo Freedman of Sasaki Associates. These positive actions are the direct results of the strong public/private partnership that currently exists with the city and the Quincy 2000 Corporation.

I want to take this opportunity to wish everyone a healthy and happy Christmas holiday and remind everyone to support our local businesses by shopping in Quincy Center this holiday season. Until next time—be sure to check out what's "happening" in downtown Quincy Center, and feel free to write me with your comments and suggestions. (Mailing address: The Quincy 2000 Corp., 1250 Hancock St., Suite 802N, Quincy, MA 02169.)

Bank Of Braintree Attends Hancock Park Grand Opening

Bank of Braintree recently attended a ribbon-cutting ceremony to celebrate the grand opening of Hancock Park in Quincy, a Welch Health Care and Retirement Group property.

On hand to celebrate the opening were key Bank of Braintree officials, the Welch family, city officials and other participants associated with the project.

Hancock Park, owned and managed by Welch Health Care and Retirement Group, is a $9.5 million assisted living rehabilitation and nursing center. It has one bedroom apartments for elders who need some daily assistance, as well as rehabilitation and nursing center for the terminally ill, Alzheimer's patients, and long-term care patients.

"Having seen a marked increase in its commercial lending portfolio, as well as a broadened and strengthened reputation as the premier commercial lending institution on the South Shore, especially in the Quincy area, Bank of Braintree was delighted to assist in the financing and participate in the development of Hancock Park, which will employ about 175 full-time health care workers," said Bank of Braintree President and CEO Don Olson.

The ground floor of Hancock Park includes a cafe, convenience store, beauty parlor, Allerton House Dining Room, Allerton House Library and Parlor, as well as an adult health center. The second floor consists of model apartments, the third floor is the skilled nursing unit, the fourth floor is the Alzheimer Unit and the fifth floor is the subacute/transitional care unit.

Commenting on the Bank's commitment to the Quincy community, Olson said, "Bank of Braintree is truly committed to strengthening and building Quincy's business environment. Deadline Tuesday, Dec. 31

Nominations Coming In For Sun 'Citizen Of Year'

Nominations are coming in for The Quincy Sun's 12th annual "Citizen of the Year" award.

Established in 1985, the award recognizes an individual for outstanding community service or a special achievement.

Last year, Joseph McConville was honored for "freely giving a good part of his life to Quincy youth and to his city. His community service includes being a volunteer ice skating instructor and coach for Quincy Youth Hockey Association for 25 years. He has also served the city and his community in many unpaid positions, including chairman of the Quincy Planning Board.

He was selected from 35 nominations submitted by Sun readers.

Sun readers may nominate the person they feel is the most deserving.

After nominations close Tuesday, Dec. 31, a judging panel will be selected to make the final choice from the nominations submitted.

Nomination Ballot On Page 27

If you know of someone you would like to see recognized with this award, fill out the ballot and mail it to:

The Quincy Sun
Attn: Citizen of the Year
1372 Hancock St.
Quincy, MA 02169

Nominations should be postmarked no later than Dec. 31.

Ballots can also be dropped off at The Sun office at the above address by Dec. 31.

Those submitting nominations should identify themselves. They can also attach to the ballot a letter detailing the reason for the nomination.

Nominees can be someone in elective office, a member of an appointed board, a clergy member, a teacher or school administrator, a police officer or firefighter, someone in the business community, a sports figure or an "unsung" neighbor or friend who has given freely of his or her time to a worthy project or cause.

Past recipients of the award, and the year of their selection, are:

Tony Siciliano, deputy director of Quincy Emergency Management (formerly Civil Defense, 1985.

Ruth Wainwright of Houghs Neck, a long-time community volunteer, 1986.

The late Richard J. Koch Sr., for his work with charitable and community causes over four decades, posthumously in 1987.

Martin Finnegan, retired Quincy high school athletic director, for coordinating the drug and alcohol program Project Impact, 1988.

Clara Yeomans, a longtime environmentalist and charter member of the Quincy Conservation Commission, 1989.

Gerald Gherardi, for his contributions to charities and service organizations over a half century, 1990.

Frank Kearns, for his innumerable volunteer contributions as a community activist and advocate for the city's elderly, homeless, needy and poor, 1991.

Stephen Cantelli, an innovative Quincy public school teacher and advocate of community education, 1992.

Mary Vallier, a founder of Domestic Violence Ended and a longtime aide to battered women and abused children, 1993.

Fr. William McCarthy, retired pastor of St. John's Church and Quincy's beloved "Father Bill," for helping the poor, hungry, homeless and all others in need for many years, 1994.

Those nominated the past 11 years are eligible to be nominated again this year. Since this is not a popularity contest, a person receiving the most nominations will not necessarily be the final winner.

Anyone nominated just once has an equal chance of being the award recipient.

Again, the deadline for nominations is Tuesday, Dec. 31.

The name of the winner will be announced in The Quincy Sun in January.

Historical Society To Receive Seven Flags

The city is now the proud recipient of seven special flags that will be donated to the Quincy Historical Society.

Members of the Yankee Division Veterans Association Boston-Springfield Chapter showed the flags to the City Council Monday night.

Al Megna of Quincy, an association member, told councillors that the flags--one 48-star American flag and one apiece representing each New England state--were taken from a church in Belleauwood, France.

Megna explained that the Belleau Church was destroyed in 1918 during World War I and rebuilt by the Yankee Division Veterans Association over the period from 1925 to 1933. When the work was completed, the seven flags were flown from the church.

Association members recently returned to the church to present officials there with a $20,000 donation for restoration costs as well as seven new flags to replace the originals. It was then decided the group would bring the originals back to Quincy for display at the Historical Society.

Megna said the flags will be donated to the society in memory of Joseph Harold, an association member and father of City Councillor Paul Harold.

AMERICAN FLAG with 48 stars was displayed to city councillors Monday night by members of the Yankee Division Veterans Association. The flag is one of seven the association is donating to the Quincy Historical Society in the name of the late Joseph Harold, an association member and father of Councillor Paul Harold. Holding the flag are association member Al Megna of Quincy and Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi. Also in photo from left are Council President Peter Kolson, George Bourgeouis, John Meleski, Edward Loonie (behind Megna), John Shamaly Jr., Ward 5 Councillor Stephen Durkin (behind Shamaly), Carl Brintall, Councillor Paul Harold, Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers, Robert Ranez, national commander of the association; Councillor Michael Cheney, Councillor Timothy Cahill (behind Raymondi), Ward 3 Councillor Patrick McDermott and Ward 4 Councillor Michael D'Amico.

Girls Basketball

Post-Connolly Era Begins At Quincy

By LIAM FITZGERALD

Despite the loss of Kerri Connolly, the school's all-time leading scorer, Quincy High School girls basketball coach Bob Noble believes this year's squad can improve on last year's three-win campaign.

"You don't replace someone like Kerri," said Noble, in his second season as varsity coach. "She was one of a kind. Without her, though, I think we'll be a little more balanced offensively, counting on everyone to chip in some points.

"I think we're taking the steps necessary to turn the program around. It will be a slow, steady progress, but we should get better every week. We won't be a contender, but we should be better than we were a year ago. Hopefully, we'll win six or seven games."

Tuesday night, the Presidents opened their season at Old Colony League foe Falmouth. Quincy's home opener will be against another OCL opponent, Silver Lake, Friday night at 7.

"It's a tough league with a lot of very good teams, and face two of the better teams right off the bat in Falmouth and Silver Lake," said Noble. "Both of those team are contenders, so playing them should give us an idea of where we are early in the season."

Leading Quincy's balanced attack will be its six returning players--senior tri-captains Angela Hogrell (forward), Kerry Sullivan (center) and Kim Mackey (guard), and senior forward Julie McLoughlin, junior point guard Kerry Duffy and sophomore guard Kerry DiBona.

Noble said he will rely on Hogrell, a four-year varsity player and three-year starter, to "provide leadership and an overall solid game as the team's most experienced player."

Starting at the other forward spot will be McLoughlin, a three-year varsity player who played frequently last season.

Sullivan, the starting center, is a two-year varsity player who according to Noble "has a lot of good low post skills; we expect her to do a lot of rebounding for us."

Running the offense at the point guard position will be Duffy, a two-year varsity player who Noble expects "to quarterback the team and handle the ball."

DiBona, in her first year on the varsity, will handle the off-guard duties as the Presidents' top outside shooter, according to Noble.

"She has looked very good in scrimmages," said the coach. "We look for her to be our outside scoring threat."

Backing up the starters will be tri-captain Mackey, senior forward/center Teuta Hajrizaj, junior guards Becky Mackey and Tara McSweeney and junior forward Pamela Gray.

Summarizing the Presidents' strengths, Noble said the team's experience and size (three players--Sullivan, Hajrizaj and McLaughlin--are six feet tall or better) should keep them in their share of games.

"We should be able to rebound with most people," said Noble. "Also, having our top six players on the varsity with at least two years of varsity experience hopefully will be an asset to us.

"I'm looking forward to the season. We have a great group of kids that make it a pleasure to coach. Slowly but surely, we're turning the corner, and the future looks very good. There's definitely something there."

Girls' Track

North Quincy Girls Aim For OCL Title

Following a 6-1 record and a second-place finish in the Old Colony League Championship meet, the North Quincy girls winter track squad will compete for the OCL title this winter.

NQ coach Geoff Hennessy, in his ninth year at the helm, welcomed 72 candidates, the largest in school history. Hennessy hopes a combination of talented veterans and newcomers will result in a successful campaign.

"Although we lost some big guns from last year, our overall depth is better, and our distance talent is much better," said Hennessy. "Hurdles is a concern, but Kelly Lockhead made major improvements during spring track and should be ready.

"Our main focus early on will be to get everyone into the right event and keep everyone happy and healthy. It's a fun, up-beat group."

NQ opened its season Tuesday with a meet at Taunton and has meets Saturday at Brandeis and The Reggie Lewis Center.

Leading the charge is captain sprinter Casey Ngo, an Old Colony League All-Star who will run the dash and lead off the 4x200 relay. Junior Sarah Beston and freshmen Ha Le and Cindy Wong also show promise.

Sophomore Kelly Lockhead will try to fill the shoes of Phyllis Poon and Suk Ng, who both graduated in the spring after strong four-year campaigns in hurdles. Freshmen Sarah Price and Tia Harris are other prospects.

Sophomore phenom Kellie Johnston will move up from the dash to the 300. Juniors Jasmine Gonzalez (OCL All-Star) and Sharon Lee give a solid 1-2 punch in the 600, and sophomore Dorothy Cronin will hook up with talented freshmen Heather Meighan, Genevieve O'Brien and Rebecca Favorito in the 1000.

The distance corps is headed by captains Lauren Molloy and Carrie Jarvie. Joining them are freshmen Lynda Wilson and Sarah Houghton, as well as sophomore Shirley Wu.

Beston will be joined by sophomore triple jump standout Angela Scott in the high jump, and NQ hopes to continue its dominance of the shotput with Kristy Deptula (OCL All-Star), Claire Quilty, captain Wingze Yuen (OCL All-Star) and Nicole Bertone.

Although no relay teams are set in stone, several newcomers could earn spots, including Liz Leuchte, Jennifer Liang, Corinne Sullivan, Diana Kuan and Nancy Lee.

Defense The Name Of North Quincy's Game

Coming off a solid season which resulted in a tournament appearance, North Quincy girls basketball coach Ken Panaro is expecting nothing less from this year's defensive-minded squad.

"We were 12-8 last season and made the tournament, and I think we can do that again this year," said Panaro. "We should scare some people with our style of defensive play. We're quick and small, but we'll be competitive. We shouldn't be blown out too often, if at all.

"We don't have any height, so we'll have to use our speed to stay afloat. We'll run and gun, rush and trap on defense and use the fast break. We'll move things in a faster manner, and do a lot of things off the run."

The Red Raiders kicked off their season Tuesday night at Silver Lake, and stay on the road when they visit Weymouth Friday night at 7. NQ's first home game will be against Plymouth South Monday, Dec. 23 at 7 p.m.

Losing three starters, including the all-time leading scorer in Quincy public school history in Sarah Stanton, the Red Raiders will rely on senior tri-captains Jill Picardi (power forward), Dawn Kohler (center) and Kerry Ginty (point guard). That trio will start along with junior forward Laurie Flynn and junior off-guard Kristen Keohane.

"We have five or six varsity players back, with a lot of sophomores coming up to the varsity," said Panaro. "It's a nice mesh, with two juniors starting. Laurie and Kristen both played a lot for the varsity last year, so the starting lineup looks solid."

Providing much-needed breathers for the starters will be junior forward Kelly Fernandez, junior off-guard Kerry Skeehan, junior center Liz Cuervels, sophomore point guard Kristen Bowes, sophomore forwards Ali Haddad and Lauren Luizzo and sophomore guard Kim Huerth.

"With our running defense, the starters will run out of gas and need a break," said Panaro. "These kids have to step up and play at the varsity level.

"Unfortunately, we'll only have Kelly until the end of December, because she's going away for six months on a foreign exchange program. She's a good rebounder; we'll miss her."

Panaro also hopes the team's best three-point shooters--Keohane, Ginty and Skeehan--bomb away when they get the chance.

"If they're open, they have to shoot," he said. "We're not going to have much success inside, so we have to do well from the outside."

Regarding the Old Colony League, Panaro notes the contenders should include Falmouth, Bridgewater-Raynham, Silver Lake and Barnstable.

"The OCL is a very strong league," he said. "Falmouth still has two mountains there and B-R lost one starter after almost going all the way. Silver Lake is tough again and Barnstable has the advantage of being so far away that you don't feel like bouncing a ball when you get down there."

Joe Vallatini's Hat Trick Sparks Quincy To 8-1 Win

In its season opener Tuesday night, the Quincy High School hockey team romped to an 8-1 non-league victory over Rockland at Quincy Youth Arena.

Sparked by sophomore left wing Joe Vallatini's hat trick and two assists, the Presidents jumped out to a 4-0 lead and never looked back.

"That was a great way to open the season," said Quincy coach Bob Sylvia. "I don't remember the last time we started a season with that big a victory. We were all over them from the start. Joe had a great game offensively for us."

Other offensive standouts for Quincy were junior Chris Haidul, who scored two goals and added an assist, senior Scott Cooper, who tallied twice and senior Mark Glynn, who chipped in with a goal and an assist.

Sylvia was impressed with the play of goaltender Chris Burns, who stopped all but one Rockland shot in picking up the win.

"Chris did a good job in net for us," said the coach. "It was a good way to get started, get some confidence heading into the rest of the season."

Quincy was scheduled to host Taunton yesterday (Wednesday) at 6:40 p.m., and Weymouth Saturday at 7:50 p.m.

In describing this year's Presidents squad, Sylvia said "we're a mix of experience and inexperience. We're just taking one step at a time and hope we continue to improve as the season goes on. One of our goals is to make the state tournament, and I think we can do it.

"We're hungry, and hopefully this was a sign of how the season will go. We have some firepower on offense, the defense is strong and the goaltender (Burns) is good. This team has the potential to be one of the best I've had here in a long time."

Conley Brothers Spark Squirt A's To 7-1 Win Over Tri-County

The Quincy Squirt A's came out shooting against Tri-County and recorded a 7-1 victory.

The first period ended in a 1-1 tie with Quincy's Matt Lavery sending home a pass from Matt Germain and Matt Grazioso.

Coach Bill Richardson's need to re-assign the lines to accommodate missing players resulted in a scoring onslaught from wings Ryan and Brendon Conley and center Josh Giordani.

In the second period, Ryan Conley scored twice and assisted Brendon Conley on his goal. Giordani's break neck speed and crisp passing netted him two assists, while Brendon returned his brother's favor with an assist of his own. Defenseman Pat Maxey garnered his second assist in the four-goal second period as Germain finished an end-to-end passing attack off a pass from Lavery at the goal mouth.

Third period action saw defensemen Kyle Carmody, Ryan Feldhoff and Kevin Richardson step up their play and control the Quincy end. Goalie Nick Manning came up with some great saves to limit Tri-County to only one goal. Brendon Craig netted a one-timer off pass from Steve McGrath with Billy Barter also assisting on the play. The "Matt" line capped the Quincy scoring as Grazioso scored off passes from linemates Germain and Lavery.

Coach Richardson was pleased with the hustle and grit shown by all the players as they prepare for their first state playdown game this week against a tough Franklin squad.

Barter's Bullies Blank Dedham, Fall To Tough Belmont Squad

Quincy Youth Hockey's Squirt team, Barter's Bullies, face a new challenge. The Bullies, coached by Billy Barter, have been moved up in their division to the B Open bracket, which is quite an accomplishment for the coaching staff and team.

The Bullies took on the Dedham Squirts and came away with a 2-0 victory on two second-period goals by Justin Thorley.

Thorley got things cooking offensively, putting the puck in the net from the left wing on a pass from right winger Brendan Linnane. Minutes later, Thorley whizzed his second goal by the Dedham goalie on a backhanded pass from center Alex (Shaf) Shaffer.

Paul Graham, with Joe McManus and Danny Donovan, penetrated the zone on several occasions with outstanding passing. Dedham's goalie would not back down, however, and turned away many a blistering shot by the Bullies.

Known for defending their turf, the Bullies' defensive unit did just that. Keith Flaherty took out forward after forward as they dared to enter his area. Chris (The Bulldozer) Sheehan set his blades down on the blue line and carried the puck up ice. Brendan Clifford was the man out in front of the goal, not allowing a single Dedham player to get behind him.

Goalie Ryan (The Beezer) Barter again was tremendous with his stand-up play. The Beezer was clutch and grab on his perpertrators attempting to access the Quincy net.

The Bulles later brought their sponsor Sugarman's logo to the MDC rink in Charlestown for a matchup with Belmont. Barter the goalie was the player of the game, making numerous saves off the Belmont rocket launchers.

Forwards Mike Tetreault, Paul McLean and Mike Faherty did some handiwork on the Belmont goalie with some knockdown shots on net.

Jonathan O'Connor played his rough and tough style, lifting the puck off the opposition's stick and carrying it up ice to a Bullies forward in position to attack. Tony (Benji) Benigni worked the boards like a carpenter, ripping the puck past the hard-hitting Belmont forwards.

The Bullies welcomed back Tim Mullen from the disabled list. Mullen looked as good as ever, not missing a play when the Belmont forwards charged up ice.

In the end, the Bullies could not hold on and lost to Belmont. The loss did not hurt the spirit of the team; rather, it bolstered the players' desire to play meaner and smarter the next time out.

Squirt B's Down Hyde Park, Needham and South Boston

The Quincy Squirt B's had a triumphant weekend, posting victories over Hyde Park, Needham and South Boston.

In their 5-3 win over Hyde Park, the B's were paced by their big left wing Richie (Stonewall) Stone, who lit the lamp twice. Stone was assisted by his "Shamrock" linemates. Danny Sullivan and Jake O'Donnell.

Quincy's third line proved to be the story as George (Snowman) Snowling and Billy (The Kid) Cox netted goals in their first start of the season. Linemate Paul (Powerhouse) Lennon assisted on both goals. The fifth Quincy goal was tallied by Matt (Flash) Haskins, set up by Pat Casper and Andy McDonough.

Once again, Pat (Toaster) Maloney was tough to beat between the pipes, withstanding all the heat Hyde Park could generate. The Quincy defense was led by assistant captains Joey Norris and Danny Durocher. Myles Clancy, Paul Grazioso, Dennis Rugg and Gene Nazzarro put the hammer down when Hyde Park entered the zone.

In an 8-2 triumph over Needham, Quincy fell behind before scoring five unanswered goals to seal the Greater Boston League conquest.

Dan (The Man) Durocher got the B's started with a picture perfect goal, set up by Matt (Flash) Haskins. Quincy got two goals apiece from captain Pat Casper, Jake (Terminator) O'Donnell and Richie (Stonewall) Stone.

As usual, Andrew (General) Patten contributed to the onslaught with a goal and two assists. Quincy's swarming defense neutralized Needham's potent offense and Pat (Toaster) Maloney was solid in goal.

In another GBL matchup, Quincy edged their rivals from South Boston by a 3-2 score.

Andy (Sniper) McDonough rifled hime Quincy's first goal and captain Pat Casper's two big goals proved to be the difference in the game.

The "Army Line" provided the artillery but it took the whole team to win the war. Forwards Andrew Patten, Matt Haskins, Paul Lennon, Jake O'Donnell, Richie Stone, George Snowling and Billy Cox deserve commendation for their outstanding effort.

The defense faced their biggest challenge of the year in Southie's well-tuned attack. Dan Durocher, (Joltin') Joe Norris, Paul (Graz) Grazioso, Myles (The Curse) Clancy, Gene (Geno) Nazarro and (Dangerous) Dennis Rugg played tough defense. Time and time again, Pat (Toaster) Maloney turned away Southie's best shots.

Girls Pee Wee II Fall To Reading

Sandra Sullivan, Colleen Clifford and Danielle Gatto netted goals for the Quincy Girls Pee Wee II team in a 7-3 loss to a strong Reading squad.

Once again, goalie Erin McNamara played well, stopping numerous Reading shots throughout the game.

Pee Wee A's Edge Needham, 4-3

Brian O'Hanley scored the game-winning goal off a pass by Joe Fitzpatrick to lift the Quincy Pee Wee A team to a 4-3 triumph over host Needham.

Charlie Sorrento notched a hat trick for Quincy, which got a solid offensive effort by Jim Cashins and Ryan Donahue. Goaltender Shawn Faherty and defensemen Jill McInnis, Danny Sheehan and Kevin Patten also turned in strong performances for Quincy.

Mite A's Down Brookline, 3-1

Quincy Girls Earn Silver Medal In Basketball At Bay State Games

Four Quincy girls from the Sacred Heart basketball program recently earned a silver medal in the Bay State Games 3-on-3 Shootout Contest (11-12 age group) held at the Reggie Lewis Center in Boston.

The silver medal winners were Erin Croke, a sixth grade student at Sacred Heart School; Nora Hanna, a seventh grade student at Sacred Heart; Kathryn MacRitchie, a seventh grade student at Central Middle School; and Lauren Sleeth, a seventh grade student at Atlantic Middle School. The girls are coached by Bob Croke and Bob Hanna.

Following the preliminary rounds, the Quincy girls were seeded first entering the semifinals. After defeating Belmont in a hard-fought game, the girls entered the gold medal game against the Eastern Middlesex AAU Team. Although the girls fell short by two points in the final contest, the excitement was as intense as it could be in the Field House.

As well as participating in the Sacred Heart basketball league, the girls are also on the Sacred Heart Travel Team that participates in the CYO Cadet Division League.

In the past, the girls have participated in the Tarrytown, N.Y., tournament and last year were in the quarterfinals of the New England CYO Division Championships in Nashua, N.H.

3 Quincy Girls All-American Cheerleaders

Three Quincy Point residents, Lisa Robertson, Bonnie Ford and Sarah McQuinn, were recently named to the National Cheerleaders Association's All-American Team.

Robertson, a senior at Quincy High School, Ford, a junior at Archbishop Williams High School in Braintree, and McQuinn, a sophomore at Archbishop Williams, were selected on the basis of their cheerleading technique, leadership and all-around ability. Your Social Security

Did You Know?

By CAROL BOYLE

Surviving Divorced Spouses May Qualify For Benefits

If you are survived by a divorced spouse, she/he may qualify for survivors benefits on the same conditions as if you were still married if the marriage lasted 10 years. The surviving divorced widow's benefits will not affect a current widow s benefits.

Special Rules Permit Work While Getting Disability Benefits

If you are disabled, you can collect Social Security disability benefits and still work as long as the work is not "substantial." Generally, earnings of $500 a month is considered substantial work. However, there are several rules, called "d sability work incentives," which permit you to earn more and continue to receive cash benefits and Medicare or Medicaid coverage until you can do substantial work.

Social Security Counts

Social Security is the sole retirement pension for six out of ten workers in private industry and the base on which private pensions are built for the other four out of ten.

Include Social Security In Your Financial Planning

When you're planning your financial future, be sure to include the Social Security benefits that you and your family may be eligible to receive now and in the future. You can get a personal earnings and benefit estimate statement from Social Security that will give you an estimate of what you will get if you retire or become disabled, and what your family will get if you die. Call 1-800-772-1213.

Ten Years Is The Most You Need For Benefits

A person needs a certain amount of work under Social Security to qualify for benefits. The most work you need is 10 years to be fully insured for retirement, disability, and survivors benefits and Medicare hospital insurance. For disability benefits, five of those years must have taken place during the ten years before you became disabled.

Trustees See 33 Years Of Benefits

The latest report of the Social Security Board of Trustees notes that Social Security will have the resources to continue paying benefits without any changes until the year 2029

You Don't Need To Retire For Medicare

You don't have to retire to get Medicare. When you approach 65, you should contact your Social Security office and apply in time for coverage to begin on your 65th birthday.

More Than Retirement

Social Security is more than retirement. Approximately 10 million adults are currently receiving survivors or disability benefits, and three million children are getting Social Security benefits because a family breadwinner has died or become disabled.

You Can Collect Benefits While Disabled

If you are disabled, you can collect Social Security disability benefits and still work as long as the work is not "substantial." Generally, earnings of $500 a month is considered substantial work. However, there are several rules, called "disability work incentives," which permit you to earn more and continue to receive cash benefits and Medicare or Medicaid coverage until you can do substantial work.

Dona Rodrigues Honored For Midwifery Services

Dona M. Rodrigues, CNM, MPH, of Quincy, a nurse midwife at Boston Medical Center, was honored recently by Boston Mayor Thomas Menino for her dedicated service to Boston's Cape Verdean community.

Rodrigues, who also performs midwife duties at the Dorchester House Multi-Service Center and Upham's Corner Health Center, has been providing midwifery services to the city's indigent population since 1994.

She performed a two-year research fellowship on women of child-bearing age in the Cape Verdean community in the Dorchester/Roxbury area in 1984. As part of the project, she assessed the communities' health care needs, consumer satisfaction of the area's health care system and discovered common beliefs of childbirth and pregnancy held by those in the community.

Rodrigues is a certified AIDS and SIDS counselor. She is also certified as a perinatal high risk clinical nurse and a volunteer community foster care reviewer. In addition, she is a past recipient of the Boston Department of Health & Hospitals Award for her contributions to pregnant women in the city.

Rodrigues received her bachelor of science degree from the University of Massachusetts School of Nursing and a combined master's of public health/midwifery degree from Boston University School of Public Health.

Crime Prevention Tips For The Season

• Never carry large amounts of money or credit cards on your person. Carry only what you will actually need.

• When shopping, never put your purse or your bundles down on a counter or floor. A thief may quickly take them without you seeing it happen.

• Always be aware of who and what is around you, so that you won't be surprised by a criminal.

• Don't war expensive jewelry out in public. Keep it in your pocket until you reach your destination, then put it on.

• Never leave items in your car so that they can be seen by a thief. Put your packages in the trunk of your car, out of sight-out of mind.

• If you have a truck or station wagon, put your packages on the floor and cover them with a blanket.

• Be wary of people soliciting money for charities. Most charities are legitimate, some may not be. A good rule of thumb is to donate only to organizations that your are familiar with.

On behalf of Chief Francis Mullen and the entire Quincy Police Department, I wish you a happy, safe and sober holiday season.

SCOTT DEWARE

A Thought For The Week

Conscience is usually described as an inner voice that tells us what is right and what is wrong.

It is claimed there are many people these days who are seemingly not bothered by conscience. We doubt that. Whatever belittling of conscience seems to be on the surface, we believe most people know the difference between right and wrong. Most people realize spiritual factors do count. No matter what effort of self-deception is made, sooner or later the inner conflict of conscience must be faced.

Daytime difficulties and sleepless nights can be minimized and perhaps totally eliminated when that fact is realized, accepted and acted upon. An acute conscience is not harmful, it is helpful - providing corrections are made in structuring a life to do those things known to be right and refusing to do those things known to be wrong. A good conscience does not just happen. It has to be earned. Once earned, a clear conscience need never fear midnight knocking.

Distributing Food, Presents To Needy

They're Helping To Put Merry In Christmas

By MICHAEL WHALEN

A number of service organizations and social clubs throughout the city are exemplifying the Christmas spirit by providing food and/or presents for the needy.

Among the groups doing their part to help the less fortunate this holiday season are Father Bill's Place, the Koch Club, the Salvation Army, the Quincy Crisis Center and the Quincy Lodge of Elks.

Joseph Finn, executive director of the Quincy Interfaith Sheltering Coalition which operates Quincy's homeless shelter, Father Bill's Place said the QISC is prepared to serve between 200 and 300 meals at its annual Community Dinner on Christmas Day from noon to 2 p.m. at Christ Church, 12 Quincy Ave.

Finn said when additional dinners that will be delivered to shut-ins are factored in, the number will easily top 300. He also stressed that while many who receive meals through the event are needy, the dinner is open to all.

"It's a community meal, not a dinner for the homeless," he said. "People all of ages come from far and wide, and it's also a way to thank our volunteers. All are welcome."

Shut-ins who would like to receive a meal should call Father Bill's Place at 770-3314.

Koch Club President Thomas Koch said his organization is also doing its part this holiday season.

"We're doing a combination of food baskets and toys, games and other presents for children," he said.

Koch said about 50 food baskets will be delivered to Quincy needy families along with gifts for the younger family members. He noted that the club has been delivering holiday meals and presents for about 40 years ever since his father, the late Quincy Park Department Executive Director Richard Koch, began the program.

Capt. Scott Kelly, commander of The Salvation Army's Quincy Temple Corps, said he expected his group to deliver food baskets to more than 200 Quincy families by yesterday (Monday). The nearly 600 children in those families also would receive gifts, he said.

"We hope to make the holidays a little brighter for those people," he said.

Merritt Nielson, executive coordinator of the Esther R. Sanger Center for compassion--which operates the Quincy Crisis Center as well as the Mary-Martha Learning Center in Hingham--said at press time the QCC planned to deliver food baskets to more than 150 food baskets throughout the city before Christmas.

Nielson added that every member of each of those 150 families would receive at least one age-appropriate gift.

"It's our goal that the neediest among us are able to celebrate the joys of Christmas," he said. "We will persist in pursuing Esther Sanger's vision for as long as we are able."

Sanger, founder of the Quincy Crisis Center and the Mary-Martha Learning Center, died last year.

Daniel Keating, chairman of the Elks' holiday effort said he anticipated that his organization would distribute roughly the same number of baskets as the Crisis Center.

"We distributed over 150 baskets last year and I expect a similar amount this year," he said.

Everyone interviewed for this story said his organization's ability to help the needy during the holidays would be impossible without the generosity of volunteers who prepare and deliver meals as well as individuals, church and school groups, and businesses that make food and monetary donations.

Kelly said around 200 volunteers help The Salvation Army to operate its annual holiday program.

"Sometimes it's a long day, a hard day for all of us," he said. "But the final result is very rewarding, to see the difference we've made in the lives of families."

Koch said the same groups and individuals generally help the Koch Club's efforts every year. He singled out the contributions of the South Shore YMCA, Catholic Women's Club of North Quincy, Beechwood Community Life Center, CNA Insurance and chiropractor Dr. Bruce Indek as well as board members Atty. David Mahoney, Robert Woods and Jack Collagan as being among the most important.

"It's people who have been doing it for a long time," said Koch. "They just come in and do it, with no fanfare. It's kind of nice."

Nielson said the Crisis Center has countless volunteers who help out around the holidays, including about two dozen who do so on a more regular basis. Numerous organizations and individuals also assist with food and monetary donations, including one group that donated about 50 turkeys.

He added that the center sometimes works in conjunction with other local groups such as the Protestant Social Service Bureau, Seaside Advocacy Group and Germantown Neighborhood Club.

"We have no turf interests at all," said Nielson. "All that matters is that

Flood Aid Application Deadline Extended

The deadline for residents in communities such as Quincy in the five flood-damaged Massachusetts counties in President Clinton's October disaster declaration to seek federal and state recovery assistance has been extended, disaster recovery officials announce.

"Applicants now have until Jan. 10, 1997, to seek federal and state aid to help them recover from their losses," Federal Coordinating Officer Alma C. Armstrong said.

State Coordinating Officer Peter LaPorte urges residents to register and begin their personal recovery.

"We want to see every individual and family that suffered damages restored to normal living as quickly as possible," he said.

Renters, homeowners and business owners who live or do business in one of the five counties declared disaster areas may be eligible for disaster aid. The five counties are Essex, Middlesex, Plymouth, Suffolk and Norfolk, which includes Quincy.

Applicants may be eligible for aid under federal and state programs that include disaster housing assistance, low-interest loans and grants to meet serious disaster-related needs not met by insurance or other programs.

Those who have not yet applied for assistance may do so by calling the toll-free registration line, 1-800-462-9029 (TTY: 1-800-462-7585), open weekdays from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Free Legal Clinic

A free Legal Clinic will be held Tuesday, Jan. 7 from 6 to 8 p.m. at Quincy District Court.

Attorneys will be available for a private, one-on-one consultation to discuss any legal issues. No appointment is necessary. Clinics work on a first come, first serve basis.

The event is being sponsored by the Bar Association of Norfolk County. For more information, call Adrienne Clarke at 471-9693.

BEWARE OF BLADDER INFECTIONS

If you've had one before, the twinge that goes with it is probably familiar. Add to that pain a frequent urge to urinate, and chances are you've got another bladder infection. For many people, especially women, bladder infections can become a chronic problem. When they do, a physician may recommend a preventative course of low-dose antibiotic over a period of time. For an isolated infection, a single course of antibiotic lasting 10 to 14 days may be prescribed. Left untreated, a bladder infection could spread to the kidneys or cause other serious problems. Whether plagued by bladder infections or not, everyone can take certain steps to stay healthy, including urinating frequently, wearing cotton underwear, avoiding tight-fitting pants or pantyhose, washing clothes in unscented detergent, and drinking plenty of liquid, especially cranberry juice.

P.S. Always take the full course of a prescribed antibiotic even if symptoms disappear sooner, to ensure that all bacteria growth has stopped.

If you suspect you have a urinary tract infection, don't self-medicate or wait to see if it goes away. It is important to have a clinician evaluate you properly so you can receive the right medication and relief. At COMPREHENSIVE MEDICAL CARE, Dr. Lisa Antonelli and I are here to help. We are at 700 Congress St., Quincy. I am affiliated with Quincy Hospital and South Shore Hospitals. Call 472-2550 for an appointment. DEAR SANTA:

Well, here I am again Santa . . . late again. I know what you're going to say. You're going to say that I keep promising to write sooner and never do. I'm really worry. But, like the Red Sox, maybe next year. I'll try. I hope they do.

Santa, most of these gifts this year--as in the past--are being asked for in a humorous vein and a few in a serious.

So, Santa, I would really appreciate it if you would do your best to deliver as many as of these gifts as you can when you stop in Quincy. And don't forget Santa, that's pronounced Quin-zee and not Quin-cee. We're the one that's the "City of Presidents." I'm sure you remember delivering gifts to little Johnny Adams and Johnny Quincy Adams and Johnny Hancock when they were kids years ago. And you know who they grew up to become. . .

Anyway, Santa, please drop off the following to the following:

Mayor JAMES SHEETS, the first tanker named for him when the Fore River shipyard gets back into shipbuilding action . . . And for his wife, JOANN, the invitation and a bottle of champagne with which to do the christening honors. . . City Councillor MIKE CHENEY, a thermometer with readings in the 50's and a huge crowd for his fifth First Night New Year's Eve. . . City Council President PETER KOLSON and Councillor PAT McDERMOTT, standing ovations as they perform in song at First Night. . . City Clerk JOE SHEA, the "Clairvoyant of the Year Award" for getting rid of the punch-card voting system before the BILL DELAHUNT-PHIL JOHNSTON Congressional election fiasco. . . MARTY FINNEGAN, former Quincy public schools athletics director now retired on a golf course in California, a hole in one. And one for NORMA, too. . . Former Councillor TOM FABRIZIO, a coin to flip to help him decide on whether to try a comeback. . . MURIEL GOUDEY, RUTH ABBIATTI, DON MacDONALD, three of the finest teachers any one could have, the very best for 1997. . . GEORGE BURKE, a trip to the North Pole. He deserves the chance to see your workshop, Santa, because he's been a pretty good Santa himself. . . Former School Committeeman FRANK ANSELMO, who at 98 is younger than some 50-year-olds, another five gallons from the Fountain of Youth. . . Former Councillors GEORGE McDONALD and TED DeCRISTOFARO and Ted's brother, JIM DeCRISTOFARO, robust health for the new year. . . Council on Aging Director BRIAN BUCKLEY, the whereabouts of ELVIS PRESLEY to get him to pose for next year's Christmas card photo. . . MIKE D'AMICO, PAUL HAROLD and PATRICK McDERMOTT, the City Council's three eligible bachelors, a visit from DAN CUPID. . . Fr. WILLIAM McCARTHY and JOE FINN, continued success in their efforts to expand Fr. Bill's Place, the homeless shelter with a big heart. . . Former School Committeeman CHARLIE SWEENY, a Citation of Congratulations for kicking the nicotine habit. So please, Santa, no cigarettes for him this year. And no matches either. BETTY will love you, Santa. . . TIM CAHILL, a good start in January as he takes over as Norfolk County treasurer. And an automatic reminder to lock the safe at night. . . School Supt. GENE CREEDON and Public Works Commissioner DAVE COLTON, just a little dusting of snow this winter. If it has to snow don't let it on school days. . . Police Chief FRANK MULLEN, no major crimes and Fire Chief TOM GORMAN, no two-alarm fires. . . Good friends JAY ASHER, JOHN NICOLSON, ROY LIND, JOE CATALANO, TERRY FRANCHER, DEBBIE LOGAN and the rest of the gang at WJDA, a most deserving job "well done." Santa, it's too bad you can't get WJDA at the North Pole. It's a great radio station. . . Quincy's Beacon Hill delegation, Senator MIKE MORRISSEY, Rep. RON MARIANO, Rep. MIKE BELLOTTI and Rep. STEVE TOBIN, plenty of vote clout to make sure Quincy gets its fair share of benefits from the State House. . . JOE MANNARINO, executive director of Quincy 2000, some hot prospects for the downtown area. . . PETE RICCIUTI, Mayor JIM McINTYRE'S right arm, now wintering in Pompano Beach, Fl., a telegram from golfing buddies DICK CURTIS, PAUL KELLY and GEORGE LAMBERT informing him: "We're on our way. Get your clubs out.". . . MARALIN MANNING, executive director and MARIE WATTS, secretary, framed commendations for all their hard work and all the little extra things they do for the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association. A really Dynamic Duo. . . Former Mayor FRANK McCAULEY, a shot at the soon-to-be-vacant City Council at-large seat. . . but. . . with some competition. Frank, it's better that way. . . Quincy Emergency Management Deputy Director TONY SICILIANO, a large gift-wrapped package of thanks he deserves for all the things he does for so many people. . . Capt. SCOTT KELLY, commanding officer of the Quincy Salvation Army Corps, every kettle chocked full to help the needy. Donations are running far under this year's goal, Santa. Can you send him enough volunteers before Christmas to man the kettle to go over the top? . . . Quincy District Court Clerk Magistrate ARTHUR TOBIN, a thank-you (he would never ask for it himself) for all the nice little things he does quietly for a lot of people. . . Councillor DAN RAYMONDI, the right decision on his future political options. . . TOM GALVIN, another batch of those nostalgic Quincy postcards his Quincy Sun fans love. . . BRUCE MacKILLIGAN, regional president of the Bank of Boston, many happy years of retirement. Bruce, keep the voice in good form and the piano well-tuned. . . Fr. JOSEPH DOWNEY, former pastor of St. Joseph's Church and Rev. JOHN BANKS, former pastor Bethany Church, many fond memories and happy return trips to Quincy. And for, JOHN, a whole year without a hurricane down there in North Carolina. . . TOM GILMARTIN, a crystal ball with a guaranteed 100 percent accuracy. . . JAY, LINDSAY, KELLIE, BRIAN, KIMBERLY, MICHELLE, AMY, JIM and FRED, the very best always.

Santa, I know I've forgotten some people, including good friends. I always do. As I said last year, you get a little forgetful after reaching 39. And I've reached it a few times.

But to all of them and to all of you, a very Merry Christmas and a Healthy, Happy New Year. Especially a HEALTHY one.

MERRY CHRISTMAS
from QUINCY, MASS.

Largest Christmas Tree in United States.
85 feet high contributed by Retail Merchants.

THIS NOSTALGIC POSTCARD from the collection of Tom Galvin was first printed in The Sun at last Christmas. Because a number of requests we are repeating it this year.

The postcard, dating back to about 1930, brought back fond memories for many of our readers.

Christmas Tree Mulching In 9th Year

The Quincy Evergreen Program will once again accept Christmas trees in need of mulching.

Trees may be dropped off at the Recycling Center in the rear of the Quincy Department of Public Works building, 55 Sea St.

The program, which is now in its ninth year, is sponsored by Jay Cashman Inc. of Boston, formerly of 77 Federal Ave., Quincy. Mayor James Sheets' office also assists with the effort.

Program Chairman Leo Kelly said the program collected and mulched about 1,500 trees last year, bringing the total number since it started to nearly 12,000.

"It has been a really successful program, by the numbers," said Kelly. "People really seem to enjoy it. I'd like to thank Jay Cashman for sponsoring the program for nine years, and I also appreciate the mayor's support."

He added that it is important that people participate in the program, which prevents clutter in landfills through the recycling of trees and contributes to the environment by way of the evergreen plants participants receive.

Everyone who brings in a tree will receive a coupon for a live 10-inch evergreen plant which will be available in April. Used gift wrapping paper may also be exchanged for an evergreen coupon.

Trees and wrapping paper may be brought to the DPW building weekdays, Dec. 26 to Jan. 10 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Saturdays, Jan. 4 and 11 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

The program is open to Quincy residents only.

Kelly said interested residents can call 376-1252 for more information.

Christmas Cheer To City Messenger

By PAUL HAROLD

Dec. 26 - Jan. 1
1951
45 Years Ago

Mayor Thomas Burgin led a delegation of the city's fathers and city hall employees to the bedside of City Messenger Harry Tirrell, who was recuperating from a fractured hip at Quincy City Hospital.

Bringing Christmas cheer were City Councillors Amelio Della Chiesa, Alfred Helfrich and Frank Orcutt along with City Manager William Deegan and Auditor Alexander Smith, City Clerk Hattiemay Thomas and Percy Lane.

PRICE OF SCHOOL DESSERTS DROPS 2 CENTS

The School Committee voted to reduce the cost of desserts at QHS and NQHS by two cents, bringing the price down to an even ten cents.

Rudolph Lofgren, assistant superintendent in charge of business, said both school cafeterias were in good financial condition and the price reduction was warranted. Committee members were told that many students had only 20 cents a day for lunch, and with the cost of a sandwich at 10 cents, many had to go without dessert because of the extra two cents.

Occasionally, it was noted cafeteria cashiers looked the other way and didn't charge the extra two cents so as not to deny students their dessert.

INSPECTION SOUGHT FOR RIFLE RANGE

School Committee member Dennis Ryan called for a state inspection of the newly constructed rifle range at the Squantum School to insure it was not accessible to elementary school students. And despite the ruling of City Solicitor Arthur Burgess, Ryan wanted a clarification of the city's liability in the range's operation.

Committee members Domenic Chiminiello and William Anderson also shared Ryan's reservations on the new range. The range was relocated from the Quincy School where it was used by 87 students from NQHS.

Nancy's No Bake Desert

This Christmas instead of setting a couple of tables for 30 family members as a sit down dinner, we're having our first buffet. And instead of using china dishes, we're going plastic. We'll see how it works out. Do you think that Martha Stewart would approve?

And although I will cook most of the dinner, our children will be bringing the side dishes (vegetables, etc.) Our son Dom is making a gourmet antipasto. In keeping with making it easier, our daughter Nancy gave me today's recipe for the easiest, most delicious desert that doesn't have to be cooked. It has two of my favorites, chocolate and peanut butter.

Nancy's No Bake Desert

12 ounces white chocolate chips
1 cup peanut butter (chunky or creamy)
2 cups rice krispies
2 cups mini marshmallows

Melt the chocolate chips in the microwave (or on top of stove). Stir in the peanut butter, add the rice krispies and the mini marshmallows.

Lightly grease a cookie sheet. Drop by tablespoons and refrigerate. Nancy placed each one of hers on a small doily which looked very festive. Or you can place each one in a decorative paper cup cake container.

NQHS Senior In Regional Competition

Vivian Chan Wins Lions Club Speech Contest

Vivian Chan, a senior at North Quincy High School, was the first place winner in the annual Quincy Lions Club high school speech contest.

Chan, who received a $150 cash award, will compete in a regional speech contest. The winner advances to a district competition.

Susan Haydar and Wendy Trafton, also North Quincy High School seniors, took second and third place respectively in the local competition which included 10 participants. Haydar received $75 and Trafton $50 for their efforts.

Also competing were Amanda Hunter, Jacky Cheung, both from North Quincy High School; Joanna Cullen, John Tormey, Alicia Quigg, James Quigley and Shannon Whalen, all from Quincy High School.

Participants were instructed to give a speech on the subject "What Worries Me and Why" within a 5 to 10 minute time frame.

The contest was held at North Quincy High School. A similar contest was held at Quincy High School last year.

Lions Club President John Reed was the program emcee. He was assisted by fellow Lion Mark Alpert, chairman of the event. Other Lions assisting were timekeeper Jack Curley and tellers Tom Zukauskas and Michelle Lydon.

Judges were Bob Bosworth, editor of The Quincy Sun; Tim Burke, a tax attorney with Cohen & Burke of Braintree; John Crisafulli, a CPA in Braintree; and Tom McFarland, a real estate broker with Re-Max Realty Pros in Quincy.

The following is the text of winning speech by Vivian Chan.

Voting has long been a treasured right by individuals around the world. Even in this day and age, numerous nations have yet to bestow this privilege upon their people. The American Revolutionary war was fought in part because the British would not give the colonists an equal say in what occurred politically in their lives. All the early settlers desired was the right to govern over themselves. Because this right was refused, war broke out, with the colonists finally prevailing. Essentially, the United States was founded on the hunger of individuals to participate in their government. This aspiration was granted through the idea of the vote. For over two hundred years, America has existed on this fundamental concept of political activism of its citizens. In recent times, however, the power, value, and importance of a single ballot has been lost. The enthusiasm for selecting one's representatives has weakened. In fact, it is at an all time low. What is most worrisome is that a nation that was founded on the importance of voting is now wracked with political apathy.

The election of a new president takes place but once every four years. This political fanfare has traditionally drawn significant attention both nationally and globally. While individuals around the world have always focused carefully on the current electoral status of the United States, the nation's own citizens are quite a different story. The nation has just ended another important presidential election, but it did not appear voters were very excited. A recent issue of Time Magazine shows that the last presidential debate as well as the Republican and Democratic conventions were the least watched in history. More importantly, though, was the voter turnout on November 5. For the first time since 1924, participation among registered voters dropped below 50% to a mere 48.5%. This statistic is in stark contrast to Uganda's 95% turnout. In a time where it appears a general sense of apathy has taken over what used to be enthusiasm for the electoral process, some sort of maneuvering must be done to increase the awareness in the significance of overall political activism.

Governmental inactivity by citizens brings about numerous severe consequences. One such repercussion is that the masses

For Outstanding Community Service

Sun 'Citizen Of Year' Nominations Close Dec. 31

Nominations for The Quincy Sun's 12th annual "Citizen of the Year" award will close Tuesday, Dec. 31.

Established in 1985, the award recognizes an individual for outstanding community service or a special achievement.

Last year, Joseph McConville was honored for "freely giving a good part of his life to Quincy youth and to his city. His community service includes being a volunteer ice skating instructor and coach for Quincy Youth Hockey Association for 25 years. He has also served the city and his community in many unpaid positions, including chairman of the Quincy Planning Board.

He was selected from 35 nominations submitted by Sun readers.

Sun readers may nominate the person they feel is the most deserving.

After nominations close Tuesday, Dec. 31, a judging panel will be selected to make the final choice from the nominations submitted.

A nomination ballot to help the selection process appears below in this week's issue of The Sun.

If you know of someone you would like to see recognized with this award, fill out the ballot and mail it to:

The Quincy Sun
Attn: Citizen of the Year
1372 Hancock St.
Quincy, MA 02169

Nominations should be postmarked no later than Dec. 31.

Ballots can also be dropped off at The Sun office at the above address by Dec. 31.

Those submitting nominations should identify themselves. They can also attach to the ballot a letter detailing the reason for the nomination.

Nominees can be someone in elective office, a member of an appointed board, a clergy member, a teacher or school administrator, a police officer or firefighter, someone in the business community, a sports figure or an "unsung" neighbor or friend who has given freely of his or her time to a worthy project or cause.

Past recipients of the award, and the year of their selection, are:

Tony Siciliano, deputy director of Quincy Emergency Management (formerly Civil Defense, 1985.

Ruth Wainwright of Houghs Neck, a long-time community volunteer, 1986.

The late Richard J. Koch Sr., for his work with charitable and community causes over four decades, posthumously in 1987.

Martin Finnegan, retired Quincy high school athletic director, for coordinating the drug and alcohol program Project Impact, 1988.

Clara Yeomans, a long-time environmentalist and charter member of the Quincy Conservation Commission, 1989.

Gerald Gherardi, for his contributions to charities and service organizations over a half century, 1990.

Frank Kearns, for his innumerable volunteer contributions as a community activist and advocate for the city's elderly, homeless, needy and poor, 1991.

Stephen Cantelli, an innovative Quincy public school teacher and advocate of community education, 1992.

Mary Vallier, a founder of Domestic Violence Ended and a longtime aide to battered women and abused children, 1993.

Fr. William McCarthy, retired pastor of St. John's Church and Quincy's beloved "Father Bill," for helping the poor, hungry, homeless and all others in need for many years, 1994.

Those nominated the past 11 years are eligible to be nominated again this year. Since this is not a popularity contest, a person receiving the most nominations will not necessarily be the final winner.

Anyone nominated just once has an equal chance of being the award recipient.

Again, the deadline for nominations is Tuesday, Dec. 31.

The name of the winner will be announced in The Quincy Sun in January.

First Night Quincy On Worldwide Web

This year's First Night Quincy celebration will be seen around the world by way of the Worldwide Web, announces First Night Chairman Michael Cheney.

Cheney said First Night Quincy is utilizing the computer workshop located on Temple Street in Quincy Center as the official web location. Anyone wishing to view Quincy's new web site may do so by utilizing the Quincy online weblink. The address is http://quincyonline.com/events.html.

First Night has linked up with Quincy Online, which also has many other web locations, according to Cheney.

"We will be contacting First Nights throughout the world and letting them know that our event will be broadcast live by way of the web," he said.

There are 151 First Night cities around the world observing New Year's Eve with events similar to First Night Quincy, a family, non-alcoholic celebration of the arts.

Those who have relatives with computers with access to the Worldwide Web are welcome to give them the First Night Quincy web address.

Anyone wishing additional information regarding the Quincy web site or other First Night event may currently view the web site.

"This is a very exciting opportunity for anyone in Quincy or the South Shore who has never viewed the Worldwide Web to drop by and ask questions of other First Night cities from around the world," said Cheney. "You may want to send an E-mail message or declare your New Year's resolutions to a friend. The web site is one of many new attractions for this year's celebration."

Admission buttons are on sale at Dunkin' Donuts, Stop & Shop, Shaw's and the QCBPA Office at 1416 Hancock St. Buttons are $7, $10 the night of the event. For more information, call the First Night Office at 376-1071.

Our Policy On Engagement Photographs And Wedding Announcements

The Quincy Sun will continue to publish photographs with engagement announcements as it always has.

The Sun will also continue to use in wedding announcements, the names of all members of the wedding party including maid or matron of honor, best man, parents, bridesmaids, ushers, flower girls and ringbearers, etc.

We invite engaged couples to submit photos with their announcements, and when submitting their wedding photo, to include a complete listing of the wedding party.

Black and white photos are preferred. The Sun can convert most color photos to black and white for publication but the photo loses some clarity in the process.

We suggest that when you have your engagement photo taken, you request the studio to send a copy to The Sun with the reminder that The Sun is continuing its policy of publishing engagement photos.

The Sun also publishes articles and photos of wedding anniversaries, beginning with the 25th anniversary.

And, as in the past, there is no charge.

City Seeks Report On Other Gun Range Sites

The city is asking state Department of Environmental Affairs Secretary Trudy Coxe to study other possible sites for a police gun range on Moon Island.

Quincy officials made the request after learning last week that the City of Boston, whose police officers operate the gun range, filed an environmental impact report for a planned project at the site. Boston officials did not include a request to study other possible sites in its first draft report.

Officials in Boston said that action was not necessary because the work the police department plans at the site is within the existing range, not an expansion area.

City councillors and other Quincy officials, however, say the project is an expansion of the old range, smaller than the one originally planned but more extensive than the current range.

Coxe will decide after Jan. 9 whether to accept Boston's draft report or tell Boston to make further studies.

In addition to the site study, Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers, whose ward included Moon Island and City Councillor Michael Cheney have asked that Quincy residents be appointed to a Moon Island Advisory Committee.

Moon Island, which is owned by Boston but falls within Quincy's city limits in Squantum, has been the object of some tension between the two cities in recent years.

Boston police have operated the gun range at the site since 1958, and Boston's bomb squad has detonated explosives there for years. However, Squantum residents have complained in recent years about gun noise, stray bullets and vegetation stripped by Boston police from a four-acre tract without an environmental study.

Finn said about 100 volunteers help make the sheltering coalition's Community Dinner possible. About 40 or so, he noted, are Quincy Jewish War Veterans Post members and others of the Hebrew faith who volunteer "so Christians can take the holiday."

Finn added, however, that there are plenty of Christians who also do their part.

"I'm constantly overwhelmed by the generosity of people who would come to help others on their holiday," he said. "It's truly amazing."

Delegation Participates In MWRA Caucus Meeting

The four members of Quincy's State House delegation--Sen. Michael Morrissey and Reps. Michael Bellotti, Ronald Mariano and Stephen Tobin--recently participated in a Massachusetts Water Resources Authority Legislative Caucus meeting.

The focus of the meeting was the signing of legislation relative to the MWRA and its ratepayers. A majority of the bills offered by the caucus for signage were spearheaded by Rep. Robert DeLeo (D-Winthrop), caucus chairman.

"The MWRA has done a tremendous job at helping the water and sewer rates of the Commonwealth. As a legislator, I feel the responsibility to my constituents to assist the MWRA in any and every way possible," said Bellotti.

Included in the legislation supported by the delegation, DeLeo and the caucus was a bill which provides for the reimbursement of the MWRA for the cost of providing interest-free grants and loans for cities and towns for the rehabilitation of local sewer collection and water delivery systems, one which requires the Commonwealth to fully fund the Boston Harbor cleanup and legislation which improves the supply and delivery of water to MWRA ratepayers.

Morrissey said, "It has always been a pleasure working with the MWRA Caucus members to lighten the burden of the residents of the state. I will continue to work for our community anf the MWRA throughout the upcoming legislative session."

CHRISTMAS IN CHURCH

lights the way to the spirit and brotherhood of Christmas

The Christmas Story

Luke, 2, 1-14. At that time, there went forth a decree from Caesar Augustus that a census of the whole world should be taken. The first census took place while Cyrinus was governor of Syria.

And all were going each to his own town, to register.

And Joseph also sent from Galilee out of the town of Nazareth into Judea to the town of David, which is called Bethlehem - because he was of the house and family of David - to register, together with Mary his espoused wife, who was with child.

And it came to pass while they were there, that the days for her to be delivered were fulfilled.

And she brought forth her first-born Son, and wrapped Him in swaddling clothes, and laid Him in a Manger, because there was no room for them in the Inn.

And there were shepherds in the same district living in the fields and keeping watch over their flock by night.

And behold, an angel of the Lord stood by them and the glory of God shone round them, and they feared exceedingly.

And the angel said to them, "Do not be afraid, for behold, I bring you good news of great joy which shall be to all the people; for today in the town of David a Savior has been born to you, Who is Christ the Lord.

And this shall be a sign to you; you will find an infant wrapped in swaddling clothes and lying in a manger,"

And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God and saying, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace among men of good will."

ASK YOUR LAWYER

by Kevin F. O'Donnell
ATTORNEY AT LAW

COMPONENTS OF NEGLIGENCE

While victims of negligence have the right to sue for damages for their injuries, the mere fact that someone was negligent does not automatically give them the right to sue. Before a victim has the chance to win a legal action, there must be three elements present: 1. The victim must show that the negligent person had failed to meet an accepted standard of care. The common law has created a standard based on how a "reasonable man" would act in the same circumstances. Laws, rules, and regulations also set standards of care. 2. The victim must show that his or her injuries are measurable, to the extent that some significant damage was done. 3. The victim must be able to prove that the other person's negligence was a substantial cause of the injury. An attorney must see that all these criteria are met before proceeding.

HINT: Intent is not an element in negligence.

If you have been injured as the result of another party's actions, call 7732880 for the advice you need. All of my consultations are informative, confidential, and followed by effective legal representation if you wish to proceed. My dedicated support staff and I will work hard to represent you and settle your case as fairly and as quickly as possible. If there is no recovery, there is no fee. My office is conveniently located at Gridley Bryant Office Condominiums, 111 Willard Street.

REAL ESTATE MARKET

Tune Up The Kitchen For More Sales Value

(NAPS)—Whether you're hoping to sell your home soon—or maybe some day—improving your kitchen may pay off then and now.

Real estate experts suggest prospective home buyers pay particular attention to a home's woodwork, especially the kitchen cabinets.

A kitchen in which the cabinets are bright and beautiful makes a home easier to sell—and easier to keep.

Many homeowners turn to an innovative wood care service, Kitchen Tune-Up, that offers affordable alternatives to total cabinet make overs to bring kitchen cabinets back to life.

The company's exclusive on-site wood restoration process colors and conditions wood to bring back its original beauty. The process costs around $400 and takes less than a day to complete. You don't even have to empty the cupboards.

For cabinets that need to be updated a bit, the company offers a beautiful line of replacement handles, knobs and hinges, all carrying a life time guarantee.

To learn more about the process and reach a nearby Kitchen Tune-Up Wood Care Specialist, call 1-800-333-6385.

Richard Coughlin Elected Realtors Assn. President

H. Richard Coughlin, owner of Coughlin & Company in Weymouth, was officially installed as president of the South Shore Association of Realtors during recent ceremonies at Lantana in Randolph.

Coughlin was joined by family and friends who were given special recognition before the crowd of over 250 members and guests. Mary Crowley, 1997 president-elect of the Massachusetts Association of Realtors, was the installing officer for the 1997 leadership team.

Serving with Coughlin are Joanne Condon Walsh, 1st vice president; Rita Coffey, 2nd vice president; Richard Lannon, secretary-treasurer and directors Joyce Baker, Robert Bell, Deborah Carlson, Mary Dawson, Richard Hemingway, Lorraine Ingenito, Ronald McKee, Vincent Moscardelli, J. Phillip Murphy, Elizabeth Rowe, Robin Stella and John Tronca.

RICHARD COUGHLIN

Coughlin, in his remarks, spoke about the many issues impacting today's real estate market, stating his belief that although change is coming faster than was ever dreamed, Realtors help people buy and sell homes, technology is merely a tool and Realtors must continue to work with people in a professional, personal manner to help people with one of the biggest decisions of their lives.

Coughlin also called upon those present to step back, take time to get to know one another, work together sharing knowledge and combining skills in order to build the future together.

Coughlin will begin his term of office on Jan. 1, succeeding Mary Dawson of Quincy who served as president during 1996. Dawson, after receiving a plaque of recognition of her term in office, thanked the officers, directors and members who worked with her and helped the board during her year.

The South Shore Association of Realtors is more of more than 1,800 boards of Realtors nationwide that comprise the National Association of Realtors, the nation's largest trade association. The South Shore Association of Realtors is the "Voice for Real Estate" throughout the South Shore.

Wallpaper Through The Ages

(NAPS)—The advent of wallcovering goes back hundreds of years. As revolutionary as it was when first introduced, it took all these years for someone to develop an easy way to remove unwanted paper from walls.

Modern product to remove wallpaper and paste.

Keller

Here's the abridged version of wallpaper history.

England dominated the early industry. Paper has been used there to decorate walls since the 1500s.

After the American Revolution, people in the U.S. were attracted to designs from France. The exact processes employed to make wallpaper in the 18th and early 19th centuries are not known.

Before the 19th century invention of continuous-roll paper, designs were placed on "joined" paper, which was made by gluing together sheets of handmade rag stock.

Machine printing reduced the cost of wall coverings and made it affordable for the middle class.

Removing unwanted paper involved soaking walls with hot water, mixing chemicals, or using steamers and scrapers. A few years ago, 3M Wallpaper and Paste Remover entered the market. It is a gel that is applied to wallcoverings with brushes and rollers. After about 20 minutes, paper and paste are removed more quickly and more easily than with the traditional methods.

If you are trying to make a historical record of your living space and, while removing wallpaper, you find layers upon layers, do not assume that you are looking at paper in the order each was applied. Some rolls may have been purchased and put aside, only to be hung by a later resident.

GETTING HIS STICK in the way of a Taunton pass is Quincy defensemen Derek McTomney (right) during the Presidents' victory at Quincy Youth Arena. McTomney, along with his fellow defensemen and goaltender Chris Burns, kept the Taunton forwards at bay when they entered the Quincy zone.

QUINCY'S CHRIS HAIDUL celebrates his third goal of the season, which broke a scoreless tie and turned out to be the game-winner in a 3-0 triumph over Taunton last Wedneday night. The Presidents, winners of their first two games, faced a tough Weymouth team Saturday night before traveling to Bridgewater-Raynham for a game yesterday (Monday) at 2 p.m.

HOCKEY

Burns, Presidents Blank Taunton, 3-0

By LIAM FITZGERALD

Winners of its first two games by a combined score of 11-1, the Quincy High School hockey team faced its first test Saturday when Weymouth visits the Quincy Youth Arena.

The Presidents were also scheduled to play yesterday (Monday) at 7 p.m. at Bridgewater-Raynham.

Quincy's next game will be next Monday, Dec. 30 at noon at Plymouth South.

The Presidents (2-0) picked up their second win last Wednesday night, blanking OCL foe Taunton, 3-0, at Quincy Youth Arena.

Despite numerous scoring chances, Quincy's forwards could not penetrate the Tigers goaltender through the first two periods.

"That goalie had our guys shaking their heads," said Quincy coach Bob Sylvia. "We must have put on 16-17 shots in both the first and second periods, including some real good bids, but he stonewalled us."

With the game deadlocked at 0-0, Chris Haidul scored his third goal of the season to break the tie and give the Presidents a 1-0 lead. Bob Hardy notched his first goal to pad the lead, before Scott Cooper lit the lamp on an empty netter to close out the satisfying victory. Teammates Mark Glynn and Scott Lyons assisted on the first two goals.

"I'm proud of our guys, because they stuck to the game plan and it eventually paid off," said Sylvia. "This was more than a 3-0 win, because it got them to believe in themselves, that they could win the game. We had few penalties, we didn't self-destruct, we just waited for a break and got it. This was a really good boost for us."

Recording the shutout for QHS was goaltender Chris Burns, who turned it up a notch when the pressure was on in the third period.

"He (Burns) was tested eight or nine times and made the big saves when he had to," said Sylvia. "He had some key saves when we were up 1-0, including three humdingers late. While most of the action was down the other end, he was able to stay focused and in the game when they came at him. You like to see that in your goaltender."

QHS, NQ Hockey Alumni Face Off In Alumni Game

Quincy High School and North Quincy High School alumni hockey players returned to participate in the recent third annual Alumni Hockey game at Quincy Youth Arena.

The first game featured players who graduated between 1979 and 1992. QHS alumni had goaltender Jimmy Campbell ('80) between the pipes and NQ countered with the duo of Steve Sugarman ('89) and Bob Tierny ('80).

Action was fast and furious with Quincy getting on the board first, courtesy of Scott Curtin ('90) with assists by Scott Richardson ('80) and Paul Bamberry ('82). With Quincy's Pat Clifford ('79) in the penalty box, North put heavy pressure on Campbell, only to be denied in their efforts to even the score.

In the second period, NQ came roaring back to tie the score at 1-1 on a goal by Jamie Tapper ('90), set up by Scott Messina ('84). Ten seconds later, Quincy went back on top, 2-1, on a Tony Scola ('88) shot. Kevin Craig ('82) increased the Quincy lead to 3-1 when he lit the lamp on a pass from Brian Silcox ('83) and Richardson. NQ's David Tapper ('84) slipped one by Campbell at 5:55 of the second, assisted by Joe Fasano ('90) and Messina. With 1:33 left in the second, North's Billy Dineen ('88) tied the score on a David Tapper rebound.

Greg McGlame iced the game for NQ with a goal at 7:40 of the third, assisted by Matt Riley ('92) and Aidan O'Donoghue ('92) for a 4-3 North Quincy triumph. Also playing for the Quincy team were Mike Furey ('79), John Norton ('79), Steve McInnis ('89) and Jack McInnis ('80). NQ's roster included Steve O'Brien ('92), Leo Doyle ('79), John Jarnis ('91), Paul O'Sullivan ('81), Tim Duff ('86), Paul McGrath ('89), Jim Moore ('80), Sean Vermette ('92), Tom Gerry ('80), Mike Haynes ('86) and Jay Rodrigues ('88).

The second game featured players who graduated between 1951 and 1979, and the action was intense. Quincy started goaltender Bill Parsley ('52) and North Quincy's goaltenders were Tom Cline ('61) and Jim Fatseas ('73).

Frankie Guest ('76) led all Quincy scorers with a hat trick. Guest's first goal came on a pass by Rich Ahola ('79). North's Steve Mackay ('73) tied the score at 1-1 with an unassisted goal just seconds later. In the second period. Guest lit the lamp again, this time assisted by Mark Giordani ('78). Mackay tied it up at 2-2 with a goal set up by Al Grazioso ('72) and Joe Lannon ('73).

With NQ's Bob Carmody ('76) in the box for roughing, Guest netted his third goal, an unassisted score. Despite the best efforts of the NQ defense, Quincy's offense came alive for three third-period tallies, two by Giordani and one by Frank DeCristofaro ('72) for

A MATTER OF TIMING BELT OR CHAIN

A rough idle may stem from damage to the timing belt or chain, which may show symptoms of an unusual slapping, or metallic noise. This noise from inside the timing belt or chain cover usually means that a loose chain or belt is slapping against the cover. The result is an alteration in valve timing, which causes the engine to idle roughly. A problem with the timing- belt or chain can also be identified with the use of a timing light aimed at the timing pulley. If the timing marks appear to jump around, the chain or belt is likely bad. The solution to this problem usually rests with the replacement of the belt or chain. In any case, manufacturers recommends that timing belts be replaced at regular intervals in order to preclude the possibility that they might break and cause a great deal of damage to engines that are susceptible to it.

HINT: Timing chains wear in time, but do not require regular maintenance.

Kane, who played for the Manets' JV and varsity squads, went on to play at Quincy High School. His number 26 was retired from the Manets organization in his memory.

Kane's father, Bob, was presented with a football signed by the Manets varsity team. His brother, Michael, his framed game jersey, his younger brother, Mark, a Manets sweatshirt. The cheerleaders presented his mother, Marilyn, a flower arrangement.

Girls Basketball

Ram Classic Tournament Up Next For Presidents

The Quincy High School girls basketball team, which lost its season opener to Falmouth, was back in action last Friday night at home against Silver Lake.

The Presidents were scheduled to play at Weymouth yesterday (Monday) at 7 p.m.

This coming Sunday and Monday (Dec. 29 and 30), the Presidents will compete in the Ram Classic Tournament at Marshfield. Sunday at 2 p.m., Quincy battles Milton. If Quincy wins, it plays the winner of Marshfield-Abington Monday at 5:30 p.m. If they lose, the Presidents take on the loser of the Marshfield-Abington game Monday at 2 p.m.

In the loss to Falmouth, Quincy faced a team with seven girls over 5-10, including a starting frontcourt of 6-3, 6-2 and 6-0 players.

"Besides the fact we didn't match up well with their height, we just are not at that level yet," said Quincy coach Bob Noble. "They (Falmouth) are a very good team, one of the best in the Old Colony League. Not only were they bigger than us, but they were solid athletes, real good players who just overpowered us."

According to Noble, Quincy was in the game "for the first half of the first half," before Falmouth went on a spurt late in the half to put the game out of reach.

However, Quincy did not quit when the second half began; rather, the Presidents kept up the intensity the entire game, something their coach will look to build on as the season progresses.

"I issued a challenge at the half, asking them what they would now, how would they react to what happened," said Noble. "I was pleased to find out that the kids had the heart and desire to continue to play. One of our goals this season was to play the full 32 minutes regardless of the score.

"It was a good, hard team effort. The girls didn't give up and they didn't back down. We're building on the positives, and I think that's a great thing to use as the season goes on. We'll be in our fair share of games against some of the teams in this league."

Leading Quincy's balanced offense was senior forward Julie McLaughlin, who scored seven points.

North Quincy Battles East Boston Friday

Following a loss to Silver Lake in the season opener, the North Quincy High School girls basketball team looked to pick up its first triumph of the season last Friday night at Weymouth.

The Red Raiders were also scheduled to play yesterday (Monday) at 7 p.m. against visiting Plymouth South.

This Friday night at 7, North Quincy hosts its Christmas Tourney, taking on East Boston. If the Red Raiders win, they play Saturday at 7. If they lose, they play Saturday at 5:30 p.m.

Next Monday, Dec. 30, the Red Raiders host Taunton at 7 p.m.

In the loss to Silver Lake, the Red Raiders got into trouble early when they had problems passing the ball in bounds. The Lakers took advantage of the turnovers, converting them into easy baskets and building a substantial lead in the first half.

"We dug ourselves a huge hole when we couldn't get the ball in," said NQ coach Ken Panaro. "By the time we made the adjustment, they had built a pretty good lead and we couldn't catch up."

The Lakers' Marche Strickland, who averaged 35 points a game last season as a sophomore, poured in 31 points against the Red Raiders.

Playing solid games for the Red Raiders were senior Kerry Ginty, who scored 11 points, and Kerry Skeehan and Laurie Flynn.

"Kerry (Skeehan) played good defense, hustling all over the court, and Laurie had a phenomenal outing, playing hard the entire game," said Panaro. "She has a real good court sense."

Raiders Win Opener, Face Stoughton Friday

Victorious in its season opener against Silver Lake, the North Quincy High School boys basketball team hosted Weymouth Friday night.

Last night (Monday) at 7, the Red Raiders welcomed visiting Plymouth South.

This weekend, North will participate in the Holiday Scholastic Tournament, which includes Stoughton, Falmouth and Boston Latin. Friday at 5:30 p.m., the Red Raiders take on the host team, Stoughton. The winner of that game tangles with the winner of the Falmouth-Boston Latin game Saturday at 7 p.m. The losers of Friday's games play each other in the consolation game Saturday at 5:30 p.m.

Next Monday, Dec. 30, NQ hits the road to battle Taunton, the second-ranked team in the state as of last week. Tip-off is set for 7 p.m.

Last week, the Red Raiders utilized a balanced offensive attack and stifling defense to defeat Silver Lake, 59-38.

Center Brian Ross, a 6-8 junior, paced NQ offensively with 20 points, followed by sophomore guard Brian Doyle's 12, senior co-captain forward Jim Finn's eight, senior guard Mike Johnson's seven and senior foward Matt Bromley's six.

"Doyle, Johnson, Chris (Erler) and Jimmy are shooting the ball well, which is a big plus," said NQ coach Ted Stevenson.

Defensively, North held Silver Lake scoreless for the game's first five minutes and allowed just 15 points the entire half.

"It was a great team defensive effort," said Stevenson. "We forced them into eight steals in the first half, and didn't allow too many uncontested shots. We always had a hand in their faces.

"Also, we caused four 30-second violations, which means you're doing a lot of things right defensively. You couldn't ask for a better effort. It was a great start to what we hope will be a very successful season."

Quincy's Comeback Topples Falmouth

Starting its season with a come-from-behind victory over Falmouth last week, the Quincy High School boys basketball team played at Silver Lake Friday night.

Last night (Monday) at 7, the Presidents hosted Weymouth. This Friday, Quincy hits the road again, traveling to Barnstable for a 12:30 p.m. tip-off.

The Quincy boys will participate in this weekend's Ram Classic Tournament at Marshfield. Sunday night at 7:15, the Presidents take on Marshfield. The winner of that game battles the winner of the Plymouth South-Scituate game Monday, Dec. 30 at 7:15 p.m. The losers of Sunday's contests play Monday at 3:45 p.m.

In their 50-48 victory over Falmouth, the Presidents battled back from a 14-point deficit with strong offensive and defensive play from seniors Bob Walsh and Carmine Lorenzano, sophomore Jim Munchbach and freshman Dan Kelly.

Trailing 48-46, Walsh (17 points) canned a jumped to tie the game with 40 second left. Quincy's defense then came up with a steal, and Lorenzano (13 points) was fouled with seven seconds left. He hit both of his free throws to give Quincy the lead, but Falmouth still had a chance to tie the game or win it with a three-pointer.

Once again, though, the Presidents' defense rose to the occasion, defending the shooter, forcing him into a bad shot and securing the win for Quincy.

"This was a great first game for us," said QHS coach John Franceschini. "Some of our young people stepped forward and our seniors did a great job, too. Making our last eight free throws turned out to be the difference in crunch time, something we weren't able to do in the past."

Early in the second half, Quincy found itself behind by 14 and in need of a serious turnaround. Providing the fuel for the comeback were guards Kelly and Munchbach (eight points), who did a "tremendous job of taking control of the game and getting the ball inside to Walsh, (Geoff) King and Lorenzano," said Franceschini.

In the fourth quarter, QHS turned up a couple notches defensively, collecting 14 steals and turnovers and "really promoting the play," said Franceschini. Pacing the defense were Munchback and Kelly, who combined for six steals and turnovers in the fourth, setting the stage for Quincy's thrilling triumph.

A funeral service held Saturday for Karma I. (Werdelin) Jannetti, 101, of Quincy, who died Dec. 13 was arranged by the Deware Funeral Home.

An obituary in last week's issue incorrectly identified the funeral home. The Sun regrets the error.

'Twas The Night Before Christmas In Quincy Center

By MARALIN MANNING

'Twas the night before Christmas and through Quincy Center, not a creature was stirring, waiting for Santa to enter.

Barker's and Rogers had just closed their door, in hopes that gifts sold would please as before.

At restaurants like Taso's, Finian's, The Fours, hungry shoppers bustled in and out of their doors.

Woolworth's and Curry's shelves now without holiday decorations, their glittery stock spread about at Quincy celebrations.

Then down at The Oasis young carolers drew throngs, I'm sure at Caryn's Corner they knew each of their songs.

Looking up at the windows I knew in a flash, to Ryder's I must hurry for a red curtain or sash.

The moon how it twinkled on a fresh fallen snow, no competition for Stephen Leigh's trinkets I know.

Then what to Ginger Betty's wondering eyes should appear, but a tasty Napoli's Pizza delivered by eight tiny reindeer.

At Everlasting Engraving gifts were wrapped quick with creativity, so the QVNA staff could make another stop at Infinity.

Frantic Framers and Kennedy's toil to make artwork a gift, both staffs need a stop at Wings Express for an energy lift.

More rapid that eagles Angelina's deliveries were made, Asian specialities to come from Beijing Express and Quincy Jade.

Now Barry's, now Hajjar, now Murphy & Lynch too, on Reidy, on Agnitti and Wah Lum Kung Fu.

Westlon and Savers both closed up tight, for a long holiday rest, it's home too for Quinwell to make ready for Santa, to enjoy all the best.

As this season draws quickly to close it's to Papa Gino's an order will go, ring Wanna Bagel or Boston Market both can make to travel I know.

Call Granite Rail, Shooters, Raffael's or maybe Yard Rock, all provide a setting to dance, drink, play or talk.

And when it is over and 1997 is in high gear, call Burgin Platner, Metro, Chase or CNA to feel secure for next year.

Need a last minute for someone special? I'd stop looking around, for I know Expose', Fashion and Phase II are right here in town.

With your lady In Step, in fashion from head to toe, to Abigail's Crossing for more unique surprises I go.

For my Whiz Kids a bundle of toys is next on demand, IHOP over to Rhyme 'n Reason with children's list in my hand.

Four Star helps to make Office Solutions' party both festive and merry, Signature Signs post their annual holiday greeting in red-cherry.

Call South Shore Buick, Saturn or Thrifty to drive to Adams Inn swiftly, they say it's quite nifty.

Keep money matters convenient at Bank Boston, Citizens and Fleet, at Hibernia and Braintree banking's not a difficult feat.

Flynn, Roberts and Moscardelli are right jolly real estate elves, we picture them down chimneys and laugh to ourselves.

Key for Kenealy is being at home with no one away, watching Continental Cable, hearing WJDA.

A Sun and a Ledger folded neatly on the bed, both publishers feel confident they both have been read.

A quick stop at Hancock Tobacco or Skin Deep Skin up the street, then at Bernie's for catch up sure the latest chatter's always a treat.

Embellish, Hairplace I or Mary Kay makes all the ladies so pretty today, we need Kenny and Granite to Lock them away.

The glasses we lift from Quincy Optical are fine, with help from Dr. Indek both our vision and backs are in line.

Clifford's Flowers and fragrance and Granite Electrical light, making for all this a perfectly spectacular night.

Miller, Fine Light, and Presidential too, picture Santa as he rides out of sight, alas Christmas is merry in Quincy tonight.

If the prose had been longer or the author much keener all would fit in this sonnet. Wishes no less sincere, their placement is minor, find below all listed upon it.

of people lose touch with their representatives. If this dilemma persists, the various needs of individuals will not be met. It will be assumed that people are homogenous in their needs and as this is far from the case, few will benefit. Throughout the nation, it is currently being echoed that those elected to office quickly lose touch with their constituents, but no one is willing to enact any change. An elected official not performing his job must answer to the people. It is thus stated in the Constitution. The people are, after all, those represented. The problem is that through not voting, this severance will become permanent. As a group, we the people have chosen to live under an elected government and be affected by it policies. Why, then have so many given in to the indifference of this arrangement? Is it not our lives that we are essentially talking about?

Political inactivity breeds irresponsibility in the people. When one does not participate, he lacks the care in his surroundings. An individual will merely justify his actions by claiming that what is occurring has nothing to do with him nor could be affected by anything he, might attempt to do. "What is one vote?" is a very popular response when a person is questioned as to why he has not voted. It is not understood that if everyone who asked this question were to vote so many changes could be effected. A single vote has unpredictable power claims Time Magazine. So often throughout history, it has been demonstrated, that one vote can make all the difference. Were it not for one ballot in 1776, we would all be speaking in German right now, rather than in the English language. And in 194 1, one vote saved the Selective Service just weeks prior to the bombing of Pearl Harbor. When one comes to this point of questioning the significance of one vote, all might be given up for lost.

Each individual is choosing to fall into the masses. No longer g and acting upon his own independent ideas, he will flow along with whatever decision is made for him. He will have no other choice. John Dewey, an American philosopher, claims that individuals who are shut out of the democratic process often become uninterested and uncaring about all political affairs. They tend to flow along with whatever occurs with no particular interest, all the while feeling no responsibility for events that transpire-whether positive or negative.

With political inactivity by the majority of the people, it becomes apparent that changes will occur only for the benefit of the few who do take action. But what will become of the remainder of the population? Virtually nothing in their best interest. What occurs will help the elite who will dominate the public offices. Instead of a democracy, an oligarchy will reign. This must not be allowed to happen. Any and all problems must be brought to the attention of those elected and demands for change must resonate from the people. Otherwise, funds will be directed away from those who truly need it. When only a minority of eligible citizens vote, the candidate taking office, in reality, represents only a small percentage of people. In truth it is likely that an extremist could gain power, when so few care. No one will notice the significant changes until it is too late.

It is hoped that this indifference will cease to plague the country. Those who claim that politics are irrelevant to life might as well be saying that freedom is of no concern either. Efforts must be made to increase people's participation in their own government. Primarily, education should be the key. Older and younger generations alike should be demonstrated to the importance of just one caring person's ballot. By educating younger generations about political topics, ideas will be regularly taken home and used to instigate family discussions; consequently increasing the amount of governmental knowledge in both adults and children. This action will not only boost the national adult voter turnout, but also create a solid foundation of future voters. In numerous studies, it has been shown that adults who actively participate in the nation's politics pass on their knowledge and enthusiasm to their children.

A sense of moral political responsibility must be instilled in every individual of this nation. After all, claims British philosopher John Stuart Mill, active interest in politics will enhance a participant's sense of political responsibility. Education, moreover, will cause an increased involvement in the democratic system and be conducive to the filling of the nation with life-long voters. By getting children involved at an impressionable age in the electoral process, they will grow up with a solid framework for the events that occur around them. The adults helping with the process will also gain knowledge in current electoral issues. Without these efforts, one can expect nothing but an even weaker voter turnout from Americans. By remaining unconcerned about this serious problem of political inactivity, it is worrisome that the people of the United States will soon be content to follow rather than to lead.

Public Hearings Jan. 8, 13 For Site Plan Review Process

The Quincy Planning Board will hold a public hearing on a proposed site plan review process Wednesday, Jan. 8 at 7 p.m. in the second floor Conference Room at City Hall Annex.

The City Council, which has the final say on the matter, will hold its own public hearing Monday, Jan. 13 at 7 p.m. in the Council Chambers at City Hall.

City Solicitor Stephen McGrath has said that although the two boards already have held hearings on the matter--which was introduced by Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi--the two new hearings are necessary because the council has not taken a vote on the issue since its June 3 hearing.

Raymondi's proposed ordinance would create a "site plan review" process designed to protect neighborhoods from increased traffic and other problems caused by new commercial buildings and apartments.

Specifically, the site plan review would apply to new buildings or additions to existing ones larger than 10,000 square feet and apartments with 13 or more units. Single-family homes would not be affected.

The process would make it mandatory for developers to show that their project would have no adverse effect on the surrounding neighborhood and to agree to pay for any necessary street improvements. In addition, city department heads would have to review the project.

The Planning Board would have the final say on each project. It would be given the authority to request changes on anything from architecture to landscaping.

Raymondi introduced the measure after Shaw's Supermarkets announced plans to build a new "superstore" at the site of the former Quinoil headquarters on Quincy Avenue. Under current zoning laws, Shaw's needed only to obtain a permit from the Quincy Building Department to get the project off the ground.

SOUTH SHORE YMCA president Ralph Yohe (right) accepts a $50,000 contribution from Bank of Boston retiring regional president Bruce MacKilligan for the Y's capital campaign. The "Building a Stronger Community" campaign, which is still underway, is raising money for a new addition and renovations at the Y's Quincy facility on Coddington St.

Sheets Mid-Term Address Jan. 6

Mayor James Sheets will give his mid-term address Monday, Jan. 6 at 10 a.m. in the City Council Chambers at City Hall, 1305 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

Members of the City Council and School Committee will be in attendance. The public is invited.

Sheets would not discuss specifics about his mid-term speech at press time, saying that it had not yet been completed. He did say it would consists of two parts, with the first focusing on accomplishments of the past year and the second looking ahead to the city's goals for 1997.

The mayor also noted that while "no major new initiatives" are planned for the coming year, the city will begin preparation for a celebration of the beginning of the upcoming millennium that will be tied into similar festivities throughout the country and around the world.

COLLECTING DAMAGES

Those who are injured due to the negligence or the intentional acts of others can sue in hopes of collecting damages. By compensating injured parties with damage awards, the legal system attempts to restore them as closely as possible to the positions and conditions they were in prior to their injuries. In cases where defendants carry sufficient liability insurance to cover the amounts awarded to successful plaintiffs, the injured parties should have little trouble collecting their judgments. In the event that defendants have no insurance but do have personal assets, legal action can be instituted to freeze them to satisfy the judgments. If, however, there are no assets that can be garnished or levied upon, the defendants are considered to be "judgment proof."

Hint: Because there is no set formula to determine the value of a plaintiff's pain and suffering, juries have to use their own judgment when setting an award.

Have you been injured? Call 773-2880 now for a free consultation. I accept only personal injury cases, and therefore have gained tremendous experience in this area of the law. I will handle your case on a percentage fee basis. This means that my office receives payment only if a recovery is made on your behalf. 1996 In Review

It Was A Year Of Accomplishments And Future Goals

It was a year of accomplishments, optimism, and goals for the future.

During the year, the city made improvements in education, beautification and public safety while continuing to focus on a number of its major goals.

One of those goals, a new elementary school for Quincy Point, became a reality when the City Council approved a $13 million bond package in May. During his fourth inaugural address in January, Sheets had listed the school among the city's number one priorities.

Another accomplishment was the completion of aesthetic and structural improvements in the Wollaston and North Quincy business districts. The two areas were spruced up following similar work in Quincy Center, and Sheets told The Quincy Sun in August that similar work may follow in South Quincy and Quincy Point. In addition, the Quincy Promenade, a Faneuil Hall-type marketplace, opened in the downtown during the summer.

The city's fire and police departments also saw improvements. Fifteen new firefighters were sworn-in in August. The police department's strength was bolstered by the addition of five new officers in October as well as a mounted patrol unit and a City Council appropriation of $357,500 for new cruisers, both in November.

Several new faces also appeared on the scene, hoping to make their mark by helping to build Quincy into a stronger city. Jo-An Thomas and Bruce Arons were hired as the city's tourism director and downtown development coordinator respectively in March and July. Dr. Jeremiah Ryan was appointed the new president of Quincy College in February.

Meanwhile, the city continued to focus on a number of other goals Sheets cited in his inaugural address, including:

•Improved senior programs and facilities. A supplemental budget of nearly $283,000 for a planned senior complex at Squantum Gardens was approved by the City Council in November, and Sheets said he expected the city to sign a lease for use of the site with the Navy in the near future.

•Revitalization of the Fore River shipyard. The U.S. Maritime Administration committed $55 million in federal loan guarantees to the shipyard reopening in November and Gov. William Weld pledged $6.6 million in state guarantees in December. Although at the end of the year there was more work to be done, Sheets predicted shipbuilding would return to the city by January 1998.

•Expansion of the Thomas Crane Public Library in Quincy Center. The library received a necessary $3.5 million state grant for the project in September, and Sheets said the city would fund the balance, probably through a bond, at some point in the future.

•Construction of the Quincy Center Concourse. City officials said plans were moving along and that the project's west link, or first of two phases, should be completed by early 1998.

•Construction of a downtown hotel. The city continued to work toward that goal although no official plans were announced.

One major news story had nothing to do with city improvements. First Lady Hillary Rodham Clinton was the featured speaker at a Democratic rally in October, and an estimated 10,000 people attended the event. Mrs. Clinton even said she would consider returning to the city with her daughter Chelsea in 1997 for the unveiling of an Abigail Adams statue.

Unfortunately, not everything that happened in 1996 was good news.

The infamous New England weather provided more than its fair share of misery. The Blizzard of '96, probably the worst snowstorm since the Blizzard of '78, dumped 20 inches of snow in January during the region's snowiest winter on record. Hurricane Edouard blew through the area in September. And an unnamed nor'easter poured 8 1/4 inches of rain in October, flooding basements in homes throughout the city.

In addition, several of the city's most beloved figures passed away in 1996, including Fr. Cornelius Heery, 72, longtime pastor of Sacred Heart Church in North Quincy, in January; Norfolk County Sheriff Clifford Marshall, 58, in August; and longtime Quincy historian Hobart Holly, 88, in November.

Here's a look back at Quincy's major news stories of 1996:

January

An estimated 30,000 people rang in the New Year at the city's fourth annual First Night Quincy celebration.

Mayor James Sheets outlined a number of goals for 1996-97 during his fourth inaugural address that took place during ceremonies at Quincy High School.

4 P.M. To Midnight Celebration

30,000 Expected At Quincy First Night

The city's fifth annual First Night celebration is expected to attract an estimated crowd of 30,000 people to Quincy Center tonight.

First Night Quincy Committee Chairman Michael Cheney said he and others involved with the project anticipate this year's event to be the biggest and the best the city has ever seen.

"The First Night Committee has been planning this event for the past 12 months," he said. "The very best in entertainment and local arts has been assembled. I guarantee that for all the people who go, there will be at least one attraction they will rave about until next year."

The event drew about 24,000 people last year, Cheney said. He noted that about 500 volunteers have worked to help organize this year's festivities, including those who will work at the event itself.

First Night '97 will include a wide variety of musical, theatrical and performance festivities offered as a safe, inexpensive and alcohol and drug-free celebration for the whole family. Among the highlights will be a 9-foot-high fifth anniversary cake, a First Night World Wide Web site, a laser show, fireworks, live music, a pickup truck contest, ice sculptures and more.

Activities will begin at 4 p.m. and will conclude with a midnight fireworks display over Quincy Center. A First

Normal Business Hours The Time To Use Ward 4 Center Phone

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

We are writing in response to a letter written by Mr. Alfred Benedetti that was printed in the Dec. 12 edition of The Sun.

We would like to briefly explain to you why the phone was removed from the common area of the Ward 4 Community Center. We have one line here at the center which is used for business purposes. In the past, there were two phones on this one line--one in the director's office and one in the common area.

A great majority of the director's work, as you might imagine, is on the phone. Numerous times, seniors organizing the Wednesday Senior Group were attempting to use the phone in the common area while the director was on the phone with community center business. This was extremely disconcerting and the problem was addressed immediately and phone regulations were outlined. At that point, the seniors were told that the phone was in the common area for emergency purposes only. However, the problem persisted.

As well, a new problem began. The seniors were answering the phone when the director was out of the center on community center business. This posed a problem in that usually in the director's absence, all calls are handled by our answering machine which the director checks from other locations, including her home. Therefore, she was missing many calls.

Finally, by a vote of the Board of Directors, the actual telephone was simply removed, leaving only the jack in place. This did not deter the seniors from having their way. They simply brought in their own telephone and plugged it into the jack. The seniors were then informed that this was not the solution, nor was it acceptable to the Board of Directors, as both problems were still persisting. When they refused to cease bringing their own phone, the jack was then removed from the wall. Thus, a phone could no longer be used in the common area.

The seniors were then informed that they could address their concerns before the Board of Directors' and we would be more than willing to hear their case and help rectify the problem. However, no correspondence was ever received by the board despite repeated conversations between the seniors and the director who urged them to address the board.

Most importantly, we would like to respond to the allegations by Mr. Benedetti that the office door is always locked during the Senior Group (Wednesdays from 1 to 4 p.m.). This is simply not true. The director's hours, since February 1996, have been Monday through Wednesday from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Therefore, her door is always open to anyone who should need either the director or use of the phone during those hours. The only time she is not there is during non-business hours (i.e., 3 to 4 p.m. on Wednesday would fall under that category).

In closing, I would like to say that the board understands the need for seniors to have access to a phone in case of emergency. The board, however, does not see the need for a phone in the common area for any other purpose. Our solution is simple: the seniors must meet at the center during regular business hours. This should meet the needs of the seniors who feel uncomfortable without access to a phone.

'97 No Big Election Year

If you like to keep an eye on the city's political scene you aren't going to have a lot to look for in the new year.

Unless James Sheets gets an appointment offer he can't refuse or decides it's time to pack it in and go fishing, there's not going to be a mayoral race--the main event--to get excited over.

SHEETS

Sheets will run for a fifth term and probably be unopposed for the third time. There definitely won't be any major opposition.

Sheets is wearing well and still riding a wave of popularity on his record and easy-going Papa Bear-like style.

No one from the City Council where mayoral dreams are usually born, appears likely to take him on. A nuisance candidate could jump in for whatever reason, however.

Sheets already has made a little history as the only mayoral incumbent ever to have run for re-election unopposed more than once.

While he has done it twice, only two other mayors have had that political honor just once: Thomas Burgin and Francis McCauley.

Completing a fifth term would be another historic accomplishment for him. It would give him 10 years as mayor under the Plan A form of government. That record belongs now to Charles Ross who had nine years.

ROSS

Amelio Della Chiesa was mayor 12 years but only eight under Plan A. He had four years under Plan E when a city manager was the chief executive and the mayor was similar to a city council president and actually a city councillor elected by the city council.

DELLA CHIESA

It doesn't look like there will be too much movement on the political front Election Year '97, without a mayoral race.

There will be two vacant seats: councillor at-large and school committee.

CAHILL

The at-large seat is the one Tim Cahill will be leaving. Cahill takes over as Norfolk County treasurer in January and will not seek re-election to the city council.

Former Mayor Frank McCauley who is now on the school committee will give up that seat to run for Cahill's council seat, leaving a school committee vacancy.

McCAULEY

McCauley, who is expected to make a formal announcement in January, may discourage ward councillors from making a run at-large.

Normally an open at-large seat is opportunity knocking for a ward councillor who wants city-wide exposure. And, of course that, in turn, would open up a ward seat or two.

But McCauley's entrance may convince them to sit tight next year. McCauley returned to the political arena last year after four terms as mayor, winning a two-year school committee term. He ran unopposed.

Will he get a free ride for the city council at-large seat? Good question.

He could.

If McCauley is elected he would not be the first Quincy mayor to return to the City Council. At least two came back: Burgin and Joseph LaRaia.

There's already one prospective candidate looking at the school committee seat McCauley will be leaving: former City Purchasing Agent Bob Denvir.

DENVIR

Denvir, a close friend of McCauley's, says: "Frank's a conservative and I am a conservative. I think the school committee needs a conservative. I am thinking about running."

Now, if Sheets ever did get an offer he couldn't refuse or decided to call it a career, it would turn the political scene upside down next year, opening up all kinds of seats.

You'd have to be careful crossing the street. You could get hit by a speeding candidate.

COUNCILLOR PAUL HAROLD gets the nod for coming up with the "something different" Christmas present this year.

HAROLD

For each member of the City Council staff he had a jar of cranberry chutney he made himself from a recipe from Kilkenny, Ireland.

Harold picked up the recipe over the Thanksgiving holiday while in Ireland to lecture at University College Cork.

He went up to Kilkenny for Thanksgiving dinner with an old friend, former Massachusetts state Rep. John MacGovern and his new bride, Flona Blunden. The recipe was a traditional holiday one from the Blunden's family castle in Kilkenny.

OBSERVATION: Those colorful new signs and awnings at Ryder's Curtain & Drapery store and Expose LTD next door on Hancock St. are eye-catcher. Put a little zip into the downtown area. They are part of the Quincy 2000 sign and facade program that is giving the business districts a needed shot-in-the-arm and face-lift.

A HAPPY, HEALTHY New Year everyone.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1908 real photo postcard view of Lincoln Avenue in what they then knew as Wollaston Heights. This was one of the first sections of Quincy laid out for development by the land companies that saw the potential of Quincy as a suburb of Boston. At one time purchasers of these properties were lured by offers of three years of free transportation from and to Boston on the Old Colony Railroad. This winter scene shows why most homes built then had mud rooms at their entryway.

School Should Be Named After Clifford Marshall

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

In a recent "Sunbeams" column, Bill Draicchio suggested that the new school in Quincy Point be named in honor of the late Sheriff Clifford H. Marshall. I wholeheartedly second the motion.

I have lived in Ward 2 all of my life, and that's a long time. I have had the opportunity to work with many civic leaders and citizens who contributed to the community. I know of no other person more deserving of this honor than Clifford "Kippy" Marshall.

I believe this would be an effective form of recognition. Naming a school in honor of "Kippy" would sincerely show the city's appreciation, saying thank you for a job well done. It is important for a community to show its appreciation to significant people for their achievements and contributions.

"Kippy" Marshall reached many successful professional plateaus: He was a successful Ward 2 councillor who dedicated himself to community improvements in safety and recreation. His contributions continued as he moved on to state representative, all the time remaining true to his wishes and desires to help the community. Finally, "Kippy" became the leading law enforcement officer in the country by serving as the sheriff of Norfolk County.

During his tenure as sheriff, he never forgot Quincy and his constituents of Ward 2. Many of the creative policies he implemented as sheriff met his obligation to insure public safety, provided the opportunity for inmate rehabilitation and simultaneously through community work projects made improvements to community centers and social programs. During his entire time in public office, "Kippy" kept the interest and concerns of the citizens he served as his highest priorities.

In his personal life, "Kippy" was a loving, caring, and compassionate family man. He had what many would consider the model family in his lovely wife, Louise, and his respectful, heartwarming sons, Clifford III, Michael, Paul, and Christopher. "Kippy" Marshall was a dedicated man and a beautiful person.

How does a city choose a person to be memorialized with the naming of a school in honor? If by extraordinary achievement--Sheriff Marshall has done that! If by the exhibition of meaningful dedication--Sheriff Marshall has done that! If by living a life worthy of being called a role model--Sheriff Marshall has done that!

Sheriff Marshall's dedication, sense of duty and his responsibility to civic affairs is a profound legacy. He gave of himself and family to the community. It is time for the community to give something back to the Marshall family and honor his memory by naming our new school the Sheriff Clifford H. Marshall School.

Granite House Thanks Merchants For Assistance

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

This is another in an ongoing series of thank you letters I have written to The Sun acknowledging contributions from area merchants that benefit the Granite House program, especially the residents who live here and the families.

As a long-term residential school and treatment program for adolescents, part of Bay State Community Services Inc., a non-profit human service agency, we operate on a very specific state budget. When we have special needs or particular events happen in the program, we need help.

The Quincy community and surrounding area have helped us repeatedly, and that was the case again Wednesday, Dec. 18 when we had our annual Christmas party for the residents, their families, Department of Mental Health case managers and supervisors, and our staff.

This year our party was a tremendous success, with everyone having a wonderful time, and much of the success was due to these contributions: Star Market at 130 Granite St. donated a $50 gift certificate which was used to purchase a large party platter; Papa Gino's at 100 Granite St., an ongoing supporter of the program, donated four pizzas; The Party Shop in Newton donated all the Christmas paper goods; and the Shop and Save Supermarket in Lowell donated a party platter. We also received a large donation of fruits, vegetables, nuts and frozen turkeys from the Quincy Lodge of Elks at 254 Quarry St.

In times when we read about families having their Christmas presents stolen, it isn't always easy to count our blessings or keep the spirit of Christmas. But all of us involved in the Granite House program have been blessed by the generosity of many merchants and individuals in Quincy and surrounding areas. We are truly grateful.

Mayor Cites Need For More Apartments

By PAUL HAROLD

Jan. 2 - 8
33 Years Ago

In his annual message, Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa said the need for high rise apartments could be the impetus to boost the city's future growth.

He also said that the administration was committed to the multi-million dollar expansion off-street parking in Quincy Center to give merchants in the northerly section of the shopping district the same benefit enjoyed by merchants in the southerly section.

He gave tentative support to the plan by the Sandra Construction Company to build a regional incinerator, noting the solution to the rubbish disposal issue was the "most vexing problem facing the city."

In 1963, Quincy was marking its 75th year as a city.

FILM COMPANY BUILDS VILLAGE AT QUARRY

A $70,000 "shanty" town was under construction at Swingle's Quarry for the filming of the movie, "The Cardinal."

The village represented L'Eclume in Nova Scotia, a quarry town, where the main character was first assigned as a priest.

Under the direction of Otto Preminger, the film crew would be made up of f100-150 person crew.

It was noted that after the shooting was completed, all the buildings would be torn down.

RED SOX PUBLICIST AT LIONS CLUB

Former Red Sox announcer Bill Crowley spoke to the Quincy Lions Club, praising the recent selection of Johnny Pesky as the club's new manager.

He said Ted Williams was considered for the position, but Williams' feelings toward the Boston sportswriters and press conferences in general would make it a difficult assignment.

Cathy's Gourmet French Toast

Now that Christmas is over and we have baked, cooked, defrosted, microwaved and stacked the dishwasher enough to make the MWRA smile, it's time to relax, right?

I know that some of us do not plan anything special for New Year's Day once the excitement of Christmas is over. But I have this great recipe for French toast that we're having that can be prepared the night before.(needless to say that when you read the ingredients you'll have to fall off your diet!)

Our daughter Ann Marie made it for us recently. It was given to her by her co-worker Cathy.

Cathy's French Toast
1 stick butter (or margarine)
3/4 cup brown sugar
1 teaspoon cinnamon
12 slices white bread
5 eggs
1 1/2 cups milk

In a bowl, mix the eggs and milk. Set aside.

Melt the butter and place in a 9 x 13 pan. Mix the brown sugar and cinnamon and add to the bottom of the pan.

Place the slices of bread in the pan. Pour the egg and milk mixture evenly over the bread.

Cover and refrigerate over night. Bake uncovered in a 325-degree oven for 25 minutes. Then increase the oven to 350 degrees and bake for another five minutes. Watch it closely that it doesn't overcook. Cut in squares and serve hot. Happy New Year!

BETTER DIAGNOSIS FOR BREAST CANCER

One of the toughest aspects of deadline, with breast cancer has long been the challenge of diagnosing it as early as possible. How often should women have mammograms? How can unnecessary biopsies, which can often be traumatic in and of themselves, be avoided? A relatively new diagnostic technique involving ultrasound may help make at least some of those answers clearer. When a lump is detected in a woman's breast, a physician can employ an ultrasound image to direct a thin, hollow needle into the lump to extract cells. These cells can then be tested via a staining method similar to the Pap smear, with the results available to the patient within a half-hour. Compared with a traditional biopsy, requiring a larger incision and a day or more of waiting for results, this technique may eventually offer a less invasive, quicker way of evaluating breast lumps for many women

P.S. Tests physicians may recommend to evaluate a breast lump may include mammography and CT scans.

One of the best preventions against all sorts of cancer, recent research reveals, is to eat a healthy diet, exercise regularly, and refrain from smoking. These factors combined greatly exceed the danger posed by environmental factors or even heredity alone. At COMPREHENSIVE MEDICAL CARE, Dr. Lisa Antonelli and I specialize in heart disease. I am affiliated with Quincy Hospital and South Shore Hospitals. Hours by appointment. We're at 700 Congress St., in Quincy. Call me or Dr. Lisa Antonelli with questions at 472-2550.

Last Chance To Nominate For Sun 'Citizen Of Year'

Today (Tuesday) is the last day to submit nominations for The Quincy Sun's 12th annual "Citizen of the Year" award.

Established in 1985, the award recognizes an individual for outstanding community service or a special achievement.

Last year, Joseph McConville was honored for "freely giving a good part of his life to Quincy youth and to his city. His community service includes being a volunteer ice skating instructor and coach for Quincy Youth Hockey Association for 25 years. He has also served the city and his community in many unpaid positions, including chairman of the Quincy Planning Board.

He was selected from 35 nominations submitted by Sun readers.

Sun readers may nominate the person they feel is the most deserving.

After nominations close Tuesday, a judging panel will be selected to make the final choice from the nominations submitted.

A nomination ballot to help the selection process appears below in this week's issue of The Sun.

If you know of someone you would like to see recognized with this award, fill out the ballot and mail it to:

The Quincy Sun
Attn: Citizen of the Year
1372 Hancock St.
Quincy, MA 02169

Nominations should be postmarked no later than today (Tuesday).

Ballots can also be dropped off at The Sun office at the above address today before 3 p.m.

Those submitting nominations should identify themselves. They can also attach to the ballot a letter detailing the reason for the nomination.

Nominees can be someone in elective office, a member of an appointed board, a clergy member, a teacher or school administrator, a police officer or firefighter, someone in the business community, a sports figure or an "unsung" neighbor or friend who has given freely of his or her time to a worthy project or cause.

Past recipients of the award, and the year of their selection, are:

Tony Siciliano, deputy director of Quincy Emergency Management (formerly Civil Defense, 1985.

Ruth Wainwright of Houghs Neck, a long-time community volunteer, 1986.

The late Richard J. Koch Sr., for his work with charitable and community causes over four decades, posthumously in 1987.

Martin Finnegan, retired Quincy high school athletic director, for coordinating the drug and alcohol program Project Impact, 1988.

Clara Yeomans, a long-time environmentalist and charter member of the Quincy Conservation Commission, 1989.

Gerald Gherardi, for his contributions to charities and service organizations over a half century, 1990.

Frank Kearns, for his innumerable volunteer contributions as a community activist and advocate for the city's elderly, homeless, needy and poor, 1991.

Stephen Cantelli, an innovative Quincy public school teacher and advocate of community education, 1992.

Mary Vallier, a founder of Domestic Violence Ended and a longtime aide to battered women and abused children, 1993.

Fr. William McCarthy, retired pastor of St. John's Church and Quincy's beloved "Father Bill," for helping the poor, hungry, homeless and all others in need for many years, 1994.

Those nominated the past 11 years are eligible to be nominated again this year. Since this is not a popularity contest, a person receiving the most nominations will not necessarily be the final winner.

Anyone nominated just once has an equal chance of being the award recipient.

The name of the winner will be announced in The Quincy Sun in January.

"THE BLIZZARD OF '96" in January was not as severe as the infamous Blizzard of '78, but it was still the region's worst storm in years. It dumped about 20 inches of snow on the city, more than enough to bury this car on Avalon Ave. in Quincy Point.

Blizzard Of '96 Dumps 20 Inches Of Snow

(Cont'd from page 3)

Among the plans Sheets announced were improvement of senior citizens' facilities and programs, construction of a new Quincy Point elementary school, renovation of the Thomas Crane Public Library, and continued efforts toward revitalization of the Fore River shipyard and construction of a downtown hotel.

Ward 1 City Councillor Peter Kolson was elected the new council president and School Committeeman Ronald Mariano the new committee vice chairman.

The Massachusetts Water Resources Authority announced a new $104,000 grant agreement between the MWRA and the Quincy Fire Department for backup tunnel safety response services.

Simon Fireman of Quincy donated $500,000 to Quincy Hospital for a new women's imaging center.

High lead levels were found in the water of some homes by Department of Public Works officials, who said the problem could be solved simply be letting faucets run for awhile before drinking.

The Blizzard of '96 dumped about 20 inches of snow on the city and resulted in the declaration of a snow emergency by city officials. It also brought the total cost of snow removal for the winter up to about $650,000.

Freezing temperatures created problems for a live C-SPAN broadcast in Quincy Center about the city's history, forcing the cable television network's program to be cut short.

State Sen. Michael Morrissey was appointed chairman of the powerful Senate Committee on Governmental Relations, and named to several other committees, by new Senate President Thomas Birmingham.

School Supt. Eugene Creedon said the snowy winter could end up resulting in additional school days in April and/or June if students missed more classes because of bad weather.

30 Minutes To Airport, Long Wharf

Commuter Ferry Service From Shipyard To Boston

A high-speed catamaran commuter ferry service that whisks passengers from the Fore River shipyard in Quincy Point to Boston's Logan International Airport and Long Wharf in about 30 minutes is now in operation.

A ribbon-cutting was held recently for the service. Among those in attendance were Lt. Gov. Paul Cellucci, Mayor James Sheets, Massport Deputy Executive Director Charles Yelen, and a number of other elected officials and dignitaries.

The ferry service is the first of its kind in New England.

The catamaran commuter ferry, known as Harbor Express, is being operated by Water Transportation Alternatives Inc. of Quincy. General Dynamics financed the $5 million commuter boat venture.

The service, which runs daily, follows the opening of another commuter boat service in September between Marina Bay and Long Wharf.

Officials have said the two Harbor Express ferries to Logan and Long Wharf each can transport about 150 people per trip.

Jim Acton of Massport, which operates Logan, said people dropped off at Logan board a shuttle bus that stops at all of the airport's terminals before returning to the dock.

It takes about 25 minutes to get to the airport and 35 minutes to get to a terminal, he said.

Acton added that there is no shuttle bus at Long Wharf, which is about 50 yards from the State Street financial district and only a brief walk from the MBTA Red Line.

Although Harbor Express is a subsidiary of General Dynamics--the shipbuilding giant which closed its manufacturing operations in 1996 and sold it to the MWRA--the commuter boat project was originally the idea of two South Shore businessmen: Bill Walker of Duxbury and Mike McGurl of Scituate, a former Quincy resident.

The two men, who are acting as managers of the service, have described it as a fast, environmental-friendly transportation for commuters that should help attract visitors to the U.S. Naval and Shipbuilding Museum at the shipyard whose centerpiece is the Quincy-built heavy cruiser USS Salem. They hope to have around 600,000 board the service annually.

Departures to Logan take place every half hour from 5 a.m. to 9:30 p.m. on week days (Friday nights until 11:30 p.m.) and 6 a.m. to 9:30 p.m. on weekends.

Runs from Quincy to Long Wharf begin at 6:15 a.m. and depart roughly every 35 minutes until 9:15 p.m., Monday through Thursday. On Friday, the last boat departs for Boston at 10:45 p.m. Boats run less frequently on Saturdays and Sundays.

The service operates every day except Thanksgiving and Christmas.

Cost is $10 one way and $20 round trip. Bulk pricing is also available.

Parking off the Rte. 3A rotary is available at $2 for the day and $6 overnight.

The lot is next to the USS Salem.

senior citizens' van service known as Transvan could begin operating in the summer.

The Quincy License Board voted to close the Point Pub in Quincy Point for 21 days and placed it on probation for two years for seven violations involving drugs.

Raymondi proposed building a new Quincy Point elementary school at Victory Park near the site of the former Pollard School. The previous September, he had proposed a different location but changed his mind after it appeared the first site might be needed for the Fore River shipyard revitalization plan.

Quincy 2000 hired Sasaki Associates of Watertown to devise a master plan for the revitalization of the city's downtown shopping district.

Department of Public Works Commissioner David Colton announced that $150,000 was available for the city to begin work on a Faneuil Hall-type marketplace in Quincy Center that had been proposed a month earlier.

PCC Inc., a subsidiary of Roche Bros. Supermarkets, asked the Quincy License Board for a beer and wine license at the Roche Bros. store scheduled to open in Quincy Point in May. The board continued the hearing until a later date.

Deaths in February included: Joseph L. O'Brien, 90, former Quincy educator and mayoral executive secretary; Edna P. Shirley, 103, active in Eastern Star groups; Joseph P. Harte, 31, assistant football coach; Herbert F. Rourke, 72, and Robert Fenby Jr., 92, former Quincy deputy fire chiefs; Laroy C. "Curly" Rogers, 94, legendary North Quincy High School coach; Eric Chen, 5.

March

Quincy voters lined up with those in the state and region in the Yankee Primary to give Sen. Bob Dole of Kansas a victory toward the Republican Presidential nomination.

Van About Town, a new senior citizen van shuttle service, kicked off with a ribbon-cutting ceremony at City Hall.

Mayor James Sheets said he favored hiring a special consultant to help a task force develop plans to improve safety conditions for city workers. His announcement came in the wake of a Feb. 15 rape at Quincy High School.

Tackey Chan, 22, was named the new chairman of the Quincy Asian American Association.

Greek shipbuilder Sotirios Emmanouil said he hoped to begin building oil tankers at the Fore River shipyard by May 1997. However, he was still waiting to secure $230 million in federal loan guarantees necessary to bring his plan to fruition.

Jo-An Thomas of Hull was hired by Quincy 2000 to serve as the city's new tourism director.

Ward 2 City Councillor Daniel Raymondi said he wanted the council to amend a special permit to prevent the sale of alcohol at a planned Roche Bros. Supermarket in Quincy Point.

Although the License Board subsequently denied the liquor license request, Raymondi continued to pursue the permit change, saying developers should be "up front" about their intentions to sell alcohol at a site. No liquor license had been requested prior to the granting of the Roche Bros. special permit in 1994.

Quincy 2000 unveiled a "strategic plan" to make Quincy a major tourist attraction.

The City Council passed an amendment to a city ordinance making it more difficult for "adult" (strip) clubs to open in the city. The change constituted that such clubs could only operate under certain business zonings that club owners likely would find undesirable.

School Supt. Eugene Creedon announced the city would more than likely be reimbursed for 63 percent of the construction cost of a planned elementary school in Quincy Point. Creedon made his comments after receiving notification from the state.

John Regan of the state Office of Economic Affairs told the City Council that Emmanouil's plan was the best chance the city had to bring shipbuilding back to Quincy.

The city's police patrolmen settled on a new contract offering them an 11 percent raise over three years, the same pay hike given to most Quincy employees.

Daniel Flynn of Daniel J. Flynn & Co. was elected president of the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association.

QCBPA members expressed reservations about a proposal by Raymondi that new city projects measuring 5,000 square feet or more require a special permit, saying it might make businesses reluctant to open in the city.

Raytheon Co. donated $8,000 to the Quincy Fire Department for a new "Jaws of Life" apparatus for the West Quincy Fire Station.

Bernard Cardinal Law named Rev. John "Jack" O'Brien, who was splitting his time between duties in Salem and Boston, the new pastor of Sacred Heart Church in North Quincy. He replaced Rev. Cornelius Heery, who died of a heart attack in January.

Cardinal Law also appointed Rev. Daniel Graham, pastor of St. Joseph's Church in Quincy Point,

John A. "Tony" Diaz, wanted for the 1993 shooting death of Dawn Brown of North Quincy, was arrested in the South American nation of Guyana. He promptly hired a prominent Guyanan lawyer to fight deportation from the country in order to avoid first-degree murder charges in the United States.

Joseph F. McConville Jr. was honored at a special reception as The Quincy Sun's 1995 "Citizen of the Year" for his outstanding community service.

City officials learned the city would receive $245,183 in state funds for snow and ice removal expenditures. Originally, the state had promised an amount of $175,000.

Deaths in March included: Mary R. Dolan, 31, retired North Quincy High School teacher; C. Paul D'Angelo, 82, manager of area recreational clubs; Peter J. Houston, 59, Massachusetts Rate Setting Commission employee and former basketball star; M. Audrey Hayes, 58, co-founder of Quincy Youth Hockey and State Street Bank credit buyer; Stephen T. Cady, 32, business system analyst at State Street Bank.

April

The City Council unanimously passed a resolution supporting a plan by Greek shipbuilder Sotirios Emmanouil to revitalize the Fore River shipyard. Meanwhile, Emmanouil continued to wait for federal loan guarantees that would make the deal possible.

At a City Council public hearing, a majority of residents spoke in favor of a proposal by Ward 2 Councillor Daniel Raymondi for an ordinance change making it mandatory for those seeking special permits to be "up front" about their intent to sell liquor. The action came after Roche Bros. Supermarkets requested such a license more than a year after its permit was granted.

Mayor James Sheets said senior housing, not affordable housing or a homeless shelter, was what he envisioned at the soon-to-be-vacated Squantum Gardens and Naval Terrace in Squantum.

Councillor Timothy Cahill announced his candidacy for Norfolk County treasurer.

Raymondi introduced a proposed zoning change affecting all new structures of 5,000 square feet or more in the city, other than single-family homes. Under the proposal, all such projects would require a permit from the Planning Board.

Quincy 2000 and downtown business officials announced plans to hire a "Quincy Center manager" to address marketing and related issues.

Gov. William Weld predicted the shipyard would reopen and become "a major player in the world shipbuilding market."

Quincy College announced it might enter into a partnership program with other local institutions that would allow its students to pursue four-year degrees.

The Quincy Housing Authority celebrated its 50th anniversary.

A four-alarm blaze at the former Howard Johnson candy factory in Wollaston caused about $100,000 damage.

Sheets said the Fiscal Year 1997 budget would probably top the $135.8 million FY96 budget by about $2.5-$3 million.

John McDuff resigned as chairman of the Quincy Republican City Committee to become head of the new Quincy Conservative Committee. Brian Glennon II, his GOP vice chairman, replaced him as head of the Republican Committee.

A majority of those at a City Council public hearing voiced opposition to a proposed affiliation between Quincy Hospital and Carney Hospital in Dorchester. Councillors said they would only support the action if Quincy remained a public institution.

John Anthony "Tony" Diaz, accused in the 1993 shooting death of Dawn Brown of North Quincy, was arraigned in Norfolk Superior Court in Dedham on a first-degree murder charge. Diaz had been living in the South American nation of Guyana under an assumed identity at the time of his arrest.

Sheets announced he would send a bond package, which would include $10 million for a new elementary school in Quincy Point, to the City Council for its consideration in May.

The mayor said the city was considering participating in the state's Downtown Investment Districts legislation, which allows a city or town to organize an economic group that oversees that community's downtown area.

Deaths in April included: Elio A. Moscardelli,

Winterproofing A Home Can Save You Money

Winterproofing a home can help a thrifty homeowner save some money in energy expenses and spring repairs.

The South Shore Association of Realtors (SSAR) offers the following winterproofing tips:

•Heavy rain fall and wind storms take the leaves off trees and often deposits them in your gutters. This not only puts stress on the gutters, but prevents runoff which might cause water damage to inside ceilings and roof damage when ice builds up under the shingles. Make sure you clean out the gutters and take note if they are not draining properly.

•Check the outside casings of your windows and doors to make sure they are sealed, and re-caulk if necessary. Also, check seams where siding meets windows and doors, and fill eroded joints with mortar to keep out air, water and snow.

•Make an appointment to have your chimney cleaned by a trained professional. The build-up of creosote is a dangerous fire hazard and a sticky flue trap lets out your home's heat.

•Weather stripping on the inside of windows and doors will offer protection against losing heat during the cold months.

•Buy safety plugs for electrical outlets not in use. These tiny avenues of air travel lose more home heat then you might think.

•Check the insulation in your attic and crawl spaces. Replace or add insulation if necessary and make sure the attic is properly ventilated so the insulation will not prematurely deteriorate. Heating (or cooling) your home can consume up to 70 percent of your energy costs, so maintain the insulation and save real money on your monthly heating bills this winter.

•Cover your hot water pipes with foam rubber encasements to prevent the pipes from freezing and to minimize the cost of hot water.

•Have the appropriate professional check your home heating system each fall to replace filters, fan blades and worn belts and to vacuum dust from the blower.

•Hammer down siding nails that have "popped" during the hot weather and replace cracked or rotted boards to prevent snow and ice build-up underneath the siding surface.

"Now, relax with a hot apple cider and a blazing fire," says SSAR President Richard Coughlin. "Winter in New England is one of the most beautiful seasons of the year."

Undefeated Presidents Finding Ways To Win

By LIAM FITZGERALD

Winners of its first three games by a total of six points, the undefeated Quincy High School boys basketball team tangled with host Barnstable Friday before participating in the Ram Classic Tournament at Marshfield over the weekend.

Results of the Barnstable game and the tournament were not available as of press time.

The Presidents return to action Friday night at 7 when they host Plymouth South in the annual QHS homecoming game. Quincy basketball alumni are welcome to attend the game and the coffee hour to follow the game in the QHS gym.

Next Monday, Jan. 6 at 7 p.m., Quincy hosts the Taunton Tigers, one of the top teams in the state.

In a 63-62 nail-biter over Weymouth, Quincy was paced by senior forward Bob Walsh, who scored 21 points and collected 10 rebounds.

"The difference for us in this game was having the big people take control," said Quincy coach John Franceschini. "Bobby (Walsh) had a solid second half, scoring 15 of his 21 points. Geoff King scored only four points, but he did a great job controlling the boards at both ends of the floor."

Freshman Dan Kelly chipped in with a career-high 16 points and solid defensive play while QHS seniors Carmen Lorenzano and Brad Smith had nine points apiece.

Quincy snared another close, hard-fought triumph, downing Silver Lake, 73-70, in double overtime.

Leading the way again was Walsh, who scored a team-high 21 points. Lorenzano played a solid game at the point guard position, scoring 18 points for the Presidents.

The difference in the game, said Franceschini, was the accurate free throw shooting by Quincy in the later stages of the contest.

"It's been the difference in all our games," he said. "Against Silver Lake, we shot 78 percent from the line, while they only shot 64 percent.

"We hit seven of our last eight free throws, with four different players making the shots. In crunch time, we're doing the right things, making free throws and playing very well down the stretch."

Another key to the early-season success is the Presidents' depth, which comes into play when the game is on the line and their opponent is worn out.

"I think our numbers are helping us, since we're playing 10 people and getting contributions from all of them," said Franceschini. "We seem to be a little fresher at the ends of games, which has been one of the main reasons we've gotten off to such a good start."

South Shore YMCA Awarded $50,000 Alden Trust Grant

The South Shore YMCA in Quincy has been awarded a $50,000 grant from The George I. Alden Trust, a Worcester-based independent, philanthropic foundation.

Created in 1912, Alden Trust makes grants to worthy institutions to help fund building or renovation projects, primarily for the benefit of youth and education.

The South Shore Y requested Alden Trust funds for its capital campaign, a $2.5 million fundraising campaign to raise money for building renovations and improvements to better serve Quincy division program participants at the 79 Coddington St. facility.

"The Trust is especially supportive of institutions that can do the greatest good to the greatest number of beneficiaries, favoring educational, Christian and humanitarian efforts," said Ralph Yohe, president of the South Shore YMCA.

To date, the South Shore Y has raised $2 million in capital campaign pledges.

Ross Paces North's Balanced Attack

Coming off a last-second, one-point loss to Plymouth South and a win over Weymouth, the North Quincy High School boys basketball team participated in the Holiday Scholastic Tournament in Stoughton over the weekend.

Results of the tournament were not available as of press time.

Last night at 7, the Red Raiders faced its toughest challenge of the season, a Taunton squad which averages an astounding 93 points per game.

Friday night at 7, North Quincy hosts Old Colony League foe Barnstable. Next Wednesday, Jan. 8 at 7 p.m., NQ welcomes visiting Bridgewater-Raynham.

In a 69-68 loss to Plymouth South, North let a 20-point halftime lead slip away and lost when PS senior co-captain Skip Lucey nailed a three-pointer at the buzzer.

"They (Plymouth South) shot the lights out in the second half," said NQ coach Ted Stevenson. "Three of their kids were hitting NBA threes, not high school or college threes. We also turned the ball over a lot in the second half, which didn't help."

Leading the way for NQ was Brian Ross, who scored a season-high 25 points. Ross is the Red Raiders' top scorer, averaging 20 points a game, along with 9.4 rebounds a contest. Chris Erler added 13 for the Red Raiders.

In North's 57-52 come-from-behind triumph over Weymouth, Ross collected 15 points and 14 rebounds to pace the Red Raiders.

Trailing by nine at the half, NQ implemented a man-to-man defense and started converting on the offensive end, said Stevenson.

"Instead of turning the ball over, we were putting it in the basket and keeping them (Weymouth) from scoring," he said. "I was impressed with the way we fought back and how strong we played defensively in the second half."

Contributing to NQ's balanced attack were Erler (14 points), Matt Bromley (10 points, 11 rebounds) and Brian Doyle (10 points).

SHOCK TREATMENT

If all four of a car's shock absorbers have been in service for many miles and one shock goes bad, it is recommended that all four shocks be replaced in the belief that the others are also soon doomed to failure. Original-equipment shocks are, of course, suitable replacements, but a switch to heavy-duty replacement shocks will result in a firmer ride and longer life. In older automobiles, an upgrade to gas or air shocks will help compensate for a sagging suspension. However, if one corner of the car sags severely, a car owner will likely have to look beyond shocks to spring replacement, along with replacement of the companion spring on the other side. As with shocks, springs should be replaced in pairs. And, those who frequently carry heavy loads in their cars, trucks, or vans may find that self-leveling shocks will work best for heavy loads.

When a load lowers suspension height, self-leveling shocks convert the vehicle's bouncing motion into a lifting force. This type of shock also automatically and independently compensates if one side sags lower than the other.

Girls Basketball

Red Raiders Claim Two League Victories

Fresh off two victories over Old Colony League foes, North Quincy High School's girls basketball team hosted its Christmas Tourney over the weekend.

Results of the tourney were not available as of press time.

Last night (Monday) at 7, the Red Raiders hosted OCL opponent Taunton.

Upcoming games for the Red Raiders include Friday at 7 p.m. at Barnstable, Monday, Jan. 6 at 7 p.m. against Wellesley and Wednesday, Jan. 8 at 7 p.m. at Bridgewater-Raynham.

"That game at Barnstable is going to be a tough one," said NQ coach Ken Panaro. "But we're playing better as a team, so that will help our chances."

In North Quincy's 57-29 triumph over Plymouth South, senior point guard Kerry Ginty paced the Red Raiders with 15 points.

"Kerry ran a good strong floor," said Panaro. "She and the other girls are playing with a lot more confidence and are a lot less nervous out there. Everyone is contributing, including the sophomores who are new to the varsity."

Sophomores Kristen Bowes, Lauren Luizzo and Kim Huerth made solid contributions in the NQ victory. Bowes scored 11 points and Luizzo and Huerth impressed Panaro with their defensive skills.

"I'm extremely happy with how Lauren played," he said. "She made no mistakes and played good, solid defense. Kim made four or five steals in the fourth, as did Kristen, which is nice to see from our young players."

In a hard-fought 43-37 win over Weymouth, North's Dawn Kohler led the way with 16 points. Junior Laurie Flynn added 10 points for the visiting Red Raiders.

"It was nip and tuck, back and forth, all the way," said Panaro. "We didn't shoot too well from the floor, but we did from the free throw line, which was the reason we won it."

After building a slim lead, North was able to hold off the Wildcats, thanks in large part to Ginty, who made seven of her seven attempts from the free throw line.

Under new coach Cindy White, the NQ freshman girls squad is 3-0, while the JV team is 1-2 under coach Doug MacFarlane.

Wrestling

'Stacked' Silver Lake Too Much For Raiders

Following a loss to a powerful Silver Lake squad in its season opener, the North Quincy High School wrestling team competed in the 16-team Marshfield Tourney this past weekend.

Results of the tourney were not available as of press time.

Facing a Silver Lake team that NQ wrestling coach Mike Mauriello called "stacked," the inexperienced and undermanned Red Raiders impressed their coach despite coming out on the losing end.

"They (Silver Lake) have five kids with legitimate shots at Sectional championships," said Mauriello. "But I'm pleased with how our kids wrestled. They all scored against their opponents and wrestled well against a very talented squad."

Mauriello, joined this year by assistant coach John Kolton, welcomes five new faces to a young Red Raiders squad: seniors Brian Walsh (171 pounds) and Jeff Chu (103), junior Man Kit So (152) and freshmen Rick Loughmiller (125) and James Martell (130).

Returning to the team are seniors Sean O'Toole (140) for his fourth year, co-captain Jose Villanueva (145) for his third year, and co-captain Neil Costa (160) for his second year. Junior Matt Kane (103) and sophomore Chris Barra (135) are back for their second seasons.

High school wrestling fans may notice four weight classes missing. The reason for that, said Mauriello, is because the number of participants in the program has decreased.

"Unfortunately, we're going to have to forfeit four weight classes, which means losing 24 points every match," he said. "The forfeits will hurt us in the dual meets, but won't in tournaments, because those are more of individual events."

While he is not making any predictions, Mauriello feels the Red Raiders will have a successful season despite the team's lack of experience and depth.

"I expect a lot of good performances from our kids," he said. "I think we'll be good this year. They're all hard workers who go through an intense practice every day.

"Every kid wants to do it; they're all serious about wrestling and getting better as the season goes on. The inexperience will hurt us during the season, but the kids' tenacity should make up for that a lot of the times."

Quincy Still Looking For First Triumph

Seeking its first win following three losses, the Quincy High School girls basketball team participated in this past weekend's Ram Classic Tournament at Marshfield.

Results of the tournament were not available as of press time.

Quincy returns to action Friday at 7 p.m. at Plymouth South, then hosts Barnstable Saturday at 12:30 p.m. Monday, Jan. 6 at 7 p.m., the Presidents travel to Taunton to battle the Tigers.

In a 67-30 loss to Silver Lake, the Presidents could not contain junior phenom Marche Strickland, who poured in a game-high 30 points for the Lakers. Junior guard Kerry Duffy led Quincy with eight points.

"Silver Lake is a very good team, and they have that outstanding player in Strickland, so I knew that was going to be a tough game to win," said Quincy coach Bob Noble.

Weymouth's balanced attack proved to be too much for Quincy in a 64-35 Wildcats victory.

"I was disappointed with the way we played against Weymouth," said Noble. "I expected us to come out and play better, but it just didn't happen. We got down 15-0 early and they (Weymouth) were able to push the lead up more in the second half."

Despite their rough start, Noble is confident the Presidents will improve as the season progresses, given their strong work ethic.

"The girls work hard every day, trying to get better," he said. "They all come to practice with good, positive attitudes, ready to work on their games and help the team improve. As a coach, you can't ask for much for more than that at this point.

"I enjoy being around them and I truly believe we'll start being in our share of games and winning our share of games before it's all said and done. Our day will come. I know that, and the girls know that."

Track

North Boys, Girls Open With Wins Over Taunton

The North Quincy High School girls and boys indoor track teams began their seasons with victories over Old Colony League foe Taunton.

Leading the North boys to a 46-45 victory in its season opener were Matt Quinn (mile and 4x4 relay), Joe Linskey (100-yard dash, 4x4 relay) and Jimmy Wan (two-mile and 4x4 relay).

In the NQ girls' 48-42 triumph, senior Casey Ngo (dash in 6.3), sophomore Kellie Johnston (300 in 42.6), junior Jasmine Gonzalez (600 in 1:47.9), sophomore Shirley Wu (two-mile in 14:54.5) and senior Wingsze Yuen (shotput of 32'3 1/2") all posted victories.

North clinched the victory with a win in the 4xLap relay as the team of Ngo, Johnston, Gonzalez and sophomore Corinne Sullivan raced to a first-place finish in 1:35.43.

At the Brandeis Invitational, NQ's Gonzalez took third in the 500 meters, while junior Sarah Beston (high jump) and sophomore Angela Scott (triple jump) took fourths.

North Quincy competed in the Brown Invitational this past weekend and take on Plymouth South Friday at Taunton at 4 p.m.

Hockey

Haidul Nets Hat Trick As Quincy Romps Over B-R

Following its third win of the season, the Quincy High School hockey team tangled with host Plymouth South yesterday (Monday) at noon. Results of the game were not available as of press time.

The Presidents return to action Saturday at 7:30 p.m. when they battle host Falmouth. Monday, Jan. 6 at 3 p.m., Quincy welcomes visiting Abington and Wednesday, Jan. 8 at 6:40 p.m., Barnstable pays Quincy a visit.

In an 8-2 romp over host Bridgewater-Raynham, Quincy's Chris Haidul led the scoring parade with a hat trick. Sophomore center Joe Vallatini played the role of set-up man, collecting four assists.

Senior wing Scott Cooper (two goals, one assist), senior center Mark Glynn (one goal, one assist) also contributed offensively, as did junior wing Bob Hall and junior defenseman Derek McTomney, both with one assist each.

Quincy goalie Chris Burns made 18 saves in recording the victory.

Injuries, Lack Of Scoring Plague North

Coming off three recent losses, the North Quincy High School hockey team looked to get back on the winning track last Saturday at Silver Lake. The Red Raiders were also scheduled to host New Bedford yesterday (Monday) at 6:40 p.m.

Results of both games were not available as of press time.

This Saturday at 7:50 p.m., the Red Raiders host Taunton. Next Wednesday, Jan. 8 at 7:40 p.m., North Quincy visits Weymouth.

In an 8-3 loss to Chelmsford, North fell behind 5-0 after one period and was unable to make up the difference. Netting goals for the Red Raiders were Rob Winter, John Barron and Mike Sullivan.

"You can't spot a team five goals and expect to win the game," said NQ coach Tom Benson. "We played even the last two periods, but. we just haven't been able to put three good periods together."

Earlier in the week, North peppered the goaltender from Barnstable but could not get on the board in a tough 1-0 defeat.

"That loss really hurt, because we outshot them by about 30 and just couldn't score," said Benson. "That's been one of our main problems this year, not putting the puck in the net."

Injuries to key players have also played a role in the Red Raiders' lack of success early in the season. Senior defenseman Tim Wood, a co-captain, went down with a broke ankle in the first game of the season.

"Timmy's injury killed us defensively, because we don't have a lot of experience there," said Benson.

Wood's teammate Bill Barron suffered a sprained ankle in a loss to Falmouth, though Benson expected him to play against Silver Lake.

A Thought For The Week

HAPPY NEW YEAR! . . . What Sort of year will your brand new New Year be? It can and should be a better year, of course. Why? Because you can make it so! How? It's really simple and easy! By self-improvement. . .

Since individuals make up the whole of society, you simply start with No. 1 - yourself. . . You either add desirable or subtract undesirable traits and objectives. You know what they are - better than anyone else- Difficult? Indeed not - not if you really want a Happy New Year. . .

How can you do it? Just try to be a little bit better. Have good thoughts, do more good deeds, think more of others - less of self. You will have a better year. You can't miss! When someone says - as we are saying right now - "Have a Happy New Year." . . . Reply, "I certainly will." It's a grand feeling. . . a great way to start a Happy New Year! . . .

Accent On Quincy Center

By BRUCE ARONS
Quincy Center Development Coordinator

A Unique And Special Partnership

The City of Quincy has something unique and special -- an exceptionally strong and active public/private partnership working to revitalize Quincy Center.

This partnership brings together for the improvement of downtown our state and local government's financial and technical assistance and the business community's financial resources and entrepreneurial spirit.

In November of this year, the City Council's enthusiastic endorsement of the Quincy 2000's Corporation's Quincy Center Action Plan was a major step forward in assuring continued public/private reinvestment and development within the downtown.

The partnership of city government, property and business owners, residents and institutions acknowledges the downtown's value to the city.

The Quincy Center Action Plan identifies $22-30 million in proposed public sector improvements (construction of the concourse, expansion of the MBTA and Rossway parking garages, signage, lighting, and open space) necessary for Quincy Center's revitalization during the next 3-5 years.

These public investments are directly linked to projected private sector development projects worth $98-127 million (office, retail, hotel, residential and parking) in Quincy Center during the same period.

The Quincy 2000 Corporation, the city's economic development agency, is committed to facilitating these public and private investments and to provide leadership by developing programs and projects that bring new capital investment and successful economic development to the downtown business district.

My challenge, as Quincy Center development coordinator, is to ensure the community recognizes and takes advantage of these developments. I have visited and studied several other downtown main streets throughout Massachusetts and the contrast to Quincy's downtown is startling: Quincy Center is improving.

Economic development is a process that requires a cooperative effort on the part of merchants, property owners, residents and local government. Quincy 2000 is strengthening this partnership!

We have been successful in our efforts to date, can be proud of our current achievements, and I am looking forward to many new and exciting accomplishments in Quincy Center in 1997.

WORK Inc. Receives State Certification

WORK Inc., one of Massachusetts' largest and most successful non-profit providers of employment, vocational training, residential, and educational programs for individuals with disabilities, was recently awarded the highest level of agency certification by the Massachusetts Department of Mental Retardation (DMR).

WORK Inc. is one of only a few large human service agencies in Massachusetts to receive the ranking, a full two-year certification.

DMR's certification process, known as the Quality Enhancement Survey Tool (QUEST), began in January 1994 to measure and certify the quality of services provided to consumers at public and private agencies. QUEST measures six quality of life areas: rights and dignity, individual control, community membership, relationships, personal growth and accomplishments, and personal well-being including health, safety and economic security, by interviewing and observing consumers, meeting with staff, reviewing records, and conducting program site inspections.

Hank Cheney, president of WORK Inc. said, "We are extremely proud to have received this prestigious ranking. This certification affirms that we are achieving our goal of positively impacting the lives of all the consumers that we support."

WORK Inc. is headquartered in Quincy and has a division in Boston. Recognized for over 25 years of pioneering efforts in community-based programs for individuals with disabilities, the agency serves over 1,000 people with disabilities daily, in a variety of employment and residential programs.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING
ORDER NO. 96-072 December 23, 1996

The Quincy City Council will hold a PUBLIC HEARING on Monday evening, January 13, 1997 at 7 p.m. in the City Hall Council Chamber, 1305 Hancock Street, on the following:

Be it ordained by the City Council of the City of Quincy, that the revised ordinance of the City of Quincy 1993, as amended are further amended as follows:

In Chapter 17:04, Zoning, add a new section 17:04:250 to read:

That the City Council add a new zoning control procedure to be known as SITE PLAN REVIEW which shall require a permit for (1) all multi-family or apartment development in excess of twelve units; and (2) all development where the area of any new structure is 10,000 square feet or more excluding single-family homes and related accessory structures.

Purpose:

The purpose of the SITE PLAN REVIEW permit procedure is to ensure: (1) That the design and construction of developments will not create a detrimental impact to neighborhoods or to the environment;

(2) That development will be in harmony with surrounding areas;

(3) Compliance with all the requirements set forth in the Zoning Ordinances of the City of Quincy will appropriate city agency review and public input;

(4) Appropriate safeguards and impact mitigation for all such development.

Permit Granting Authority:

The permit granting authority shall be the Planning Board. This will insure departmental review by the Planning Department and incorporation into the final development plans all appropriate City Agency recommendations. The permit shall be a written authorization which will include the conditions and special conditions deemed necessary and appropriate by the Planning Board, acting as the Permit Granting Authority (PGA) and shall be recorded and enforced as Special Permits issued by the Zoning Board of Appeals.

Procedure:

This procedure for the PGA shall be in accordance with the provisions of Chapter 40A, and Article I, Section 15 of the Revised Zoning Ordinances, the same as required for a Special Permit. In order to receive a Permit under Site Plan Review a majority vote of the PGA shall be required.

Provisions for Development Plans:

Site Plan(s) and profile drawings of the proposed development signed and stamped by professional Land Survey and/or registered professional Engineer shall be filed with the PGA. The Plan(s) and profile shall show both existing and proposed:

(a) access and egress to and from the site;
(b) lot lines and easements, if any;
(c) building and structures;
(d) topography with appropriate contours;
(e) surface water bodies, wetlands and area subject to the 100 year flood evaluation;
(f) soil profiles, if required;
(g) landscape features, walls, walks and lighting;
(h) landscaping proposed as determined appropriate and consistent with the screening required by section 84;
(i) location of parking areas required by Section 73 and facilities for internal vehicular and pedestrian circulation;
(j) site drainage and supporting data, if required;
(k) location of site utilities and supporting date, required;
(l) loading facilities as required by Section 76;
(m) traffic study, if required by the PGA, given the proposed development of the site and the expected traffic impact; and
(n) architectural drawing of the proposed building(s) and structure(s), if required by the PGA.

Criteria for Approval:

The PGA shall ensure that there will be reasonable use of the site consistent with its underlying zoning subject to the following criteria:

1. Adequate capacity of local streets to accommodate traffic to be generated by the proposed use. In addressing this criteria, the PGA may consider projections of increased traffic volumes due to the proposed development and its impact on existing streets and the ability of the applicants to mitigate the traffic impacts at the site and affected adjacent streets and ways;

(2) Adequacy of the public infrastructure to service the area and the immediate vicinity of the site. The public infrastructure includes the city's water, sewer and public safety protection;

(3) Protection of adjoining properties against serious detrimental uses by providing for adequate site drainage, offensive sounds and sights and landscaped screening and buffers;

(4) Convenience and safety of vehicular and pedestrian movement within the site and location of driveways and adjacent streets;

(5) Adequacy of parking and loading arrangements; and

(6) Adequacy of the methods for disposal of water, sewerage and refuse and other wastes resulting from the permitted use on the site.

Emerald Isle Bancorp Inc. Announces Stock, Cash Dividends

The Board of Directors of Emerald Isle Bancorp Inc. recently voted to declare a stock dividend of 25 percent of its outstanding common shares and to pay a $0.07 per share quarterly cash dividend.

The cash dividend will be paid on all post split common shares outstanding. Both the stock dividend and the cash dividend will be paid on Feb. 3, 1997 to stockholders of record as of Jan. 22, 1997.

Mark Osborne, chairman of the board, president and CEO said, "We are pleased with the company's operating results through 1996. The continued improvements in core earnings enable the Board of Directors to take this action at this time for the benefit of our stockholders.

"Through Sept. 30, 1996, total assets increased by 21.4 percent, earning assets increased by 21.3 percent, loans outstanding grew by 23.0 percent and total deposits grew by 15.5 percent. We believe the stock dividend will, over time, further improve the liquidity in the marketplace for our common shares and the effective 25 percent increase in our cash dividend will enhance the current return to our shareholders."

On Feb. 1, 1997, one new share of stock will be issued for each four shares of stock owned by the shareholders of record. Shareholders who are entitled to fractional shares will be paid in cash, an amount equal to the value of their fractional share interest at the NASDAQ closing price on the business day prior to the record date. The stock certificate for the new shares issued will be automatically mailed to all shareholders of record or credited to their dividend reinvestment account.

The Emerald Isle Bancorp Inc., a bank holding company, is the parent company of The Hibernia Savings Bank. Its executive office is located at 730 Hancock St., Quincy.

30,000 Expected At Quincy First Night

Night Store, which will offer First Night buttons, mugs, T-shirts, sweatshirts and other souvenirs will be open at three locations: Presidents Place, the International Food Festival at the Quincy Center for Technical Education (Vo-Tech School) and outside tents.

Cheney said the reason for the store is not to make a profit on First Night, but to help cover the estimated cost of $130,000 of holding the event.

No vendors will be allowed at the celebration.

First Night '97 will be spread out over more than 20 locations throughout Quincy Center. Performance sites include Adams Academy, South Shore YMCA, Quincy High School Theater, Bethany Congregational Church, United First Parish Church (basement level), New City Hall Atrium, New City Hall Second Floor Conference Room, City Council Chambers at Old City Hall, Presidents Place Atrium, National Park Service at Presidents Place, Quincy High School Girls Gym, Tent One (outside), Bank of Boston, Woodward School, United First Church Sanctuary, Center for Technical Education Gymnasium, Central Baptist Church, Presidents Place Window, Central Baptist Church Hall, and the Thomas Crane Public Library (upstairs and downstairs).

New attractions this year will include a 9-foot-high First Night Fifth Anniversary Cake created by Montilio's Bakery and the First Night World Wide Web site at Computer Workshop on Temple Street. Also new is the First Night Quincy booklet that describes the event's attractions and locations in detail and provides an event planner in the back for those who want to choose their favorite events before arriving at the celebration.

Cheney noted that the booklet was distributed to every household in Quincy and selected areas of several nearby towns including Braintree, Weymouth and others.

Returning favorites include the laser light show sponsored by Stop & Shop and Merrill Lynch, the International Food Festival, the Pickup Truck Float Contest with prizes of $1,000, $500 and $250 for the most creatively-decorated trucks (for information visit Lappen's Discount Auto Parts at 671 Southern Artery or call Bill Morrill at 773-1439 or the First Night Office at 376-1071) and the midnight fireworks display sponsored by Roche Bros. Supermarkets.

Cheney said the best spot to view the fireworks is from the Coddington Street area near the Center for Technical Education, South Shore YMCA and Thomas Crane Public Library.

Entertainment also will be provided by a number of musical and theatrical groups at the various sites. A number of "roving entertainers" including clowns and jugglers will be outdoors throughout the night, while other activities will include face painting, hat making, karoake and more.

All events are handicapped accessible. Free parking will be available at Presidents Place, Ross Parking Garage, Hancock Parking Lot and other designated lots. Restrooms will be open at a number of the sites.

Neither smoking nor drinking is permitted at any of the First Night locations.

Other First Night sponsors include the City of Quincy, Signature Signs, Arabella Insurance, Shaw's Supermarkets, Fallon Ambulance Service, the Flatley Co., Quirk Auto Dealership, Tax Shop, South Coastal Career Development, Avalon, International House of Pancakes, Granite City Electric, Ahern Communications, Colonial Savings Bank, Atty. David Mahoney, Fleet Bank, National Fire Protection Association, Aslian Sea Foods, Quincy College, Everlasting Engraving, Boston Gas and Weymouth Savings Bank.

Also, Curry Hardware, Raytheon, Boston Gear, Eastern Nazarene College, Key Realty, Wollaston Business Association, Continental Cablevision, Dr. Allan Yacubian, Bernie's Formal Shop, State Street Bank, Bank of Braintree, Derbes Bros., Presidential Camera, Dickinson Development, South Shore Plaza, Dunkin' Donuts, BFI Waste Services, Best Western Adams Inn, Quincy 2000, Massachusetts Cultural Council, VHS Transportation Co., IBEW Local 103, Harbor Express and Logan Healthcare Management Group.
